We can't do much with a "JUST WON'T GROWER"

Who KNOWS that ALL tobacco powder is the same cigar and tobacco store trash he gets at his cigar store or from his seedsman and JUST WON'T ask for our booklet, that is full of the sayings of his fellows, that read:—

H. A. S. Co.—I have used the BLACK STUFF FINE TOBACCO POWDER and also the FUMIGATING KIND, and they are all right; do not leave a bad odor; any bug that can stand a siege of the FUMIGATING KIND ought to be sent to the defense of Port Arthur. O. D. MILLS, Stratford, Conn.

He JUST WON'T believe that 95 per cent of all the growers that send for our free trial sample bags of THE FUMIGATING KIND (for fumigating) and THE BLACK STUFF FINE (for sprinkling), have purchased not once, but again and again, after the trial. WHY BE A JUST WON'T, when you can have these free trial sample bags; yes, two of them if one won't do. All we ask is for you to pay the express charges on them. ASK NOW, don't be a JUST WON'T.

OCEANIC, N. J.

The Monmouth County Horticultural Society held its regular meeting on April 21, with President G. H. Hale in the chair. The two winners for the prize for "Fruit Culture Under Glass" were announced. Percy Hicks, employed at the M. C. D. Borden estate, William Turner, superintendent, received first prize, and Harry Griffiths, employed at the same place, received second. Both these papers were so fine that it was no easy matter for the judges to give their decision. We have often read papers on "Fruit Culture under Glass," but we have never had a chance to read a paper which covered the ground so completely as these, and those two gentlemen, although assistant gardeners, can take up the pen in competition with any experienced fruit grower. The two papers were read and discussed at the meeting. "Chrysanthemum Culture" is the subject on which essays were handed in to the secretary last night to come up for prizes at the next meeting.

H. A. Kettel exhibited the following tulips: Canary Bird, Pink Beauty, Belle Alliance and two peonia-flowered varieties, pink and yellow. The two latter are really beauties and I am sure will be grown more extensively in these parts next year. They received ninety-five points.

William Turner exhibited some beautiful Cattleya Mossiae, which received ninety-five points, and some fine Lælia purpurata, seven flowers on a spike, and beautifully marked, scoring ninety-five points. B.

A. W. Tweedie is building a new greenhouse about fifty feet long.

Kleinhans & Mason expect to take in a third partner and add about 4,000 feet of glass to their present range of houses, making a total of 9,000 feet. Carnations, roses and chrysanthemums will be grown.

The spring is very backward here. It requires almost as much firing now as in the winter.

WEST GROVE, PA.—J. M. Cooper has sold all his carnation plants and will fill his houses, 9,000 feet of glass, with chrysanthemums.

BROCKTON, MASS.

Easter Trade.

The gloomy weather on the morning of April 22 caused a hesitancy on buyers' parts, but as the clouds rolled away, business came with a rush and the afternoon and evening business beat all records. The Easter of 1905, taken all in all, was the best we ever had.

Stock was never of finer quality, lilies especially being exceptionally good. W. W. Hathaway cleared out over 500 pots at an average of 25 cents per bud and flower. One of the flower stores and one dry goods store sold at 15 cents, but these were not of best quality. Other plants selling well were Crimson Rambler roses, hydrangeas, kalmias, genistas, azaleas and snowballs. Quite a number of rhododendrons, jonquils, tulips and lilacs were also sold, in addition to palms, ferns and a large variety of small plants.

In cut flowers carnations were easily the leaders. Prices per dozen were 60 cents, 75 cents and $1, Fair Maid, Enchantress, Mrs. Patten, Lawson and scarlets going best. Prices of roses varied from $1.50 to $5 per dozen, the new Wellesley rose being easily the leader in popularity, followed by Beauty and Bridesmaid. A good many callas, sweet peas, stocks, violets, antirrhinums and other flowers were sold. Bulbous stock was a little slow.

W. W. Hathaway sold over 6,000 carnations on April 22 and decorated seven churches. C. A. Reed and Mrs. Moir each did a fine business. Thomas Greaves and Henry Cole sold out clean on all cut flowers at their greenhouses and the general verdict was that Easter trade of 1905 was the best on record.

BROCKTON, MASS.

Easter Trade.

The gloomy weather on the morning of April 22 caused a hesitancy on buyers' parts, but as the clouds rolled away, business came with a rush and the afternoon and evening business beat all records. The Easter of 1905, taken all in all, was the best we ever had.

Stock was never of finer quality, lilies especially being exceptionally good. W. W. Hathaway cleared out over 500 pots at an average of 25 cents per bud and flower. One of the flower stores and one dry goods store sold at 15 cents, but these were not of best quality. Other plants selling well were Crimson Rambler roses, hydrangeas, kalmias, genistas, azaleas and snowballs. Quite a number of rhododendrons, jonquils, tulips and lilacs were also sold, in addition to palms, ferns and a large variety of small plants.

In cut flowers carnations were easily the leaders. Prices per dozen were 60 cents, 75 cents and $1. Fair Maid, Enchantress, Mrs. Patten, Lawson and scarlets going best. Prices of roses varied from $1.50 to $5 per dozen, the new Wellesley rose being easily the leader in popularity, followed by Beauty and Bridesmaid. A good many callas, sweet peas, stocks, violets, antirrhinums and other flowers were sold. Bulbous stock was a little slow.

W. W. Hathaway sold over 6,000 carnations on April 22 and decorated seven churches. C. A. Reed and Mrs. Moir each did a fine business. Thomas Greaves and Henry Cole sold out clean on all cut flowers at their greenhouses and the general verdict was that Easter trade of 1905 was the best on record.

PIERSON Water Steam BOILERS

Will reduce your coal bill. They did it for others last winter.

The Reason of this is found in the construction of the boilers. They have a larger amount of direct fire surface than other horticultural boilers. The flue areas are large and all parts are easily accessible for cleaning. They are adapted for the use of any kind of fuel.

We Manufacture Every Type of Greenhouse and Everything for Heating.

After Easter Bargains

AFTER EASTER, all Florists need to replenish their stock. We here offer some exceptionally fine bargains. If you cannot take care of your needs now, you had better place your order and have us hold same for you until you can use the plants. In this way you are sure of having your stock secured when you need it, and avoid the usual disappointment of "stock sold" when you order same.

TWO BASKET STUDIES.

Expressions of Thought.

In teaching children to read an instructor often follows a plan something like this: She holds up an object, a book, for example, and asks, "What is this?" Some child is allowed to answer, "a book." "Yes," says the teacher, "Willie says this is a book. Now there are other things that can talk, besides little boys. But they do not always talk in just the same way. To hear Willie talk you must listen. To hear this piece of crayon talk you must look at the blackboard. This crayon is going to talk, and it will say just what Willie was saying. Watch, it is saying 'Book.'" And therewith she writes or prints the word "book" on the blackboard. After frequent drill the pupils are first able to recognize the printed or written word and later to make their own pencils say "book."

Precisely as the child begins to find out different ways of expressing thought is the student in designing to learn what is said by certain positions of stems and stalks and combinations of the same. Circular lines mean something; they give you a certain sensation, whether you notice it or not; straight lines suggest different ideas to the mind and abrupt and angular arrangements are not as often admired as your eyes fall upon them.

There is a season why a wild patch of oak woods is more attractive and restful to the eye than a grove of Lombardy poplars planted in straight rows, so many rods long by so many yards wide. Compare the two in winter, when the bare trunks and limbs are far enough in the distance to appear as lines. The long curves of the oak branches seem to be reaching out to grasp at some unseen object, and to afford shelter in the shorter decided lines. The straight, abrupt limbs of the poplar frown severely, and when multiplied by tens in regular rows the aggregation fairly disturbs your sense of restfulness and security. This is what these different lines and sets of lines are saying as the child or the crayon said "book." In other words, there is an expression of thought in each.

Now to be very practical, you have an order to fill a cream-colored braid basket with Bridesmaid roses. There are at least two ways in which you may execute the work. You may fill and line the basket with moss and tin foil, fasten the same in with your green tying thread, lay on a background of ferns or green moss over the sphagnum, and be ready to put the roses in. You may, if you please, lay out the roses and cut them all about the average length of eight inches, stem them on whole picks and insert them into the sphagnum upward, downward, outward, with the result that you have a production with about as much expression as a well inhabited pin cushion. Or, if you are so inclined, you may stem your roses at about the length you find them, set in the larger and stronger ones in a well defined cluster about one side of the handle, wire them closely to the handle to hold them in place, fill in the body of the basket closely enough so that some will appear to be crowding others so that they fall far out over the edge, and finish the design with a cluster on the opposite side of the handle, which falls in toward the upright cluster first inserted; and ninety-nine cases to one your patron is pleased with the latter effort, which, we flatter one point it repeats the effect at regular intervals all the way around.

Nobody cares for a lopsided rose, regardless of beautiful coloring or perfume. A second element in a properly arranged floral design is its symmetry. To illustrate this principle see the clusters of roses at opposite sides of the basket in the second illustration. The body of the basket is filled low and loosely, almost too low for good effect in the picture. Tall clusters of roses start at either side of the basket and follow the handle more than half-way up, being secured in place as was just described for the first basket. The coloring is a somewhat unusual one. The basket is a terra cotta red, better described as brick red. The roses are Kaiserins, with a mere touch of yellow stock and Asparagus plumosus.

While the general appearance of these clusters of roses is symmetrical they are not exactly the same size and height. It is not necessary to hold exactly to these proportions. Make the general appearance symmetrical.

Either of these baskets may be filled with a dish holding water in which the ourselves, has some expression, the discovery of which we leave to the discriminating reader. See the illustration on this page.

When dwelling upon the beauty of a perfectly formed elm tree, or a well grown Araucaria excelsa, one element which appeals to the eye is the apparently symmetrical form. A projection on one side is balanced by a like projection on the opposite side. Where a graceful whirl of pine needles droops at flowers are put, or filled with moss as described above, as occasion requires. A third method is rather more satisfactory for a hasty order. It is this: Set the side clusters against the handle in the empty basket. Fasten to the handles to secure in place. Fill in moss around the stems like soil around the roots of a plant. Set in the flower stems in the body of the basket and proceed in the same way to fill the basket with moss and flowers at the same time. G. B.

INDOOR WINDOW BOXES.

In a number of the eastern cities the retailers are finding good sale for zinc-lined baskets planted with bedding stock for use as indoor window boxes. In Boston particularly there has been a nice business done with these goods. A very popular style is a raffia hamper from one and a half to two feet long and four or five inches wide, zinc lined and planted with three or four red geraniums and a few small ferns. At Easter a great many of these were sold at $3 each, at which there was a good profit in them.

FORCING VALLEY.

I intend to grow some lily of the valley next winter but have no forcing bed. I have heard that valley can be forced by placing it over some hot pipes and was told that when the pips arrive in the fall they can be treated the same as tulips, planting in sand and placed outdoors and brought in as wanted. Will this work? If so, will you kindly give me a brief outline of the treatment, that date the cold storage roots must be depended on and they, of course, need no forcing, as they are too anxious to grow.

The conditions for the forcing bed for the fall imported roots are: The sand about 80 to 85 degrees, the atmosphere about 60 degrees, heavy shade for the first ten days, a lighter shade for another week and for two or three days the full light. As the season advances less bottom heat is required, and the temperature of the house should be kept down or the flower and foliage will be weak. A full description of how to build a structure to provide these conditions for forcing valley in moderate quantities has been published in the REVIEW more than once. However, all this is not to the point.

Without such a structure you can force valley with fair success, in flats on the pipes. When received in November select the strongest pips for earliest forcing and the weaker for March and April. Plant in boxes of convenient size, but not less than five inches deep, in sand, or sand and light loam, half

Bring in the flats as you need them, but you will not have much success with those you start before December 20. Don't put the flats on the pipes but put pieces of 2x4 scantling edgewise on the pipes and the flats on these. Up to the middle of February you will have to leave the flats over the pipes until the flowers are nearly fully developed. After that date they can be brought up to a shaded bench as soon as you see the spikes appear and they will develop all right. Water is a daily necessity but avoid wetting the flowers as soon as they show color. A draught is bad for these rootless plants at any time and the bright suns of March quickly wilt them. I mean, of course, by rootless that up to the time the flowers are cut seldom are any new roots made.

It may be of interest to some to say that four years ago the writer imported 10,000 small pips to make a bed outdoors for our Decoration Day cutting. They were very small, costing only $3 per thousand. For three years they gave no flowers but last spring they sent up a lot of grand spikes. A few hundred of the strongest pips were dug up as an experiment and forced in flats as described above and gave us splendid spikes about the end of February. If labor will admit of it, we could grow as fine valley roots as the Germans or Hollanders. Why not? W. S.

CONTRASTS OF HORTICULTURE.

[An extract from a paper entitled "Impressions of Canadian Horticulture," by Edgar Elvin, read before the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club, April 8, 1905.]

My duty tonight is to act as a sort of mirror to all present. Whether you will be perfectly pleased with your own reflection is an open question. It is not usual to tell a man at first sight what you think of him; neither is it always good policy to put a window in one's own mind that all may gaze. I admit at the outset that my qualifications to act as guide, philosopher and critic are of the slenderest type, having only been with you some four months, but on the other hand it has been my privilege to see much that is best in British horticultural life.

To begin with, I should like to protest against the fashion in some quarters of making odious comparisons with British methods, usually to the deprecation of the latter. As a newcomer may I say that horticulture in Britain is not yet in extremis. On the contrary, it was never so full of vigorous life as today. It is true there has been a certain metamorphosis in the trade. The great old firms perhaps do not do the same business as of yore, but there has sprung up a host of small growers and florists to meet an increasing demand. The love of flowers was never so strong as now.

I note that the model of Canadian florists is the United States. That is natural and perhaps inevitable, but with its turbine steamers reducing the passage time there may come what is to be desired, a closer union and a larger trade with Great Britain. It would be a good thing if, in matters horticultural, we could have free trade within the Empire, and as wide a door as may be compatible with self-protection to all outsiders. At any rate we ought to seek deliverance from all narrow and shortsighted methods.

My first impression of Canada was commencing with the planting and also how long it will take to force them?

W. A. S.

The most inexpensive and surest way to produce good valley during winter is to have a bed of warm sand. If you have a coil of steam pipes or three or four hot water pipes in your house this is not difficult to manage. You cannot get the newly imported pips into bloom before the middle of January. Up to and half. Place them outdoors on boards. Give them a good watering and cover with three inches of soil. Freezing, of course, will do them no harm; in fact some assert that it is necessary. We know that this is one of the hardiest little plants that grow. Still I have seen the pips ruined by being exposed to severe cold and then suddenly thawing. But covered with a few inches of soil no amount of cold will hurt them.

Show House of Ernst Wienhoeber Co., Chicago, Photographed Just Before Easter.

that of spaciousness. Things are on the grand scale. One has the feeling of breathing a larger, ampler air. This factor of mere size alone, it seems to me, has reacted on the Canadian's mind. His mental faculties seem to take a wider sweep than the usual island-bound Britisher. This applies not only to his outlook on life but to his business. He thinks in continents, and is at home in the wholesale trades. How much he owes to a bracing climate, to a freedom of opportunity, or a growing consciousness of prosperity and consequent independence are questions which might well set the ball rolling in debate.

While I admire your Canadians in many respects, I do not think the average man in our business is as well informed in all-round horticulture as are those at home. He is a good specialist but his general knowledge has been largely limited by his opportunities. Then, again, note his impatience. "Wanted, a hustler," is a common advertisement. Now your hustler often is a mere bustler or a bungler, and sometimes a mixture of both. Your hustler is set over against the man with quiet but clear intelligence, and often in a superficial view the latter suffers in the comparison. Now I put it to you, that there is no business where an exact, well balanced judgment is as often required, where a little carelessness and inattention to detail count for so much as in ours, where a seemingly trivial error will leave most ruinous marks on the year's account.

There is a specially strong temptation to overstatement in our business, but no where, perhaps, has it been so exalted as one of the virtues of the trade as on this continent.

After the men, we come to the stores. One is immediately struck with the really magnificent carnations and roses. For length of stems, richness of coloring, largeness of blooms and general aristocratic appearance they quite outclass those usually seen in florists' shops in the Old Country. Cyclamen, too, with long flower stalks well up above the foliage were very good. Only from Kerrs, of Liverpool, have I seen finer. Poinsettias and chrysanthemums were fine but not extraordinary. Foliage plants are only of medium quality. The Christmas dressings of the stores and windows were in good taste and the business done a revelation. But speaking generally the condition of the windows leaves much to be desired. With one or two conspicuous exceptions they present a slovenly and often bedraggled appearance. In this respect you are behind the florist in the Old Country who always looks well to his windows. The introduction of a little pleasing novelty and a more pleasing blending of the material to hand would be fully appreciated by the flower-loving public.

As to floral and decorative work I can hardly speak, but from what little I have seen there appears to be greater originality of design here than in the Old Country, although in this respect there has been a great awakening during recent years across the water. The tendency in both cases is toward a more open and natural arrangement and simplicity in designs. The Boston laurel and southern smilax as decorative subjects were both new to me.

We turn now to the plant houses. These are spacious, admirably fitted for flower growing by the bench method, ensuring the maximum of light and air, but for plant growing I prefer smaller houses, as in the Old Country. The question of steam versus hot water for all subjects is a debatable one. While I quite see the necessity of a brisk heat for flowering and forced stuff in a winter like this, my opinion is that for an ideal plant atmosphere there is nothing like hot water, ensuring greater equilibrium of temperature for growing subjects and not drawing too much on the reserve forces of so many subjects needing a partial rest during winter. Then there is the question of the hose pipe. My own feeling is that there is a temptation to overdo it. In the winter especially does this apply to pot plants. Whether it is harmful to use the cold water direct from the mains or whether aired water would not give better results is a question I should like answering. I am persuaded that you have here in Montreal as fine a plant growing climate as can be desired, with a water which has traversed every strata and holds in solution almost every kind of plant food. There is, perhaps, a danger in these advantages, of a certain disregard of detail which in a less favorable state of things would lead only to a moderate success. To point only one example, everything seems to be grown in one soil and that not always of the best. A more exact scientific method might give the highest possible results. Given a man with capital, capability and courage, there is here a splendid opportunity to show what can be done in the way of pot plants, especially in choice ferns and fine foliage stuff. What a magnificent climate for crotons and other stove subjects; how dendrobies would thrive and ripen up in this brilliant sunshine; what splendid vine canes could be produced! I feel certain that even such winter and spring subjects as cinerarias, herbaceous calceolarias, streptocarpus, etc., could be well done in spite of certain obvious difficulties. Sutton's and Dickson's new dwarf star-shaped pink and white cinerarias would be well worth a trial.

I should like to put in a plea for more variety. The position of the rose and carnation we may regard as unassailable. But perfection itself may be reproduced to satiety, and I feel sure the people would respond to something that would combine and associate well with the queen of flowers.

I share with you a growing faith in the boundless possibilities of progress in this great Dominion. In its train there is sure to come that development of the arts and luxuries of life which is the basis of our business. There will grow up a civilization which will eclipse all the courtly and artistic splendors of the old world. Horticulture will open up a new field by supplying a large private garden trade, as in the Old Country. A few years hence, we who are on the ground will be regarded as the pioneers of our profession. It is our duty to keep our eyes on that future and anticipate its needs. The man who can add to the enjoyment of life will not only do a good thing for himself but he will earn the lasting gratitude of his kind.

loses its color, but that must be early enough in the summer to allow the stems to break and make a good growth.

Lilium Lancifolium.

These Japan lilies, properly L. speciosum, are usually received and potted with us in December or January. They are now fifteen or eighteen inches high and should be staked before they fall over, for they go three or four feet in height. We consider these beautiful lilies indispensable for designs in July, August and September. It is true we have the cold storage longiflorum with us all the time, but the speciosum is a welcome change, less formal, in fact more truly Japanese, and that surely is enough to make it admired. The writer can well remember large pots of these lilies decorating a cool conservatory over half a century ago and it has lost none of its beauty or sweet odor since then. All lilies are natives of temperate climes and the speciosum does not like our hot summers under glass. They like plenty of water, providing it passes quickly through the soil, a cool temperature and constant fumigation of some kind to keep down aphids. From the middle of May on, some shade and lots of ventilation should be given. We think the flowers of Lilium album or L. roseum, either in a design or as a spray or bunch, are far prettier than the much used longiflorum.

Cyclamens.

This is the time, just coming, when these winter favorites are too often neglected. We do not pretend to know much about that small insect, or mite, that later on causes the leaves to pucker and curl and the flowers to be useless, for we have never had a serious attack of it. Whether in 2 or 3-inch pots, or later batches still in flats, they should be well surrounded with tobacco stems frequently renewed. This may not kill aphides that are already at work, but it will go a long way to keep them clean, as it does with any plant. Never let cyclamens get a severe drying. It is a bad check for them, and every bright morning a light spraying is most beneficial.

I have seen good cyclamens grown in several different ways during summer. One way is a mild hotbed, where the roots could have a little heat and the tops perfect ventilation. They are often plunged in a cold frame after the first of June. We think, however, that for the general florist a south bench in a greenhouse where you can give plenty of ventilation and can shade during the hot sun only, is the safest place. Here you can spray easily and frequently renew the tobacco. But do not forget to unroll your shade at 10 a. m. and roll it up at 3 p. m. and on cloudy days do no shading at all. A permanent shading, like whitewashing the glass, is not the thing for cyclamens.

Asters.

You will soon be planting out your earliest asters. If in flats they can be stood in cold frames, with sash off, on fine days. It will harden them to the sun and wind. It may be worth mentioning that if your soil is as rich as it should be, asters are often planted too close to do them justice or to keep them clear of weeds. Boston Market and the

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

The Bedding Season.

In many favored states there may be no longer any danger of frost, but in the north the month of May seldom passes without one or two frosty nights and that is why it is not safe to bed out our tender plants, and more particularly the tropical plants we use, until the last days of the month. That, however, should not prevent us from getting into the ground several things that are about hardy but have been in the greenhouse or frames all winter. Antirrhinums, pentstemons, hollyhocks and all young herbaceous plants sown last summer and wintered in cold frames should now be in the ground. The majority of flower lovers put off planting the pretty pansies until they plant coleus. A sad mistake, for they are in their glory in May.

The Pansy.

Just a word about a pansy bed. They are usually planted with the view that by early June they will be exhausted and flowerless and be succeeded by something more lasting. That makes business for us, yet these universal favorites can be made a most attractive flower bed into August and with the return of cool weather will renew their vigor and be attractive till snow flies again. Only observe two rules. Give them a good soaking twice a week in dry weather and never fail to pick off the withered flowers. Bearing seeds quickly exhausts.

The Sweet Bays.

Sweet bays, oleanders, box trees and Hydrangea Otaksa that you have stored for yourself or customers should be stood out where they can get the sun and rain. The sweet bays with us lose the splendid glossy green of health and also the perfect trimness of form that they have when first imported. In fact, it is a marvelous feat of gardening to produce such wonderful wealth of growth and leaves in such tubs. I have never seen the Belgians at it, but it must be during the spring growing season that the pinching is done that makes such perfect form. That we can do also. The health and vigor is kept up by constant feeding with the strongest liquid manure, particularly in early summer. We stand them out in the blazing sun and the roots become parched. After the middle of June the tubs should be sunk in the ground up to the rim. This will help greatly to keep the foliage green. We are not all fortunate enough to buy a dozen pair and dispose of them all and frequently have to winter a few dozen for customers who are well worth it in some other way.

Hydrangeas.

The hydrangeas are not so easy to manage as the others. If kept in a shed where it has been only a degree or two above freezing they will have made a start and that young, tender growth is easily hurt by a very few degrees of frost. If you leave them in the storage house every day will add to the spindling growth, so get them out and make provision to, in case you can sniff a frosty night ahead, lay them down and cover with a mat or blanket for the night. We are often asked about pruning these hydrangeas. Spring is not the time to prune unless it be to cut out weak or decayed wood. If you shorten back the strong growths made last summer you will lose most of the flowering buds. Prune, if necessary, as soon as the flower other early varieties will do one foot apart each way. Victoria and the Peonia-flowered should be quite fifteen inches in the row and the rows eighteen inches apart and, unless land is scarce with you, the branching varieties, such as Semple's, deserve eighteen inches in rows and the rows two feet apart. It pays to skip every fifth row. You need a path from which to pick your flowers and carry out your armful of blossoms. A good dusting of wood ashes harrowed in is a great help to asters, but this is only a help. A deep ploughing and plenty of farm yard manure are the principal things.

Callas.

I wonder if the old calla lily will come again into favor. We have had frequent calls for them this season. You may be resting plants in pots now or lifting beds to make room for other crops. You will find many offsets, little bulbs the size of a hazelnut or smaller. If put into 3-inch pots and kept growing they will make flowering plants by next winter. Plunge outdoors in June and keep well watered and later shift into 5-inch pots. It is wonderful what plants they make by fall. When the calla was an important flower we found these young plants quite as profitable as the older and stronger bulbs.

There are a few seeds to sow just now, say cineraria and Primula obconica, if you want them for December and January. If you do not care for cineraria except at Easter, then August or September is time enough. Obconica, too, can also be sown in August. If you sow now you can summer these plants in a cold frame, where it is easy to give abundance of fresh air and shade when necessary. The primula plants out and lifts easily. It is a standard, valuable greenhouse plant and no telling what some of our clever men will yet do with its coloring. When sowing P. obconica do not forget a little of Forbesii, the pretty little baby primrose, useful and beautiful. It is not for me to give any plant a bad character, but for the commercial florist the cineraria is a bulky, buggy, soft, unprofitable plant, good to make a conservatory gay, but giving poor returns to the hard working florist.

Bedding Roses.

Hybrid perpetuals might have been planted two or three weeks ago, although it is now by no means too late for our latitude. Whether you have planted or are still planting these roses, please do not lead your customers to expect a great show of blossoms this summer. It cannot be done and have strong, vigorous plants. If two or three eyes are left on each growth they will make a strong growth. A few may terminate with a flower but if not you have the foundation for a rose bush for years to come and are assured of a glorious show the second year.

Department stores now sell thousands of these dormant roses at ten for $1. We are asked repeatedly if they are any good. Yes, I am sorry to say they are good. They may be cheap Dutch stock, but if properly planted and pruned will make good plants. Not one person in a hundred who buys them knows enough to cut them down, so if they start at all, the first winter finishes them and the local florist is after all depended on for good roses.

The classes of roses that will give the most satisfaction to our customers are the tea and hybrid tea varieties. There is not that grand burst of bloom we get in June from a bed of Ulrich Brunner or Magna Charta, but there are rose buds all the time and when September or October, with chilly nights are with us, the Carnot or Maman Cochet bud is opening its dewy petals to the morning sun.

The hybrid teas, and even the teas, are hardy in many localities and with us can be kept over winter with a good protection of straw and litter. You do not want to save all the growth. If the stems are sound and alive six inches from the ground, that is enough and if they are killed dead you had pleasure enough from them.

Now, and for a week or two, is the time to plant this type of rose. Perhaps they are from a cool house or frame and would have felt a sharp frost. There is no question but that all roses like a heavy fresh loam. A worn-out soil, however much manured, will not do. Have the bed within reach of the hose. The florist for his own use should plant a big bed of Maman Cochet, both white and pink, and Pres. Carnot. For his customers he should plant these fine varieties mentioned and Admiral Schley, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, Perle des Jardins and The Burbank. Almost any of the hybrid teas are satisfactory in the summer and the now old-fashioned true teas, Safrano, Isabella Sprunt and Duchess de Brabant we have cut by the thousands in August, September and October.

FIELD PLANTING.

We are now right in the midst of field planting and a few remarks on the details will not be amiss. When plowing the soil be sure it is not too wet. We are always anxious to get our young carnations out just as early as we can, but we find that it does not pay to let one's hurry get the best of his judgment. I would rather finish a week or two later and have my plants planted properly, in soil that was in the right condition, than to have them plastered into mud real early. The plants will quickly make it up.

This spring we could have begun about April 10 with planting but for the uncertainty of frosts. While a degree or two of frost will not kill a young carnation plant, yet we do not care to subject them to it if we can help it. To those who plant only a few thousand plants this early starting does not mean very much, as a few days will suffice to do the work, but to those who plant from 50,000 up to 200,000 it means a great deal. Some of our larger firms are kept busy three to four weeks planting carnations in the field and in order to finish by the middle of May they must get an early start.

Did you get one of those side-hill plows? If you did you will be glad of it before you are through planting. Plow as much of the field as you are likely to plant in one day and pulverize it well with your harrow, finishing up with a drag to level it off nicely. Stretch a stout line lengthwise of the plowed part and begin planting, ten inches to one foot apart in the row and the rows sixteen to eighteen inches apart, according to how much room you have to plant on. Use a trowel for planting, loosening up the soil as deeply as you can, so you will have mellow soil to set the plants in. Set the plant in the soil just deep enough so you can cover the ball of soil with new soil to prevent drying out. Press the soil around it firmly and finish up with loose soil on the surface. Never leave the soil in a packed state on the surface, as it will bake and become unfit for any plant to grow in. A quarter of an inch of loose soil will prevent this. All this can be done very quickly after a little practice and you will find that it pays to do it right.

Divide up your force so that none will have to wait on the others and don't leave your plants out of the pots too long, but get them into the soil as soon as possible after they are dumped out of the pots. The young roots will dry out quickly when exposed to the air. Have one man dumping them out of the pots and setting them into flats, while another drops them along the row, while two or three follow him up closely with the planting. By dividing up your men properly you can keep things moving along smoothly and have every plant in the ground within a half hour after it is taken from the pot. No watering is necessary when planting in fresh plowed ground, as the plants will take hold before the soil can dry out very much.

Let one of the men before quitting time go through the day's planting with the hand cultivator to loosen up the soil between the rows where it was tramped in planting. Let this be the beginning of the cultivating which should be kept up systematically all summer. I will have more to say about that later on. Be careful of your labels so there will be no mixtures. Use large labels that won't be knocked out of the ground every time you go through with the cultivator.

If you have some late propagated cuttings in the sand, don't do as we sometimes see done, plant them in the field from the cutting bench. Every grower knows how necessary it is to shade the young cuttings from the sun for several days after potting and how much more necessary must it be this late, when the sun is so strong, and how much more the cuttings must suffer when planted into the open field in the hot sun and wind than they would in the greenhouse. Better pot them as soon as they are ready, into your smallest size pots, into light sandy soil, so that root action will be quick and they will be rooted through well enough to hold the ball of soil together in a couple of weeks.

Always bear in mind that these young plants are to be your stock for next winter and it is not a question of how little care they can get along with, but rather how much can you do to improve their growth from the very beginning. As one of our prominent growers said recently, nothing is too much trouble if you want to have the best.

A. F. J. BAUR.

CONCORDIA, KAN.—C. J. Lampe is preparing to build two houses 18x75.

IN THE "CARNATION BELT."

Chester county is in the carnation belt of Pennsylvania, where every man and his neighbor have a few houses devoted to the divine flower. It is at Oxford, in Chester county, that J. H. A. Hutchison conducts the Locust Street Greenhouses, growing a general stock of plants for a wholesale and retail trade but making a specialty of carnations. Mr. Hutchison still clings to some of the old favorite varieties, among them Flora Hill, which does so well for him that the new whites have a hard task to crowd it out. The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken in his house of Flora Hill in February.

AZALEA INDICA.

When the florist speaks of azaleas, the evergreen tender shrub is meant and we have few, if any, more showy or beautiful plants. The Ghent azaleas as well as Azalea Mollis are beautiful hardy shrubs where they thrive, as well as pretty plants for forcing, yet the Indian or Chinese species is queen. The Chinese have cultivated these azaleas for centuries and it is from crossing several varieties found there that we now have the innumerable splendid varieties. It appeals to me that we now handle an azalea with much greater freedom than would have been considered wise or safe forty years ago. Planting out in beds and lifting in the fall, and this repeated for several seasons, is now the method, not only in Belgium, where you may say they are manufactured by the millions, but it is also done by our florists with stock unsold in the spring. Where you have a deep, friable soil within reach of the hose they will summer over and lift in September or October quite as well as those kept in pots and with less labor.

The azalea is naturally a branching, irregular shaped shrub and if more of our pot-grown plants were allowed to assume their natural form it would be a pleasing variety to the formal, closely pinched plants so invariably seen in commercial places. In private gardens you do see fine azaleas of a natural, free and easy growth, and most decorative they are.

Almost entirely the plants we import, big and little, are pinched into broad, flat and slightly rounding crowns, which may be called the umbrella form, a monotonous but excellent shape to make a dense mass of blooms and show them all. This form the Belgians and Germans produce by pinching while the young plants are making a vigorous summer's growth in the beds which have been saturated with manure for years. The small but tough, wiry growth of the azalea lends itself readily to any desired form and the British gardener, perhaps also the continental, prides himself on his grand specimen azaleas trained in pyramidal form. These wonderful specimens cannot be produced in a few years. It is a work of many years and infinite skill and labor.

A moderate or small sized plant is taken in hand and one or two strong growths encouraged to be leaders. The lateral growths are tied down, for a specimen must be perfect from the rim of the pot to the pinnacle, shoots tied into vacant spaces, etc., and so year by year a perfect outline is formed. We have often seen specimens six feet high and perhaps three feet in diameter at the base. Such plants are very common in private gardens.

We have a rather hazy recollection that at the great Vienna exhibition some thirty years ago, Benjamin S. Williams, the famous London nurseryman, exhibited twelve wonderful pyramid specimen azaleas and old Kaiser Wilhelm, of Germany, purchased them for £1,200. Please let no one take me up on date or city or what kind of an emperor it was, for I will not be positive, but I will swear that there were twelve azaleas and they brought $6,000. About $500 for each of these azaleas seems a "juicy" price, but if you consider the years (perhaps thirty) they had been growing and all the skill and labor expended on them there was nothing in the least extravagant about the price, whatever you may think of the sum.

The Europeans used to think that a mixture of fibrous, turfy loam and peat, the latter most essential, was the only compost to grow these fine azaleas. The peat found in so many localities there is undoubtedly most congenial to the fine, hairlike roots of the azalea, but yet I feel sure fine healthy azaleas can be grown without it. Good, turfy loam, sod stacked up just long enough to kill the grass roots, and one-third of leaf-mold, genuine decayed leaves, and perfect drainage will grow azaleas.

All Ericaceous plants, and the azalea is one, have an antipathy to lime, and soil from a limestone district should not be used. Shifting should always be done soon after flowering, for then growth begins, and always should shifting be done carefully and firmly, removing all old crocks and soil that was unoccupied with roots. Neither do they want shifting unless you are sure the pots are well filled with roots. Time was when azaleas were stood under trees or lattice houses during summer. We all know better now. They love the fullest light and brightest sun, with one big "if." If you don't neglect them for water. From the time they start into active growth in the spring until the growth is matured and the buds set in early fall, they want copious watering. In the winter months and a low temperature they need less water, but at any season they are injured or killed by a severe drying out. Let's grow some specimen pyramidal azaleas to show what we can do and exhibit at the next World's Fair on Long Island, N. Y., in 1919.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

Azalea Dr. Metzger, Grown in Pyramidal Form.

PYRAMIDAL AZALEAS.

The pyramidal form of azalea is very popular with the patrons of the retail florists. At Easter larger numbers than ever before were shown and sold readily at better prices than the familiar "umbrella-shaped" plants. Of course the average retailer cannot sell the great specimens which are sometimes seen in private conservatories, the average city store preferring plants from a foot and a half to three feet high. Just as novelty in any particular is appreciated, so many buyers seize upon these pyramidal azaleas as a welcome departure from the stereotyped form. The accompanying illustration is from a plant of Azalea Dr. Metzger, double, deep pink, photographed at the establishment of C. A. Samuelson, Chicago, at Easter. He had a number specially grown for him.

SAXIFRAGA SARMENTOSA.

This old-fashioned plant is known commonly as "mother of thousands," and was once immensely popular for the greenhouse, and as a window plant. Excellent specimens may be grown in pots, but it does best in baskets, as then its real beauty is fully displayed, says a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine.

It is an accommodating plant, of easy culture, and one that sustains no injury through a long sojourn in dwelling-rooms; indeed, many excellent specimens are grown year after year in cottage windows. Well-grown plants have dark green leaves prettily mottled with white, and these are surmounted by tall branching panicles of delicate white blossoms, while numerous thread-like runners, studded here and there with plantlets, depend gracefully, thus lending grace to beauty. Almost any fairly light and rich soil will suit this saxifraga.

Propagation is performed in the simplest manner; on established plants there will be a wealth of young stock already rooted, and these soon become established if removed and inserted close to the side of small pots filled with light, sandy soil. When the pots become well-filled with roots, transfer the plants to baskets, which should be lined with fresh moss. On the moss place some soil, and put a few small plants round the sides, with their tops protruding through the moss; add more soil, and then put three or four of the strongest plants on the top. A good watering through a rose should then be given, and the baskets hung up in a structure in which a genial temperature is maintained, until the plants are established, when they may be removed to a cold house or to rooms.

Red spider and thrips sometimes attack Saxifraga sarmentosa, and these may be kept in check by frequent syringings with clear or soapy water, but this must not be neglected.

some of the forms of solid benches are very satisfactory and, although all my benches are of the solid pattern, with tile bottoms, I am of the opinion that varieties such as Meteor, Ivory and Golden Gate would have given better results during the winter if they had been on table benches.

For summer work any of the forms of the solid bench are without doubt preferable to the table bench, as the roots can be kept at a more uniform temperature and the soil does not dry out so rapidly, but the question is, which are the most profitable benches for the season's work?

Having had a few inquiries recently on this subject I will discuss it further in a future article. RIBES.

LAELIA JONGHEANA.

Some five or six years ago this laelia was imported in considerable quantities and is now comparatively cheap. As one of the winter blooming species, which comes in season when Laelia anceps is over and Cattleya Trianæ is on the wane, it is of special value. The flowers are deep pink in shade, deepening almost to purple, with a golden yellow lip. While ordinary flowers will not measure over five inches across, we had some this season eight inches in diameter.

We grow our plants in baskets hung near the roof in the odontoglossum house in summer, removing them to the cool end of the cattleya house in winter, using a compost of pure fern fibre. A cattleya temperature is too high for the best success with this orchid in summer. From April to October a north house seems to suit it better.

W. N. CRAIG.

STYLE OF BENCH.

The question whether solid or table benches are the most profitable seems still to be undecided, some experts favoring one kind and others as strenuously advocating another. A great deal depends on the quality of the soil and still more on the ability of the man, and, where solid benches are in use, on the kind of subsoil, whether it is suitable for a good natural drainage or whether the drainage has to be made.

The old style of solid bench, which was simply building walls around the space to be occupied by the bench and filling in the compost, is still employed successfully in many places and is admirably suited for summer work and where, as in many cases, the bushes are carried over for more than one or two seasons, they also do well.

Where there is a good shale bottom this class of bench produces wonderful crops of high grade flowers, especially under the care of an expert, but I have seen a larger per cent of failures with this class of bench than with any of the forms of table benches used.

The newer styles of solid benches, which are really not entitled to be classed as such, are mostly built with a view to using artificial drainage, either in the form of ashes, rubble, or tile bottoms, and have none of the advantages of either the old solid bench or the more modern style of table bench.

Table benches are also of various kinds, from the plain deal bench, with spaces left between the bottom slats for drainage, to the more elaborate trussed iron bench with tile bottoms and stone edgings. This latter bench in my opinion more nearly approaches the ideal than any other form extant, as it possesses the qualities which most growers have been striving for, viz., is easily erected, nearly indestructible, neat and at about the same cost as the most ordinary deal bench. The drainage also is nearly perfect.

My preference for table benches is based upon the fact that having the advantage of air below and around them, they dry out much more rapidly than any form of solid bench can and are consequently safer where there is a chance of having to put them in the care of careless or incompetent help. During the long dark days we have also better control of the temperature of the soil and there is no danger of the roots digging into unsuitable food.

CAPACITY OF COIL BOILER.

I have a coil boiler containing 160 feet of $1\frac{1}{4}$ -inch pipe besides the two 5-inch headers at top and bottom of the coils. The forty return bends are also exposed to the fire. The grate is 2x4 feet. The coils are directly over the fire and the whole is bricked in so that we have a good draft. I have one house 20x75, twelve feet to ridge. This is piped with one 4-inch flow from each side of the top header and returned with two 4-inch pipes on each side to the lower header. This kept this house warm with very little firing. I have connected to this house another 20x100. Will this boiler heat this second house and keep both warm enough to grow lettuce?

J. W. R.

If I interpret your situation correctly you now have a pipe boiler carrying 160 lineal feet of $1\frac{1}{4}$ -inch pipe exposed to the action of the heat. This would give a heating surface of about seventy square feet, which under normal conditions should carry about 560 feet of radiation. The six 4-inch pipes used in the house 20x75 feet give a radiation of about 526 square feet, or thirty-four feet less than the rating of the boiler. It is therefore not likely that this boiler will be sufficient to heat the additional house.

You have a little more pipe in the house 20x75 feet than is necessary to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees, which is sufficient for lettuce, but even were you to reduce the piping in this house to 400 square feet of radiation, you would then only have a reserve in your boiler of 150 feet, whereas the house 20x100 should have 520 feet of radiation to supply it with sufficient pipe to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees.

If you like this type of boiler your best plan would be to build an auxiliary boiler to be placed in commission when needed. Build another boiler of the same size as the one you now have and then arrange the piping so as to heat all from either boiler alone or so as to use a boiler for each house during severe weather.

Your plan of piping is all right if it gives good results and if you can get the radiation as cheaply in the 4-inch pipe as in smaller pipe, which can seldom be done. The $1\frac{1}{2}$ or $1\frac{1}{4}$ -inch pipes are usually less expensive for a given area of radiation than the larger pipe. In order that you may determine this for your own case I will say that it takes 2.7 feet of $1\frac{1}{4}$ -inch and 2.3 feet of $1\frac{1}{2}$ -inch pipe to equal one foot of 4-inch pipe in area of radiation.

ST. LOUIS.The Market.

The trade had its ups and downs the past week. The very disagreeable weather interfered greatly with transient trade among the down-town florists but there seems to be considerable work going on with the up-town retailers, with weddings and parties. This, with a good deal of funeral work, made the week following Easter a fairly good one.

The growers are, of course, very busy at this time of the year with bedding stock and supplying the trade with blooming plants. At the wholesale houses there seems to be plenty of everything the trade calls for except fancy carnations. They seem to be a little off crop at present.

There are plenty of fine tea roses, with the top figure at $8 per hundred. American Beauties are also in good supply, with fancies at $5 per dozen. Carnations are still up in price, with fancies at $4 per hundred. Tulips, lily of the valley, callas, longiflorums and other bulbous stock show no advance. Sweet peas are coming in fine and more than the commission men can handle at present. In greens the market has everything in plenty, including some of Caldwell's new huckleberry branches, which take the place of wild smilax and are very well thought of among the trade here.

Various Notes.

Miss Schnell, of East St. Louis, did a fine business at Easter in plants and cut flowers.

The Plant and Cut Flower Growers' Association held its regular meeting April 26, a week later than usual, owing to the busy Easter season. President Halstead read an essay on chrysanthemum growing. The attendance was fair and all the officers were present.

The Florists' Bowling Club has been invited to visit DeSoto, Mo., by florists Hippard and Frost for a friendly game with the Bowlers' Club of that city, of which Mr. Hippard is captain. The invitation came through Ed Gerlach, of Kuehn's, and has been accepted for an early date.

The tree planting committee of the Civic Improvement League is composed of Prof. H. C. Irish, F. A. Weber, Wm. Scott Hancock and six prominent business men.

The wind and hail storm of last Friday wrecked part of the Horticulture building at the World's Fair.

The Benthey-Coatsworth Co., Chicago, has been consigning the entire New Castle cut to Frank Ellis, owing to the teamsters' strike at Chicago. The stock consists of extra fine Brides, Maids, Liberties and American Beauties. The stock, Mr. Ellis said, sold well and brought top prices.

The committee that has charge of the fall flower show says the preliminary list will be out this week. A meeting of this committee has been called for this week. The hall question is still a hard problem.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Weber, in company with their daughter and Theo.

Miller, will leave the end of this month for a trip to Germany, to be gone three months.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will hold its regular monthly meeting next Thursday afternoon, May 11, at 2 o'clock. A talk by the growers, retailers and commission men on Easter business will be one of the features. The officers look forward to an interesting meeting and President Juengel expects every member to be present and join in the different discussions which will come up.

The plant stands at Union Market are handling some extra fine blooming plants and report a rushing business the past week.

All the local growers will commence planting this week. Plenty of rain of late put the ground in splendid condition for this kind of work. Heavy orders are already in for all kinds of bedding stock, of which plenty is to be had.

Only four members of the bowling club showed up on Monday night, so a match of six games was arranged between Kuehn and Miller and Beneke and Meinhardt. The first pair won by a margin of two pins, each team winning three games as follows: Kuehn, 1,050; Miller, 892; Beneke, 980; Meinhardt, 960. High single score, Beneke, 212; Kuehn, 200.

J. D. Thompson, of the Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., spent Monday and Tuesday among the trade here. Mr. Thompson entertained the boys on the great Chicago strike and the hardships of the wholesalers in that city at present. J. J. B.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Since the close of Lent, weddings have been numerous. Everything in cut flowers has cleaned up at low prices and business has settled down to "the even tenor of its way" in the spring, with supplies abundant and the tendency to lower figures. Lilies were actually sold one day last week at $10 a thousand.

Orchids and valley are firm at good prices, thanks to the potency of the old, old story and the many ventures upon matrimony's sea. There cannot be too many weddings this spring to "even up things" for the patient florists and to end encouragingly the most strenuous season in their experience.

Bulbous stock is now very plentiful. Violets are no longer quotable and few are arriving. The continued cool weather has wonderfully prolonged their season. Valley and smilax are bringing good prices. Maids and Brides are down. The best of them could be had for $5 on Saturday.

The weather on Monday was chilly, approaching freezing up the state and too cold for anything less than overcoats in New York. This seemed to have a beneficial effect on business in all departments of the cut flower section and everything went at better prices. Good Beauties were quite scarce and anything extra commanded $25 per hundred.

Various Notes.

It is reported that the Fernery has engaged a store on Fifth avenue, near Twenty-ninth street, and Jos. Fleishman has taken a corner store at Forty-third street and Fifth avenue, right in the midst of the fine establishments of Smythe, Young, Thorley and McConnell. Concentration is going forward with a vengeance.

Now that Easter is but a "has been" we must turn to the coming day of hallowed memories. Decoration day is close at hand. Its importance to floriculture grows with the years. With consistent care and skill the plantsmen have prepared for it as never before and the supply for the occasion never has been so extensive and beautiful. Hydrangeas, Crimson Ramblers and lilies form the bulk of the supply. There are thousands of them that will be ready for the demand, which is already in evidence, but none too many for the extraordinary requirements of the Memorial day.

Next Monday will be the New York Florists' Club's bedding plant festival. There ought to be a good display. The veteran critic, Birnie, is master of ceremonies. There will be less discussion and more entertainment than usual. The Brooklyn park board, with its idiotic expulsion of children from its greenhouses, will get "what is coming to it" from the president and his committee and other matters of importance will receive consideration.

Elliott & Sons stay in their old quarters on Dey street a month or two longer, gradually moving to the new place on Fulton street. The auction department will continue meantime at the old stand.

The sale of orchids at Cleary's last drew crowds on auction days. Few familiar faces among the buyers these days. At both places seldom a retail florist can be seen. The crowd is largely suburbanites and the prices obtained are often excellent, thereby.

The streets down-town are full of vendors of all kinds of nursery stock, often "fearfully and wonderfully" labeled and much of it thoroughly warmed and dried in the afternoon sunshine, until one's heart warms toward the unfortunate countryman who goes home "weary and heavy laden" with great expectations.

The big seed stores that cater to the retail public have had and are now having a wonderfully prosperous season. The places of business are all crowded and in some of them last week standing room was at a premium. There is no city in the world with such an enormous and constantly growing suburban clientele. The tendency of the seedsmen and bulb men is northward. Perhaps this is in anticipation of the Pennsylvania terminal at Thirty-fourth street.

Ralph Ward & Co. have advanced several blocks. Elliott goes to Fulton street, Marshall & Co. are on Twenty-third street. Clucas & Boddington Co. are now located on the same great retail thoroughfare. Arthur T. Boddington is on Fourteenth street. Thorburn and Henderson remain on Cortlandt street, opposite each other on what will always be the great retail street of lower New York, though the transfer of the Pennsylvania traffic northward must certainly be a disadvantage later on.

The convention at Washington already is a subject for discussion in New York. The Washington florists are full of enthusiasm. Great plans for the reception of a record breaking crowd and over-bubbling interest are manifest. The delegation from New York should exceed that at Buffalo, which certainly was a credit to the metropolis, nearly 200 strong. There is no more interesting city than Washington. I predict an attendance of 2,000.

W. C. Krick and his sister have the sympathy of the trade in the death of Henry Grebe, of Jamaica, a man of excellent character and a successful florist, who while temporarily insane shot himself last week. He leaves a widow and two children. He had an abundance of means and everything to live for.

The woman florist has been a success in this country generally and has shown good financial ability. So the failure of Miss Cohn, of 17 East Fifty-ninth street, just at Easter time is hard to understand. The assets consist of $20 in uncollected bills, but the liabilities total the unusual margin of $3,989.

Bowling.

The Bowling Club held its last session at the old rooms on West Thirtieth street Monday evening, President Traendly in the chair. It was decided to hold a decisive session at the club rooms next Monday evening in the Grand Opera House building, where the club will be re-organized and arrangements made for weekly practice at Thum's alleys on Broadway and Thirtieth street, close to the wholesale section. In this way the team to represent the club at Washington will be selected. With a more convenient center for practice, and an evening more satisfactory to the majority, it is hoped a representative team may be got together to do itself and the Florists' Club honor at the August convention. The final scores of the old guard made Monday evening were:

The Market.

Prices are generally lower than a week ago. In spite of social activity, the quantity of flowers now coming in is more than the market can properly digest and naturally a good many find their way into the hands of street vendors or remain in the ice chests. Of course, good stock sells readily, as it always does. Beauties are quite plentiful and lower in price. The shorter-stemmed grades of Brides and Bridesmaids are very cheap, many being sold at $1 per hundred. While especially good carnations have realized $3 to $4, the average price for good stock has been $2 to $2.50. Enchantress, Fair Maid, Lawson and Nelson Fisher, owing to the comparatively cool weather, still come of fine size and excellent color.

A few violets still come in, principally doubles, but the present week will see a finish of these. Bulbous stock sells decidedly better than a year ago. Quite a lot of white and colored stocks come in, but these are hard to sell except at Decoration day, unless of extra good quality. There is a fair demand for lilies for society weddings, of which we have had a good many the past week. Sweet peas are very abundant and cheaper. Adiantum is lower, as the new

Florists' Club Field Day.

The field day of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club on April 29 to the well known pot manufactory of A. H. Hews & Co., Cambridge, attracted over forty members, who journeyed thither by electric. Some two hours were spent under the guidance of the members of the firm in inspecting their excellent plant. Particular interest centered in the section devoted to machine made pots, sizes from one to six inches being turned out here. The expert workmen in charge of the machines can make 10,000 of the 3-inch and 4-inch sizes per day. Sizes from six to twelve inches are made in plaster moulds and the largest sizes by hand. A good average day's work is fifty pots of the 18-inch size. The annual turnout of pots is in the neighborhood of 10,000,000. These are shipped to every state in the union, as well as Canada. Some are also sent abroad. As illustrating the careful packing done by this firm, in a recent shipment made to Seattle of 20,000 pots only three were found cracked.

In addition to flower pots, immense quantities of seed and bulb pans, both square and round, orchid baskets, jardinieres, umbrella stands, ornamental vases in a number of designs and other classes of work are manufactured. The quality is of the very highest. The firm is the oldest of its kind in America, having been started in Weston, Mass., in 1765, moving to Cambridge in 1868. Commodious as are the present quarters, with the steadily increasing trade an addition to the plant will be needed in the near future.

The clay used is obtained within five minutes' walk of the factory in seeming limitless quantity. About thirty tons per day are used. About 100 hands are employed and several travelers are kept on the road.

After the factory had been inspected from "top to toe," an adjournment was made to the offices, prettily decorated for the occasion, where the visiting delegation enjoyed a first-class collation provided by the firm. Souvenirs in the form of miniature flower pots, bean pots, etc., were handed out in quantity. After the inner man had been satisfied with the good things provided, James Wheeler on behalf of the club, voiced their thanks for the generous hospitality shown. Three cheers and a tiger were given with a will and every one, as he journeyed homeward, felt that he had spent a most profitable and pleasant afternoon.

The speaker at the June meeting of the club will be M. H. Walsh on roses. Much interest is being manifested in the picnic being planned for June. As ladies will be included, a royal good time is anticipated.

Exhibition.

Owing to the halls of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society all being rented for the first week in May, the exhibition which should have been held on May 6, was put forward to April 29. Owing to the lateness of the season this proved too early for much of a display of outdoor flowers. Of collections of narcissi and tulips J. O. Christensen was the sole exhibitor, winning first in each class. James Stuart, gardener to Geo. F. Fabyan, had a dozen magnificent herbaceous calceolarias, specimens three feet across and showing splendid culture. He secured first and second prizes with these. The same exhibitor took first and second for six fancy pelargoniums with excellent plants, his best varieties being Alice Love, Mabel, Nellie Hayes, Lady Duff, Linda, Purity, Ophelia, Mrs. Ashley and Miss Henderson. Mr. Stuart was also the sole exhibitor of three azaleas, for which he secured second prize.

Robert Marshall, gardener to E. W. Converse, showed three splendidly flowered pots of Amaryllis vittata, one carrying seventeen spikes. These secured a cultural certificate. He also had a batch of nice spiræas. Thomas T. Watt received a cultural certificate for a capitally flowered plant of the old but not often seen Saccolabium ampullaceum, and Robert Cameron a first-class certificate for the new Impatiens Holstei, not previously shown here, which promises to be an excellent commercial variety. J. B. Shurtleff and Mrs. E. M. Gill had the best collections of pansies, the latter also making a general display. For thirty varieties of native plants Mrs. Arthur Clark and Miss Isabell Shattuck took first and second. There was a fine lot of forced vegetables, the cucumbers and lettuce being especially good. C. H. Metcalf showed a dozen cucumbers, which were the finest types of White Spine we have seen for a long time.

Various Notes.

The Boston Sunday Globe, which has been giving a series of articles on floriculture, very intelligently written, from the pen of W. K. Wood, of West Newton, had an excellent illustrated sketch of William H. Elliott, the "Asparagus King," and his establishments at Brighton, Mass., and Medbury, N. H., in its issue of April 30.

Prospects are good for baseball games between the rival flower markets. The stall-holders at Music Hall place are taking the initiative in the matter.

Carnation growers commenced planting out their stock this week. In this connection we note that in spite of "deterioration" talk, Lawson is being heavily planted. Growers of rooted cuttings report a wonderful demand for this variety.

Farquhar & Co. report that their stocks of Lilium Philippinense, longiflorum and Harrisii at their new nursery in Porto Rico are doing finely and are absolutely free from disease.

Harry J. Cannell, assistant gardener on the estate of W. S. Spaulding, Pride's Crossing, Mass., was struck by a train and instantly killed near his home on April 23. The deceased was 34 years of age and a native of Dorsetshire, England, having been in the vicinity of Boston about fifteen years. He leaves a widow and baby for whom great sympathy is felt. This is taking a practical nature, as a subscription among the gardeners and florists on their behalf testifies. For some time the deceased has been suffering from melancholy and his friends fear that in a state of temporary insanity he may have committed suicide.

Alexander McKay will grow chrysanthemums and carnations in his new house now being erected, dimensions of which are 31x300. He will later grow roses.

Colonel Charles Pfaff, a well known exhibitor at the Boston shows, through his gardener, George Melvin, has just sold his fine estate in South Framingham to a syndicate and has purchased Mrs. A. W. Spencer's estate, where Alex. McKay has been in charge.

J. T. Butterworth is shipping some fine seasonable orchids to Carbone's and other high class stores.

Forest fires, which have been numerous this spring, owing to the dryness of the season, have threatened several greenhouse plants. That of the H. A. Stevens Co. had a narrow escape very recently and considerable damage to their stock was caused by smoke. The fire was caused by sparks on the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. and that company seems disposed to settle for damage done.

W. N. CRAIG.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The volume of business in the fashionable retail stores is steadily declining. The quality of cut flowers is excellent for May, with prices fairly well maintained. There is always at this season a large quantity of stock that brings small return, reducing the average price considerably. Quality tells heavily even now, the good stock averaging well, when cost of production is considered. The feature of the rose market is the arrival of the first new crop Beauties, exceptionally fine flowers on short stems, sent by Carl Jurgens, of Newport, R. I., to the Leo Niessen Co. This company is also receiving Miniature gladiolus and is very strong on valley.

Albert Woltemate, of Germantown, is sending well finished fancy blooms of white snapdragon to S. S. Pennock. Sweet peas are exceptionally fine, although a little too plentiful. Easter lilies and callas are numerous and not in demand. This week smilax continues scarce. Orchids are a little more plentiful.

The New Decorative Green.

I had the pleasure of seeing some sample cases of southern huckleberry branches at the Leo Niessen Co.'s this week. It bears a pretty, rather delicate green leaf, with tiny white blossoms, and should prove a good substitute for wild smilax, which disappeared with the advent of Easter. There is good reason to believe that the huckleberry will stand well. Used in conjunction with spring blossoms, it should be a great aid to the decorators.

Easter Echoes.

A good deal of interest has been expressed in the sales of Easter plants by the department stores. The general feeling appears to be that these sales are detrimental to the business. One of our most prominent florists, however, believes that this view is a mistaken one. He cites lilies as an example. The market price for lilies in pots was 10 to 12 cents for each bud and bloom. The department stores as a rule paid 9 cents. They bought in quantity, taking the plants as they came and counting all the buds. They sold them at 12 cents, considering the plants more in the light of an advertisement than as a money making investment. The result of these department store displays was a big advertisement of Easter plants. Many persons seeing them went at once to their regular florist and ordered what they had most fancied. It was instanced that the sale of azaleas fell off considerably in some of the large retail florists' stores as a result of the azaleas not being on sale in the department stores.

I am inclined to think there is much truth in this view of the case. A very large percentage of flower buyers buy plants because they want them, not because they are cheap. When quality is good and price fair they prefer buying from a reputable florist.

A leading wholesaler comments unfavorably on the Easter quotation for American Beauties in this column of $5 to $6 a dozen. He says it should be $5 to $7.50 a dozen. That is true; a few hundred of the best Beauties were sold at $7.50 a dozen, but it has never been the practice of this column to quote prices beyond the average. By some error the price of daffodils last week was marked too low.

Club Meeting.

Tuesday's meeting of the Florists' Club made up in interest what it lacked in attendance. Burbank's achievements as a hybridizer was the subject of a paper read by Edwin Lonsdale. There was a general discussion afterward. Both paper and comments were full of interest. Conard & Jones Co., of West Grove, exhibited some nice plants of Baby Rambler from small pots. Antoine Wintzer, who grew them, described their characteristics and those of some other new varieties, closing with a spirited appeal for home roses. He was warmly applauded.

Various Notes.

James M. Thoires, of Camden, had a most satisfactory Easter. He was obliged to secure a fresh stock of Easter lilies, both cut and in pots.

The Philadelphia Carnation Co. has about planted all their young stock out in the field. Harry Crawford says they are a very promising lot of about 40,000.

R. G. Palmer is once more in the city, selling flowers to his old customers.

Robert Scott & Son have repaired the damage to their new house caused by the cyclone. They fully expect to have it finished next month.

Julius Wolff, Jr., has had a large number of decorations and weddings, following an excellent Easter.

Robert Jameson will leave F. & H. Mergenthaler and return to Joseph Heacock.

Frank Miles Day will give an illustrated lecture on "An Italian Garden" before the Germantown Horticultural Society next Monday evening at Association Hall. Better come.

I regret to chronicle that the senior member of the firm of Hoskins & Giles, of Reading, died last week. He was buried on Monday.

M. Rice & Co. report that they are exceptionally busy on orders for bridal baskets, wedding gates, church ropes, etc. Their April business was a record-breaker.

TORONTO.

The Easter Trade.

Now that Easter is over and we have had ample time to get full reports as to the business done, we are able to say that it was a greater Easter than ever. Saturday was an ideal day for business, though it might be added that Friday was a grand combination between snow, rain and hail, and the retail men report Good Friday's sales as being low.

Those who believed that there would be more Easter lilies on the market than would be used were doomed to disappointment. In fact, many of the growers were filling orders at the last with lilies that were without even one developed flower. In roses and carnations the supply was not nearly equal to the demand. In bulbous stock there was an oversupply in some lines, but everything was cleaned out fairly well. Violets were short. We might also mention that smilax was practically out of the market and something else had to be used for church decorations.

Various Notes.

J. S. Simmons has just finished decorating and remodeling his store, and has a place that is a credit to Toronto and, I might add, would be a credit to any city.

Dunlop had a large Easter display of flowering plants decorated in a most artistic manner with fancy Porto Rican mats and new tinted ribbons. His American Beauties were very fine and he reports good business in all lines.

S. Tidy & Son report having done a larger business in baskets, baskets of flowers and plants than at any previous Easter. Their stock in this line, was new and very tasty. Mr. Tidy visited several American points just before Easter, purchasing these goods.

W. Jay & Son had a fine display of plants from their own greenhouses.

R. Mearns, Parkdale, reports that he had to duplicate his orders many times in order to supply the demand, especially for good flowering plants.

Miller & Son, of Bracondale, as usual had an immense stock of Easter lilies. This was considerably cut down by heavy orders received from Buffalo, Chicago and other points. On Saturday they were out of all salable plants.

Grobba & Wandrey, of Mimico, had without exception the best bulb stock sent to the Toronto market. Their supply of Easter lilies was exhausted a week before Easter, as they had been coming along steadily since early in March, but they expect to have a continuous supply for the summer months.

The Toronto Floral Co. and W. J. Lawrence sent in their usual supply of good roses and carnations.

Easter business has been followed up by considerable stir in society, with a visit from His Excellency, Earl Grey, the governor-general, and Countess Grey, and a number of notable social functions were held in their honor, together with state dinners, etc.

The Market.

At the close of last week receipts were shortened up, principally on account of the difficulty in getting stock from the depots by the old-fashioned process of carrying it under one's arms, but cool weather also had an influence and some of the growers report the heavy spring rose crop as coming off. But at the beginning of the present week receipts were much larger; in fact, much larger than the demand, and the market was pretty well glutted with all kinds of material, including roses and fancy carnations, the prices on which averaged very low. There are thousands of belated Easter lilies which are very hard to move and the receipts of callas show no diminution. Although the season for indoor bulbous stock is supposed to be over, there are, nevertheless, large quantities of tulips which have hard work in competition with the outdoor stuff. There is lots of arbutus. The one scarce item is smilax. There is so large a supply of adiantum that considerable quantities go to waste. The wholesalers are becoming anxious to dispose of ferns because the new crop is at hand and considerable quantities of cold storage stock remain.

At the close of last week business was more than could be handled under existing conditions, but this week has started in dull. It is likely to continue so until Friday.

Strike of Express Drivers.

The long anticipated and inevitable strike of drivers employed by the express companies came on the afternoon of April 27 and left the wholesale florists without means for despatching the afternoon shipments. No union teamster would touch an express box and no non-union teamster dared to. Hence it was a case of the florist packing the box to the depot as best he could, by street car or on his back. It is no small task to "hustle" a box with 2,000 carnations or so, a mile or more to a depot, and it was inevitable that many large and some smaller shipments should be failed on that first evening and the next day. At all the depots there were lines of pickets to turn back all express matter and some boxes of flowers failed to get through but most of them did, one way or another.

On Friday there was a meeting of the wholesalers at the office of the Benthay-Coatsworth Co. to talk over the situation. The alternatives of joining in the fight by getting police-guarded wagons or trying to do business by the grace of the union were offered. It was decided to try the latter course first and a committee was appointed to draw up a letter calling attention to the perishable character of the stock and emphasizing the statement that most flowers are for funeral purposes. This was signed by all the houses and presented to Business Agent Barry, of the express drivers' local. His answer was that shipments marked "funeral flowers" would be allowed to pass the lines. As to in-freight he took the position that if the express companies brought it to the city, it was up to them to make delivery. This was inconsistent with his concession to outgoing boxes but at the moment was not open to argument. These facts were set before a second meeting of wholesalers Saturday morning and the Florists' Teaming Co., Fred Lautenschlager, general manager, promptly organized, hiring union wagons and successfully passing the lines with huge loads of "funeral flowers." Mr. Lautenschlager's services are highly appreciated. The wagons handled 125 boxes the first afternoon and solved the difficulty of outgoing shipments, but left the incoming stuff in as bad a way as ever. A committee was appointed to try to arrange a way to get the in-freight handled, but as yet it is a case of everyone for himself in getting his stock out of the depot the best way he can. There is a great deal of stock close enough to town so that it is brought in by wagon or by messenger and a little trouble has so far served to get hold of express consignments, so that business is practically uninterrupted, although conducted at increased expense. The express companies have begun making deliveries under police guard but there is no telling, however, at what moment existing arrangements will be upset.

The trouble all grew out of a strike of nineteen garment workers at Montgomery Ward's last November. They induced a sympathetic strike of Ward's teamsters. After a short time the teamsters abandoned the garment makers and offered to go back to work. Ward's wouldn't take them back. That was rubbing it in, from the union viewpoint, and unions and employers lined up for a big fight. The trouble spread as fast as teamsters were ordered to make deliveries to Ward & Co. It is estimated that 3,500 drivers are now out.

Strike Notes.

The first day of the trouble Poehlmann Bros. Co. had a lot of boxes to go out on the Illinois Central, the depot a mile and a half from the store. They found an expressman who said he would make the trip if a police escort could be had. Police headquarters were called up and a request made for "a few policemen." In a few minutes a sergeant and sixteen patrolmen appeared. Needless to say, the trip was made in safety. While police protection was possible, as a rule the wholesalers were very reluctant to resort to it, as it might have forced the flower trade into the center of the fight. It looks to be easier to do business outside the storm center. And after the trouble is settled the wholesalers will have use for the friendship of the express drivers.

When the trouble is over the express companies will be deluged with claims. Probably forbearance in this matter will be appreciated and a leading commission man suggests that instead application be made for release of charges on delayed stock as more likely to profit the growers and get good service in the future.

their stock comes from New Castle, Ind., by express. For several days the cut went to another market but now they get along without much trouble by carrying the stock away from the depot in bundles, the regular procedure with all houses.

Bassett & Washburn have done all their shipping from Hinsdale, the Burlington making connections one way or another for about all points, as the express companies can still make transfers from one road to another at the Union depot.

Vaughan & Sperry get in most of their stock by express and have had troubles, for they could not get boxes out of the depots. In some cases they repacked the stock in a telescope valise and got it out that way.

E. E. Pieser says he thinks $500 worth of stock was lost in the mass of incoming express matter which quickly accumulated at the depots. Nearly every house had one or two consignments which either were not found at all, or had spoiled through delay.

At E. H. Hunt's they are proud of the record of having got off every shipment the day the strike was called, but they smile when they think of the roundabout way they had to route some of them.

Probably receipts are very nearly normal now except that outdoor stock, such as lilac, etc., is shut out as being too bulky to handle.

Weiland & Risch have been carting their stock in from Evanston. Poehlmann Bros. Co. has two teams making daily trips to town from Morton Grove, thirteen miles.

For a couple of days Wieter Bros. and Peter Reinberg packed considerable stock at the greenhouses and shipped from Ravenswood and other neighboring express offices.

One South Water street dealer undertook to move a lot of strawberries marked "funeral flowers" and provoked a riot.

"wrestling" boxes to the depots, the growers have been performing the annual "stunt" planting carnations in the field. Some of the growers began field planting two weeks ago.

Percy Jones, manager of the Flower Growers' Co., has secured good telephone service at the Market by having separate instruments for incoming and outgoing calls and a boy in attendance upon the incoming calls.

Poehlmann Bros. point to some longiflorums as the equal of any ever seen in this market but which were too late for Easter.

J. A. Budlong is still cutting Boston Market in fine form. It will take a good white carnation to displace this on their place.

E. F. Winterson Co. has repainted and rearranged the store, much improving its appearance. John Degnan has been on the sick list for a couple of days.

George Reinberg is still cutting heavily of Beauties but now a good part of the cut is short. He had all long at Christmas. He also has a nice cut of Liberty.

John Zech says he is very well satisfied with the way business comes to him.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is getting in some very nice candidum lilies.

C. W. McKellar is still getting some very fair single violets for so late. Randall still gets Hudson river doubles in considerable quantity.

E. C. Amling is getting some very fine sweet peas.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

A very unsatisfactory state has marked the business of the past week. Shipments have been very irregular, of unsatisfactory quality, and not nearly enough stock to supply the demand. There has been an unusually brisk call for choice stock and a large list of weddings and receptions have kept the florists busy. A good report of stock cannot be given, owing to the irregular manner in which some of the shops have received their supplies. Bulbous stock is almost off the market. Violets are very scarce and of poor quality. Sweet peas are coming in and are of first-class quality. A big demand for bedding stock keeps the growers going and better prices are received than formerly.

Various Notes.

W. L. Rock, W. J. Barnes and S. Murray were appointed a committee of florists to work with the executive committee of Convention Hall to make out a premium list for the flower show which will be held the week commencing November 13. A large meeting of the florists was held last week and everything will be done to make the show the best of its kind ever held here. George Kessler will be superintendent.

Ed Humfeld did an immense business during Easter week and has his hands full these days, filling his bedding orders. He is rapidly clearing his houses of stock.

The street merchants have disappeared from the business part of the city and will be seen no more until around the holiday season.

R. S. Brown & Son are having their hands full these days filling orders, and are sending out some of the best stock to be seen here. Will Bridgeland reports business as larger than for some years.

John Vesey is sending in some very fine sweet peas and has contracted his entire output. Mr. Vesey reports business as very satisfactory.

WHOLESALE GROWERS AND SHIPPERS OF CUT FLOWERS, 33-35-37 Randolph Street, — CHICAGO.

A. F. Barbe reports business as very good and his Easter trade everything that could be desired.

The growers are complaining that it is almost impossible to procure pots enough to care for their stock, and are wishing that some good pottery would locate here, where a large business would be assured.

We understand that one of our leading seedsmen is about to embark in the retail flower business and is making arrangements to remodel his store, preparatory to the fall trade.

NARCISSUS.

CINCINNATI.The Market.

For so soon after a holiday, trade is unusually good. There is a lively demand for all kinds and grades of stock and at good prices. The market keeps cleared out well and there are very few left-overs each day. Business is ahead of last year for this time.

Lilies took a big drop; $6 to $7 per hundred will buy them now and they do not go well at that. There are great quantities of them on the market. Bulbous stock is about done for this season. What little comes in is pretty poor, mostly Easter left-overs.

Carnations are good and there are none too many of them. Roses are coming pretty strong, especially Brides and Maids. They are of fairly good quality. Beauties are in good crop and the quality is first-class, especially the long-stemmed ones. They sell well.

Smilax is scarce and so is asparagus. There are plenty of fancy ferns and leucothoe sprays. Adiantum is plentiful and sells slowly.

Various Notes.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Society will be held May 13, when a good attendance is expected.

John Bower, formerly engaged in the florist business in Hillsboro, O., but now in the printing business in New York City, was a visitor.

H. D. Edwards, of Newport, Ky., who has been very sick, is slowly recovering.

The opening of May-Stern's new furniture house called for a large quantity of flowers, the greater part being supplied by Julius Baer and Fred Gear.

C. J. OHMER.

BALTIMORE, MD.Easter Trade.

On all sides gratification over the Easter results is heard. Few complaints are made, either by wholesale or retail dealers. Plant and cut flower trade increased equally. Some of the stores had a few plants left unsold but they amounted to very little considering the quantity handled. In fact, most reports are that everything sold out and more could have been handled.

Carnations were not as plentiful as had been expected and many more could have been sold. There was a good supply of roses, with plenty of short stock left over. Callas were short in supply but there were enough Harrisii to meet all demands. A note in a daily paper that violets would be practically over and sweet peas would be the flower for this Easter created quite a demand, although there were thousands of violets, shipped here from out of town, retailed at $3 per hundred, and more could have been sold. Very few cut hyacinths and tulips made their appearance but what did show up found ready sales. Good smilax was scarce but there was plenty of asparagus of both kinds. More strings were shipped in than could be handled and some went to waste.

Business since Easter has been keeping up very well, with plenty of social activity and a number of weddings, causing a good demand for all kinds of fine cut stock, of which there has not been an oversupply, in fact some days a big shortage.

A. F.

CROMWELL, CONN.Death of Frank A. Pierson.

Frank A. Pierson died on Saturday evening, April 29, after a week's illness with cerebro-spinal meningitis. He was a son of A. N. Pierson and popular with all. Several years ago he set up in business for himself and had built up a prosperous place.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—Walker & McLean have largely increased their trade in the past two years. They had the largest stock at Easter ever seen in this city and did a big business. Funeral work is heavy right along.

The man who gave you the Wild Smilax.

Something New

Now that the season for Wild Smilax is over and no more stock can be supplied, I wish to call

Branches of the Huckleberry Tree

as a most elegant Decorative Green. It is largely used by the Florists of the Pacific Coast, Washington and Oregon in decorations. The branches are FLAT, very thickly furnished with exceedingly lustrous, green leaves and it seems to adapt itself to almost any position in decoration that the Wild Smilax can be used in.

As the introducer of Southern Wild Smilax, I think you can give me credit for knowing a good thing when I see it, and I am convinced that in Huckleberry Branches you will have a very beautiful substitute for the Wild Smilax, of great value to you through the months of May and June. I am anxious to get the verdict of the Floral Trade on this introduction and offer to send you a Case on Suspicion, price $2.50 per case if it suits you, nothing if it does not.
Will you try a case on these terms? Yours very truly,

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., C. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 23rd annual meeting will be held on the St. Lawrence, June, 1906.

LARGE sizes of caladiums are reported scarce.

EXPRESS shipments of seeds have been tied up for a week at Chicago because of the teamsters' strike.

At southern points the season is pretty well at a close. Totals are very satisfactory and stocks well cleaned up.

THE absence of a surplus at California growing points the past season has resulted in quite an increase in acreage.

COUNTER sales are at their height just now and the scarcity of trained help is felt more severely than at any other time.

WITH a good many catalogue houses April subtracted something for the gain in business shown in March but May starts well.

THE wholesale seedsmen have closed the book of the season of 1905 and are busy with the stage settings for the season of 1906.

THE man who thought he was going to get "steen" dollars a bushel for sweet corn before the end of the season has been disappointed.

In the pea and bean growing district of Michigan some seed has gone into the ground. Conditions are favorable.

It is stated by a Kinsman, O., paper that John Lewis Childs paid Frank Banning $4,000 for the Reuben H. Warder gladiolus, Mr. Banning reserving a certain amount of stock for his own use.

HERBERT G. TULL, of the H. A. Dreer Co., is pushing his action in the Supreme Court of New York to determine which, policyholder or stockholder, has right of ownership in the Equitable Life's big surplus fund.

REAPPRAISEMENTS OF SEEDS.

On April 27 the Board of General Appraisers announced the following reappraisements on seeds from Cooper, Taber & Co., London, exported November 18:

Dwarf Curled kale, entered at 75 shillings, advanced to 80s per cwt.

Purple Top Strap Leaf turnip, entered at 38s, advanced to 40s per cwt.

Milan Purple Top turnip, entered at 84s, advanced to 100s per cwt.

Milan White turnip, entered at 100s, advanced to 110s per cwt. Add bags.

STOCKS AT QUEDLINBURG.

The following is from the Quedlinburg, Germany, correspondent of the Horticultural Trade Journal:

The wholesale seed season, now at an end, has been about an average one. Many sorts were sold out soon after the beginning of the season, while others have left considerable surplus stocks.

For the following the demand was very brisk, and more or less exceeded the supply: Peas, Daisy Gradus, these two sorts were the very scarcest; then Witham Wonder, Duke of Albany, William Hurst, American Wonder, Abundance, Champion of England, Sunrise, Dr. McLean, Nonpareil, Stratagem and similar varieties; Scarlet Runners exceedingly scarce; Painted Lady, very scarce. There was also a shortage of the following, beetroot: Egyptian Turnip-rooted, Early Blood turnip, Long Blood-red; carrots, principal sorts; celeriac, chervil, cress; cucumbers, half-long and short varieties; leek; lettuce, a few of the leading sorts; onion, all sorts, excepting white; spinach, nearly all sorts, mostly thick crumpled-leaved round-seeded; parsley; radish, nearly all varieties.

Whereas for the hereafter named articles the demand was below or far below the supply: Peas, many of the early round-seeded sorts; beans, some of the large-podded dwarf and running varieties; borecole; cabbage, cucumber, some of the long sorts; endive, kohlrabi, lettuce, several kinds; parsnip, turnips, garden or table sorts.

For most of the sorts the demand for flower seeds was nearly equal for some below, and for several far beyond the supply. Scarce, and very scarce were nasturtiums, Phlox Drummond, sater, some of the finer varieties; marigold, French and African; wallflowers, some varieties; Alyssum Benthami compactum, and procumbens; ageratum, coreopsis; candytuft, chiefly Empress; Delphinium cashmerianum and nudicaule; nemophila; Salvia Patens; Wahlenbergia grandiflora.

MR. FERRY FAVORS YOUTH.

The following interview is clipped from the Press, of Santa Barbara, Cal., dated April 22:

D. M. Ferry, the largest seed grower of the country, is in the city from Detroit, Mich., with Mrs. Ferry and maid, with rooms at the Potter hotel.

"I am out here for climate, not speculation," said Mr. Ferry yesterday. "I made that same remark thirty years ago to a man who is now one of the wealthiest residents of Redlands. I went into that country by stage before the Southern Pacific had built its line, and he was showing me a fine stretch of land between his home and the proposed railroad line, and told me that he could buy the whole tract for $1.25 an acre. It is now the city of Redlands and is worth many hundreds of dollars an acre.

"My business sprang from a small seed farm started by myself when a youth. Like Mr. Potter of this hotel, I believe in the ability of young men and have turned over all the responsibility of my business to men under 30 years of age. I am now growing seeds in almost every state of the Union. At Santa Clara we find the most favorable localities for the growth of onions, lettuce and carrots, and I have established several farms there.

"I was in Riverside thirty years ago and saw the first eucalyptus tree introduced into that locality. It was brought in a small cigar box. Magnolia avenue was then only on paper; but think what vast agricultural changes have been wrought in that locality, and here also.

"Southern California is a favored spot agriculturally. I come here every winter and spend two months in pleasure, and yet I can't help noticing how vegetables will grow here at all times of the year. The seeds that the eastern farmer can only use during a few weeks in the spring are good here at any time. We get a great many seeds from California for distribution all over the world. Thirty years ago I telegraphed to Mr. Fish, of Carpinteria, for a sack of lima beans and from the seed raised from that shipment beans have been planted all over the country."

Prize Essays.

At the recent meeting of the executive board in Washington, D. C., it was voted to offer three cash prizes of $25, $15 and $10 to be awarded for the first, second and third best essays, respectively, on the subject of "The Ideal Employer." The essays are not to exceed 1,500 words each. The prizes are donated by Treasurer H. B. Beatty.

Those wishing to compete are requested to send their completed manuscript to the secretary not later than July 15. The manuscripts should be unsigned, but the full address of the writer should in all cases accompany same. The awards will be made by a competent committee and the names withheld until after a decision has been made.

WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

PEORIA, ILL.

Easter weather was fine. There were large numbers of Easter plants, such as lilies, hydrangeas, Crimson Ramblers, spiræas, cinerarias, Azalea Mollis, Azalea Indica, lilacs, peonies and rhododendrons. Everything sold well but lilies.

There was a large supply of carnations, roses and bulbous stock which was above the average. Cut flowers did not sell very well Sunday, although it was a lovely day.

C. Loveridge had a large stock of Azalea Mollis, Azalea Indica, spiræas and Crimson Ramblers. He also had about 3,000 lilies.

J. C. Murray had a large supply of spiræas and hardy pot roses and about 2,500 lilies. He reports excellent trade.

Kuhl came in with a large stock of bulbs, hydrangeas, azaleas and about 1,800 lilies and he reports trade fine.

The Juerjens Floral Co. had a fine lot of lilacs, rhododendrons, cinerarias and peonies, having no opposition in these goods. Everything was sold out clean. They also had about 1,200 lilies.

Cole Bros., with a general assortment, report trade fair. C. W. E.

FISCHER'S GRAND FREESIA PURITY.

A magnificent, snowy, glistening white, of very large size and great length and strength of stem: a dozen sprays making as fine a showing as a dozen large white carnations, and can be used wherever carnations can be used for decorative purposes. A truss bears from eight to eleven buds, of which six are frequently open at one time, making an immense flower. It is of great substance and bears shipping without bruising. Stems can be cut two feet long and are as rigid as sticks. It is very prolific in bloom, producing three to four side shoots of eight buds each besides the main flower. Bulbs no bigger than dried wax beans produce as large a flower as the largest bulbs, only the stems are shorter. It propagates very freely, producing from four to eight bulbs, all of which will flower the next year.

All growers of freesia should try this queen of freesia for when once grown you will want no other.

Price for large bulbs, $4.00 per 100;
$30.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate.
Discount on 5000 and over.

Various Comment.

The opinion expressed last week as to Easter business is more than confirmed by later news. All were satisfied and rejoice that for once we had fine weather for deliveries, so important a part of the business. Real good lilies were rather scarce and that is why many pronounced it the flower in greatest demand.

W. J. Palmer & Son engaged a large covered automobile or two and got out their immense stock in good shape. One Main street florist who is always to the front in advertising and enterprise, used four or possibly five wagons, but to impress the public with the enormity of his business had them labeled No. 5, No. 9, No. 11, No. 15. At any rate there was a No. 15. It looks big and hurts no one and shows a sharp, cute business tact of a kind.

There has not for many years been a longer or better season for outside work, tree and shrub planting, etc. From the middle of March to date it has been favorable for transplanting and a great deal of that sort of work has been done.

George McClure has a very large force at work and took a flying visit to New York and Philadelphia last week, looking up the nursery firms.

Since Easter business has kept up very satisfactorily, with weddings and social affairs, but we must have something different from overcoats and snow flurries to make the plantmen busy.

Our city fathers have once more cut down the amount appropriated for the maintenance of parks to such starvation dimensions that they cannot be properly cared for. What a reflection on our twentieth century civilization that such vast sums are needed for the police and such paltry amounts for beautifying our city. It surely won't always be so. Fortunately we have James Braik in the north parks and Prof. Cowell at South park, who make the best use they can of the means at hand.

I am glad to announce that J. J. Allbright, Buffalo's philanthropist, has the plans drawn for erecting three large greenhouses in addition to what are already on his handsome grounds. Nothing will be spared to make them the most up-to-date in every item that horticultural architecture can devise. Charlie Sandiford has done wonders in his present small houses. Now with treble the glass what shall we see? Here is a fortunate situation. A gentleman who loves the beautiful, and pays handsomely for it, and a gardener who does so well that his work and his products are a continual delight to the man who thinks the beautiful in art and flowers is an essential of life. W. S.

TAUNTON, MASS.

Easter trade was fully up to last year's average, if not ahead of it. Easter lilies were in best demand. Williams & Willard, of the Taunton Greenhouses, sold several thousand plants and had to buy to fill late orders. Azaleas were scarce, owing to the lateness of the season. Genistas, deutzias, marguerites, etc., sold well, also quantities of bulbous stock in pans. In fact, all well grown plants were readily cleared out.

Every year the demand is more and more for pot plants and not half the cut flowers are sold as in previous years. This is partly due to the local growers themselves, who have no object in pushing the sale of cut flowers when they have quantities of well grown plants for disposal. Carnations were, as usual, the best sellers in cut flowers, roses, valley, violets, bulbous stock, callas, etc., all being in some request. A great many more carnations could have been sold, but the growers state that high prices asked by the wholesalers prevented them from handling more. Five dollars was asked for anything in colors, which, with the possibility of getting poor stock, deterred them from buying. C.

THE Pennsylvania Horticultural Society has issued the schedule of premiums for the annual fall exhibition, November 7 to 11. Copies may be had by addressing David Rust, secretary, Philadelphia.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held April 25. The prize was for the best two plants of calceolaria. There was quite a keen contest but after considerable deliberation the judges awarded the prize to Wm. Scott. Only a short business session was held, to allow the members present to attend the lecture given by Professor Geo. T. Powell in the lecture room of the high school. This was held under the auspices of the society and was open to the public.

Professor Powell gave a very instructive lecture, his subjects being the propagation of trees and the culture of roses. A number of excellent drawings were used for illustration. On the subject of trees he dwelt chiefly on the fruiting kinds and spoke mainly on the careful selection of stock, illustrating very clearly the advantage of healthy parentage by showing the free growing and free fruiting qualities of plants taken from such in comparison with plants propagated from unhealthy trees or trees of undesirable habit. In that part of his lecture devoted to roses he gave a lengthy description of soils. He advised against a very general mistake in the planting of roses, that of planting too shallow, considering it advisable to plant grafted roses so that the graft would be at least three inches below the surface of the soil. In conclusion he gave some advice regarding the destruction of San Jose scale and strongly advised concerted action in fighting it.

Easter Trade.

Reports on Easter business average from ten to twenty per cent better than last year. Saturday was the only really pleasant day of the week, and was an extra busy one in consequence. On Sunday nearly two inches of rain fell, finally turning into snow. Church decorations were better than usual. At St. Leo's a notable feature was a cross nine feet high, formed of lilies and electric lights, done by Chapman. At the chapter house of St. John's Cathedral and at the Central Christian church lilies were used in large numbers. There is promise of the usual post-Lenten weddings, but no likelihood of any exceptional decorations.

All kinds of blooming plants sold well, the popular prices being $1 and $1.50 per plant for lilies and $1 to $3 on other plants. There was a good supply of more expensive plants for the few wealthy patrons. Azaleas were in good condition and sold fairly well, at prices ranging from $2 to $7.50. White azaleas were a drug but Van der Cruyssen sold well. Hydrangeas moved freely, the large ones retailing at from $5 to $15. The double tulip was a good seller, especially Murillo, in pans of one and two dozen, bringing from $1 to $3.

Among the novelties we noticed at the Park Floral Co.'s the Colorado columbine, also some Chinese wistaria in purple and white, which made a remarkably attractive display.

In the way of cut flowers, almost every kind were in demand, carnations having first call, followed by American Beauties and violets. Carnations were of good quality and sold at 75 cents to $1.50 per dozen. Prosperity and Enchantress were perhaps the most sought after. Beauties were not equal to the demand, but were of fine quality and sold at from $3 to $10 per dozen. Violets were comparatively scarce and not up to the usual standard, owing to the warm weather. They retailed at $2 per hundred.

The delivery question seemed to be a hard nut for some of the retailers to crack, and it is one of the most important at any holiday. The Park Floral Co., we noticed, made the delivery of their cut flowers Easter morning with an automobile, thereby giving all those who desired a chance to have their violets and other flowers for church service.

Various Notes.

N. A. Benson is cutting some fine Prosperity and Enchantress at present.

The Scott Floral Co. had an annex store at 925 Sixteenth street for the Easter trade. The Alpha Floral Co. also had an extra store on Fifteenth street.

Two opposing teams from The Park Floral Co. bowled a series of three games for a dinner at the Brown Palace Hotel on April 28, J. A. Valentine and B. E. Gillis vs. G. H. Cooper and E. S. Kennedy. Mr. Valentine's team, with a handicap of ninety pins, finally won out.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres., C. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y, Geo. O. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden, Ind., June, 1906.

THE nursery interests are profiting by the prolonged planting season.

J. J. HARRISON, president of the Storrs & Harrison Co., has been in Florida with his family for some weeks.

THE Peterson Nursery, Chicago, moved its down-town office to the Stock Exchange building, La Salle and Washington streets, May 1.

ON April 21, the Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O., had shipped over 150 cars, a record exceeding that of any previous season at the same date.

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, of Floral Park, N. Y., has bought the Paradise Nursery of Adolph Scharff at South Pasadena, Cal. Mr. Scharff has been in the business for years and will now retire.

THE Association of American Cemetery Superintendents, the members of which are large buyers of nursery stock, will hold its annual convention at Washington, D. C., September 19 to 22.

GEO. E. KESSLER, who was in charge of the landscape department at the St. Louis World's Fair, is now a member of the Kansas City park board. J. H. Hadkinson, superintendent of floriculture, is at Lincoln, Neb., at the State Fair grounds. Chief Taylor, of the Horticultural Department, is in Europe.

AT Webster City, Ia., an agent for the Watrous concern, at Des Moines, took an order for $35 worth of nursery stock from a Dr. Mahood, who in turn did dentistry for the agent to the amount of $25, taking the agent's receipt for the amount as part payment on the shrubs. On delivery the receipt was repudiated and the dentist has brought suit against Watrous to secure its recognition.

THE Illinois Central Railroad has engaged Mrs. A. E. McCrea of Chicago to go over all the lines of the company between Chicago, Sioux City, Omaha, St. Louis and New Orleans to plan and execute effects in landscape gardening on station grounds. Every important station along the lines of the company will receive attention. Flowers, trees and shrubs will be planted to get the best effects. Much attention will be given to lawns, and the color scheme for buildings will be gradually changed, the idea being to make the system pleasing to travelers and residents of the different towns and cities. The work will be under the direction of Vice-President J. T. Harahan.

NURSERYMEN'S PROGRAM.

Harlan P. Kelsey, chairman of the program committee of the American Association of Nurserymen, sends out the following changes for the program as published in last week's REVIEW.

Under Wednesday morning, June 14, 10 o'clock, change "Welcome to Indiana," Hon. Jesse Overstreet, Indiana.

Add "Welcome to West Baden Springs," Andrew J. Rhodes, Indiana, 15 minutes.

Also notice that under Thursday evening, 7.45 o'clock, the entire statement regarding the executive session is to be eliminated, as the United States Department of Agriculture has given permission that Prof. Hedgcock's lecture be made without restrictions of any kind, so please cut out that entire paragraph from the program, leaving the lecture under the same conditions as the other lectures on the program.

BEST STREET TREES.

In the annual report of the park commissioners of the city of Lowell, Mass., City Forester C. A. Whittet gives the following list of recommended street trees, stating that "they are named in the order of their desirability, although in some instances their preferment is somewhat a matter of taste:"

Wide Streets.	Narrow Streets.
American Elm	Norway Maple
Hard Maple	White Maple
Tulip Tree	Red Maple
Linden	Alnus
Horse Chestnut	Cucumber Tree
Sweet Gum	Ginkgo
Sycamore	Bay Willow
White Ash	Pin Oak
Scarlet Oak	Red Flg Horse Chestnut
Red Oak	Black or Yellow Locust
White Oak	Hackberry
Honey Locust	Hardy Catalpa
American Chestnut	Lombardy Poplar

Vegetable Forcing.

THE London health department has discovered that much typhoid fever is caused by eating watercress grown in polluted outdoor beds.

NEAR London gardeners have had the greatest difficulty in growing parsley, as the fully grown leaves are destroyed by a whitish mold. This disease spreads rapidly and for some years, with the result that in some places parsley can only be grown under glass. On examination of diseased leaves it was found that the injury was caused by a parasitic fungus, Plasmopara nivea, Unger, which produces its spores and spreads in the same way as the fungus which causes damping-off in the seed bed.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, May 3.—The market has been very erratic this week in consequence of express shipments being tied up by strike. Today head lettuce is $6 per bbl.; leaf lettuce, 25c. case; cucumbers, 35c. to $1 doz.

NEW YORK, May 1.—Cucumbers, 30c to 85c doz.; lettuce, 15c to 50c doz.; mushrooms, 30c to 60c lb.; radishes, $1 to $2 per 100 bunches; tomatoes, 10c to 25c lb.

BOSTON, May 1.—Cucumbers, $2 to $5 box; tomatoes, 30c lb.; lettuce, $1.25 to $1.50 box of three doz.; beets, $1.50 doz. bunches; radishes, 25c doz. bunches; carrots, $1.25 doz. bunches; parsley, $2 bu.

FUNGUS CAUSES LOSS.

Attention is often called to two very common diseases which greatly trouble tomato and cucumber growers in England. The leaves of the tomatoes show brownish spots and dry up, and dark olive-green velvety patches appear on the fruit, rendering them unfit for sale. This is due to an attack of the parasite Cladosporium fulvum of Cooke. The cucumber leaves are covered with dry spots, which increase, killing foliage and even the young fruits. This is caused by another parasitic fungus, Cercospora melonis, of Cooke. A cucumber and tomato grower near London, who was severely troubled with this disease year after year, calculated his loss at £3,000 each season.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

SAVING SEED OF TOMATOES.

In nearly all classes of plants that are regularly propagated from seed a great deal can be done toward the improvement of the strain by the careful selection of seed. The importance of this matter will at once appeal to the man who forces vegetables as soon as he gets his thinking cap on and begins to consider the matter carefully, as so much depends on the variety or strain of the variety that he is using. It is a great waste of time, energy and money to attempt to force a variety unsuitable for forcing; that is, a variety that won't adapt itself to the artificial conditions under which it has to be grown. On the other hand the better adapted the variety is for the purpose in hand, the more profit there is in the growing of it.

New varieties are annually being placed on the market and it is a good plan to try some of them, but to a limited extent only. In tomatoes quite a number of new varieties have been introduced in recent years, all cracked up as improvements over existing varieties. Some have done fairly well; others have been rather disappointing. Our experience is that none of the newer aspirants can beat the old Lorillard variety when a good strain has been secured and that a good strain can only be secured by careful selection. You can depend upon getting the variety true in most cases if you are dealing with a reliable seed house, but the seed is apt to be saved from all sorts and sizes of fruit, as the seed grower can hardly be expected to make the most careful selection in regard to the size and shape of the fruit from which he saves his seed, nor to make a critical examination of the growth or habit of the individual plants.

In almost any batch of plants raised from seed there will be more or less variation. Sometimes the variation is only slight, but the man who has his eyes open can readily pick out the plants that show some improvement, either in habit of growth, freedom of setting, in size, shape or solidity of fruit, or in earliness of ripening, and by being careful to pollinate the flowers of the plant with its own pollen only, a majority of the seedlings resulting will in all probability show the characteristics of the parent plant. Even if no variation appears, by the selection of well-shaped fruit alone the strain can be considerably improved. In any case it takes time and patience, as it is only by slow stages, not by leaps and bounds, that the desired end can be attained.

W. S. CROYDON.

HARDENING OFF.

The gradual hardening off of tender plants, such as tomatoes, egg plants and peppers, is a matter that should receive more attention than it usually does. If operations in this direction are not already under way, no time should be lost in beginning, so as to allow sufficient time for the gradual exposure of the plants before setting out time comes. For this work the cold frame plays a very important part. In the frames the plants can be kept rather close for the first few days after being taken from the greenhouse. According as they get hardened to it, the air can be gradually increased, at first through the day and later by leaving on air at night, until the plants can be left entirely uncovered.

If fully exposed for a week previous to the time of setting out, there will be very little chance of the plants receiving any check at planting. On the other hand, if they are taken out of the warm greenhouse, where they are sure to be more or less soft, and exposed at once to the outdoor atmosphere or set out before proper hardening off, a check is sure to occur from which it will take the plants some time to recover. Especially is this the case with egg plants, it takes them so long to recover lost vigor. Tomatoes do not suffer quite as much, though careless treatment would give them a considerable set-back and make the plants look sickly for some time.

It sometimes happens that the weather is warm enough through the greater part of the month of May that all this precaution is unnecessary, as the plants would not suffer much if set outdoors at once in sheltered situations, but, as we cannot read the signs of the weather ahead of time, nor tell when sudden fluctuations of temperature may occur, it is always best to be on the safe side and have the plants where they can be readily covered up on the arrival of a cold snap.

If it is not convenient to use frames for this purpose, some other means should be devised whereby protection can be given. A rough framework with some sort of movable covering will answer the purpose; even cheese cloth if nothing stronger can be provided, will keep out a good deal of cold, and unless the frost is all the heavier is usually sufficient to protect any of this class of plants, after the middle of May at least.

CARNATIONS

We offer first-class stock of the finest varieties.

Strong Rooted Cuttings

Variegated Lawson This variety which we are introducing this season we are sure will prove to be the very best variegated sort. Pure ivory white with delicate carmine pencilings. Mr. W. N. Craig, an authority on everything pertaining to horticulture, says that he knows that this variety will out-bloom the favorite, Mrs. M. A. Patten, three to one. It has the Lawson habit and stem, and is bound to give satisfaction. $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Red Lawson A bright red sport of Lawson that is bound to be popular, and will be grown where Lawson is popular. $10.00 per 100; $75 per 1000.

Cardinal Bright cardinal, or crimson-scarlet. Won first prize for best 100 scarlet, first prize for best 50 carnations any color, first prize for best 50 scarlet seedlings, Chicago. $12.00 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Fiancee The queen of pink carnations; in a class by itself. Magnificent flowers, strictly fancy in every respect. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

White Lawson We consider this variety, which we introduced last season, the most profitable white carnation ever sent out. We think it will outbloom any other white two to one. It has given great satisfaction. When the flowers are left on the plants until fully developed they are much larger than Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson. We believe this will occupy among white carnations the same place that Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson does among pink carnations. Remember that we are headquarters for it. Splendid stock ready for immediate delivery. $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

Fred Burki Recommended as an extra free-blooming white variety and a claimant for popular favor. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Lady Bountiful A magnificent white of last season's introduction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Daheim Dark crimson. Grand stiff stem. Calyx never bursts. Free and abundant bloomer, developing very quickly. We consider this the best all-round crimson carnation. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Mrs. M. A. Patten This grand variegated carnation has given splendid satisfaction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Enchantress Freest blooming, bringing highest market prices. In great demand. $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

Prosperity A magnificent fancy carnation. $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

We are now prepared to book orders for 1906 for the Coming Scarlet Victory. This is a real bread and butter variety. An early, free and abundant bloomer, with good stem; a magnificent keeper and shipper; flowers of the largest size, commanding the very highest price. This is going to be a money-maker. Orders will be filled in rotation, as received. Delivery beginning December next. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

PACIFIC COAST.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—F. Ludemann is starting on a trip to Europe, expecting to be absent about three months.

THE HERALD, of Oakland, Cal., devotes a column to "exposing" the green carnation and gives the article the head "Foolish Florists Fully Fool Flower Fanciers."

SAN JOSE, CAL.—It was in 1882 that E. H. Bourguignon started in business. He now has one of the largest ranges of glass in Southern California, growing roses, carnations, violets and other stock, besides much outdoor stock.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—Frank Shibley has called the attention of the Board of Health to the green carnations, alleging that the dye used for coloring is poisonous. The Board ordered a warning to be given the public regarding coloring of pinks and notices will also be sent to various dealers to cease using the alleged poisonous dye.

PORTLAND, ORE.

We believe it is safe to say that Easter trade compared well with most other years; at least we have not seen anyone to contradict the statement. It might have been some better or much worse. The lateness of Easter and the almost tropical heat kept us guessing as to what the outcome would be. The seasons seem to be twisted and spring and summer are still doing battle for supremacy. The plant market was decidedly limited and the lily carried off all honors. Not a diseased plant was seen and thousands were sold. Cut flowers showed up plentifully at the end of the week, but failed badly on Sunday when the mercury rose to within five degrees of the hottest day last summer. The only available outdoor flowers having a commercial value was the Narcissus poeticus, and they have defied Old Sol like an Indian. Ordinary prices prevailed except for the choicest carnations, which were inclined to be scarce.

Generally speaking, business averaged as good as could be expected under the existing conditions. It was a "hot time" Easter, and from a financial standpoint the milliners undoubtedly had the best of it, for the ladies were out with their new hats and carrying large bunches of Scotch broom, lilac and dog wood, which adorn our beautiful heights, the paradise of all lovers of nature, especially in the spring time.

The Lewis and Clark Fair was well patronized, too, and 10,000 people paid admission to the grounds on Easter Sunday.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business has taken a decided drop since Easter. We are being treated to a season of real California spring weather and the present influx of all sorts of stock is as heavy as I have ever seen. The growers have made an effort to keep the prices firm, and did so up to Easter, but since then they have gone to smash. Business for Easter was fair but not as good as most of the retailers anticipated. The growers held the prices of lilies in pots up to a good figure until within three days of Easter, when lilies that had sold at $9 per dozen could easily be purchased at $6 and even less. For the reason that this has been such a favorable season, out of town shipping orders have been light. I think it is safe to say that Easter business on the whole was twenty per cent less than that of last year.

Various Notes.

John Vallance, of the Cox Seed Co., is on a month's tour of the northern portion of the state.

John Young, of Berkeley, had splendid success with his crop of Easter lilies. He had them all engaged two weeks before Easter.

It is to be hoped the retailers will interest themselves in the efforts of the growers to check the tendency of Japanese firms to grow stock and that the meeting called for next week will be well attended.

Miss Wallenberg, the successor of Miss Fescheimer, on Sutter street, reports a very heavy Easter trade.

The Board of Supervisors has made a map of the city streets and published a list of the sidewalks upon which the basket men may peddle flowers.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society held its fourth annual exhibition in connection with the big nature show of the Forest, Fish and Game Association at the Mechanics' Pavilion. This exhibition is usually held in the Ferry nave, but was transferred in order to make an added attraction to the already great show. The Golden Gate park displayed the largest and best exhibit of

THE WILD MORNING GLORY.

We have had such a favorable growing season during the past six months that the usually large production of noxious weeds has been more than doubled and the growers who cultivate outdoor stock have had a hard time to find anything except tremendous growths of all kinds of troublesome and dangerous weeds. Since the warm weather early in the year, we have had a succession of showers every few days and not only has it been almost impossible to get on the ground to cultivate but when the weeds were hoed down they almost immediately took root and in a couple of weeks were as big as before.

It is during such seasons as this that young asters, cosmos, stocks, bachelors' buttons and other hardy stock must be carefully watched or they will be completely crowded out by these pests and, unless they are cleaned out every couple of weeks, they speedily weaken the plants intended to be grown. I have referred above to the various wild grasses, mustard, etc., which are much easier eradicated than the worst of all California pests, the wild morning glory, Convolvulus arvensis. We have another variety that is indigenous to our southern country, C. occidentalis. Of the two I do not know which is the worse. We have in this state many thousands of acres that at one time were cultivated with profit until the miserable morning glory took hold and it became absolutely valueless for ordinary vegetable or flower growing. It is within the past fifteen years that it seems to have taken such a hold in this locality and its eradication has proven more than many a grower could accomplish, and he simply gave up in disgust and changed his location. A peculiar thing I have noticed is that it always prefers good ground and is rarely found in any quantity where the soil is naturally poor. It is possible to get rid of it, as I have demonstrated, but it cannot be accomplished in less than two seasons and possibly three.

I have cleared completely several acres that had been abandoned. My method of procedure was as follows: The morning glory being a deep rooted perennial, lays dormant during the cold season and early in March begins to send out shoots. With the beginning of warmer weather in April its growth becomes wonderful and at this time I had the ground thoroughly hoed and the tops completely cut off just below the soil. I repeated this every two weeks until about the end of September, when they no longer sprouted out. Again the following spring it commenced to branch but it was very plain that it had received a great check, as the stems were not near as heavy nor of such rapid growth. I continued as before, every two weeks, and by the end of the summer very little morning glory was to be seen. The following spring only a few slender shoots showed themselves and they did not appear again after the third or fourth hoeing. In this strenuous way I reclaimed, although at a considerable cost, several acres of the best land I have ever handled. G.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The week following Easter has been very satisfactory. The numerous weddings, with the regular business, made things quite lively among the stores, although the market men complained some until Saturday, when the May day trade from churches cleaned them up in good shape. Of course there was quite a drop in prices, but that is to be expected and the dealers will make that up by the increased volume of trade which usually comes with the lower prices.

Various Notes.

Randolph & McClements report last week as a busier week than Easter, their whole force being compelled to work several nights to get through.

Theo. F. Beckert continues to send the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. quantities of his fine Spanish iris. Wm. Lauch is consigning the same firm a large cut of very fine carnations.

Yellow narcissi are in bloom outside, but there is not much sale for them at any price.

The usual spring shortage of smilax is being felt in this market. The wonder is someone does not arrange for a spring crop.

Wm. Falconer is the busiest man in this section. Besides the regular spring work, that is immense, he is planting large lots of trees and shrubbery, laying out new roads and changing many of the old ones, and in fact is working out a general transformation of Allegheny cemetery. With the natural lay of the land under his masterly hand, we predict it will soon be one of the handsomest cemeteries in the country.

Some of our growers are busy planting carnations, but one of them got asters out before the big hail storm and will not cut from that lot this season.

Geddis & Blind Bros. have received a large importation of palms and bay trees which unpacked very nicely.

The bulb men who are still working in this territory are compelled to offer inducements in order to make sales, as it is doubtful if any of the growers made any money out of the bulbs this season.

The I. S. Crall Co. is considering rebuilding its entire plant in a new location, as the real estate at the old place is HAGERSTOWN, MD.

Glorious weather, the kind that "coaxes the muse and drives the quill" of the spring poet, is responsible for the brisk sales of bedding plants. No sooner was the Easter rush over than spring trade followed in its wake in a manner that leaves no ground for disappointment.

Henry A. Bester has cleared ground for the erection of three additional rose houses, each 25x60 feet. It is Mr. Bester's intention to plant more carnations than heretofore, the increased demand during the past season necessitating the increase in glass.

Wm. Bester will build a violet house to cover 20x60. A deal has been recently consummated whereby Mr. Bester acquired a lot, ice house, stable, etc., immediately adjoining his property. This deal, aside from the value of the land itself, offers its special advantages to Mr. Bester, inasmuch as it insures his own place against the intrusion of undesirable neighbors, and his greenhouses against the close proximity of a dwelling house that might prove a menace to the production of flowers.

Ex-Mayor Henry Holzapfel has his hands full between his active interests in an automobile factory and his greenhouses. However, he possesses the happy faculty of accomplishing an immense amount of work without apparent hurry or worry. His experience in the horticultural department at the Columbian Exposition in Chicago and more recently in municipal affairs in his own city has taught him the lesson of systematizing things. Mr. Holzapfel will make some improvements about his place, chief of which will be the replacing of the old boilers by more modern ones and of larger heating capacity. X.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The result of weather conditions was a shortened crop at Easter and good prices. While most of the bulb crop was over, there were plenty of pans to be seen at the stores and they sold out clean, as did the shortened crop of azaleas. There was a big lot of lilies, yet before noon on Saturday three of the stores were sold out, and trying to buy more lilies. Crabb & Hunter shipped large quantities to Chicago and elsewhere as pot plants. Cross was in fine with Ramblers and hybrid perpetual roses in full bloom, most of which were shipped. Henry Smith had several extra delivery rigs out, and the Grand Rapids Floral Co. made things hustle with their auto delivery, the only one among the florists.

Carnations, while in good supply, were not sufficient to meet the demand, while roses did not sell near as well, and lots were left over.

A sad event was the death of Nicholas Freyling, who had suffered so long from cancer of the stomach. The Florists' Club sent a large wreath made by Chas. Chadwick. All the florists who could attended the funeral.

Eli Cross has a new house 300 feet long, which he has planted to radishes and cucumbers.

There is talk of trying to take some united action with the Fruit Growers' Association, to try and induce the express companies to handle cut flower and plant shipments more carefully. The complaints of shipments smashed is sad to relate. G. F. C.

"DISAPPOINTED" because your order for 2,500 Fiances was filled with only 500 late rooted cuttings? So were we, but we are not worrying about it. "Why not?" Oh, you see we have and THAT never disappoints. We will plant 2,000 more of it than we otherwise should, that's all. We have sent out 125,000 RED SPORT since January 1st ON TIME and if we have any customer who feels he has not received full value for his money, he has failed to say so.

RED SPORT has filled all the requirements of a first-class "holly-berry" red carnation, early and continuous bloomer, giving its heaviest cut around the Christmas holidays and during the winter months when red is wanted at paying prices; a fine flower that never splits, on a long wiry stem that well supports the flower, a strong, vigorous grower, an easy doer and an all-round money-maker. We are still cutting 3,000 RED SPORT blooms a week that are bringing top prices.

We have 20,000 RED SPORT plants in 2 1/2-inch pots ready for planting in the field or on the bench inside, which if kept well stopped back until Sept 1st, will give a heavy cut for Christmas, which we can supply for immediate delivery for $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. Satisfaction guaranteed.

MILWAUKEE.

It is "an ill wind which blows nobody good" and the strike of express drivers which has interfered with business in Chicago has had the result of largely increasing the demands upon this market. A great many buyers in the northwest who get their regular supplies in Chicago and only call upon this market in exceptional cases have sent orders here regularly in the past week and the increased demand is such that it has cleaned up all stock readily. At the same time there have been increased receipts, because growers were informed of the difficulty in getting incoming shipments through the picket lines in Chicago. The result has been that we have had one of the liveliest of recent weeks and could have handled even more stock to advantage. There are good receipts of carnations, but rose crops seem to be pretty well off.

READING, PA.

The mild, balmy weather of the past few days will in all likelihood hasten the planting of carnations in the field. Some growers have already commenced the work.

Easter trade was the best in years, surpassing last year's by at least twenty-five per cent. Spring trade is decidedly promising and the florists seem well equipped to meet all demands.

Hoskin & Giles seem to experience no "let up," being more than ordinarily busy with funeral and decoration work.

J. C. Bauder, who succeeded Mr. Beers about two years ago, is well satisfied with the results of his undertaking. Since assuming charge of the place he has practically doubled the volume of business.

Irwin Anderson, located near the largest cemetery in the city, reports a good trade all along the line. Mr. Anderson, although an eastern man, has spent a good many years in the west, having been connected in one capacity or another, with some prominent florists' establishments, both east and west. His experience as a grower is thorough, and his venture therefore seems an assured success.

Mr. Hoskin, of Hoskin & Giles, who has been seriously ill for the past three weeks, died on April 29. X.

ROCK ISLAND, ILL.—H. H. Hensley, of the Rock Island Floral Co., says that Easter trade was first class and that they sold everything they had in both plants and cut flowers.

ALLENTOWN, PA.

"The best Easter in years" is the report heard on all sides. J. T. Horn & Bro. report a "grand clean up." Blooming plants of all sorts sold exceptionally well, Crimson Ramblers especially taking like the proverbial hot cake. Lilies were in their prime and did not go "a begging." Nor was there a shortage of either roses or carnations.

Ernst Ashley seems well pleased with the result of Easter week and looks forward to a profitable spring trade.

J. F. Horn & Bro. never had things in finer condition, nor were they ever so well equipped to handle both their retail and wholesale trade as they are this season. While carnations are their specialty, they also grow a general line of plants for their retail trade. Their mammoth establishment at Rittersville is well worth visiting.

E. M. Kroninger's "fancies," such as Prosperity, Enchantress and Lawson, find ready sales both in the New York and Philadelphia markets notwithstanding the periodical gluts that enable the curbstone merchants to offer carnations for a mere song.

A call on John E. Haines, of Bethlehem, proved interesting indeed. His namesake, his own red seedling carnation, is a winner. Mr. Haines assures me that, aside from its being a high grade flower, it is likewise remarkably productive.

BLUFFTON, IND.

Easter trade was very good. Everything was cleaned up. Excessive funeral work made stock scarce and prices ruled high. Spring trade has opened fine. Myers & Co. have already sold over 60,000 cabbage plants. They have now 16,000 square feet of modern glass, with tile bottom benches for roses and carnations. They will house about 6,000 carnation plants for the coming season, mostly red, white and pink Lawson, Enchantress, Harlowarden and Prosperity. Lawson has done exceedingly well with them and shows no tendency toward running out. It has been giving blooms three to three and one-half inches in diameter, with good stems, color and substance. They select their cuttings carefully, using blooming shoots only. They tried one solid bed for carnations, but do not think it was a success and will use cinders in the bottom next season. Carnations do not like wet feet all the time and solid benches do not dry out quick enough.

GLENVILLE, O.—Casper Aul is putting up a modern six-apartment brick flat building.

IMPATIENS OLIVIERI.

It is about a quarter of a century since the universally popular Impatiens Sultani was introduced from Zanzibar, and in the intervening time we have had numerous additions to the genus. I. Olivieri being one of the latest. In habit and general particulars it is somewhat like I. Sultani, but forms a large specimen, three feet or four feet high, with very succulent stems. The flowers, also in shape a good deal like those of I. Sultani, are much larger, being nearly three inches across, and in color lilac-pink with a light center. Though it flowered for the first time at Kew two years ago, it is already pretty generally distributed. Of the balsams incidentally mentioned above that have been introduced since I. Sultani, may be named several varieties of that species, particularly carminea, salmonea, and Episcopi, whose rich carmine-purple blossoms caused specific rank to be claimed for it at first; I. auricoma, with yellow flowers; and I. Hawkeri, which made a great sensation twenty years ago, but has now almost dropped out of cultivation. The flatly expanded blossoms of this are bright red, shot with purple.—Gardeners' Magazine.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.

The florists in this city were probably as successful in holding stock back for Easter as any in the country, as the lilies, Dutch hyacinths, etc., were the finest shown in years. Everything sold well, including marguerites in 5-inch pots for church decorating, azaleas and roses in pots.

The finest display ever shown here, and probably the most complete in the state, was at the Clark greenhouses which were sold last December to J. B. Braidwood, who is son-in-law of Wm. Clark and manager of his business for a number of years. The old palm house which was used for years to accommodate stock for decorating was cleaned out, sash painted white, glass tinted light green and then arranged with odd shaped benches, each bench being stocked with some special plant and grouped in such a way that each played its own part in a general decorative scheme and made a most beautiful show. This place proved an attraction and drew large crowds every day during Easter week.

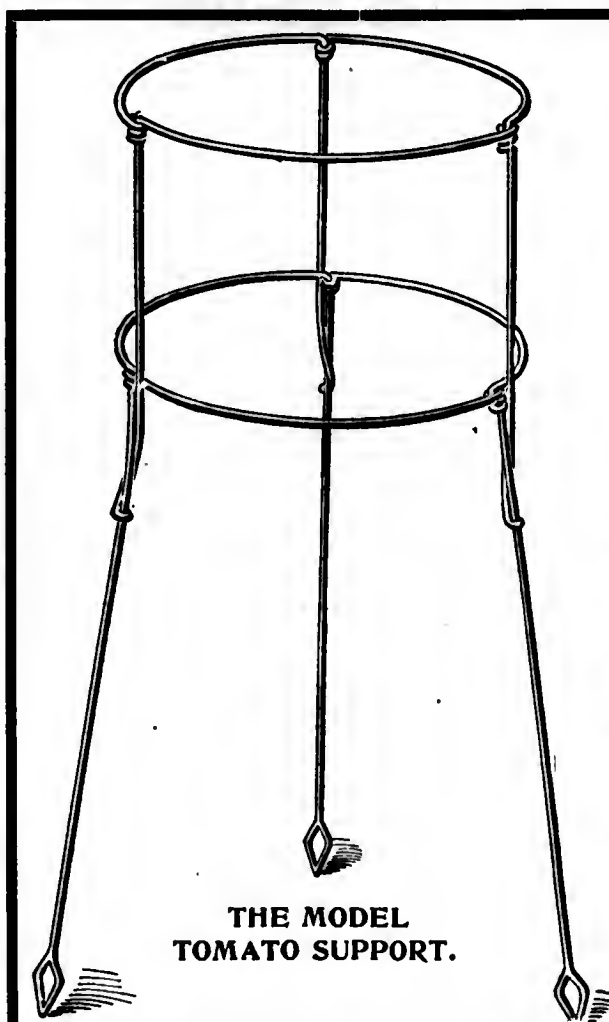

A. C. Rott, who was in business for a number of years at Bloomington, Ind., is now in charge of the cut flower department for Mr. Braidwood.

The Pikes Peak Floral Co. and F. F. Crump both stocked up well on cut flowers and blooming plants, the former having a nice lot of Ramblers in bloom which sold well. E. NEFF.

DES MOINES, IA.

A great many Ponderosa lemons have been sold throughout the state and the daily newspapers have taken up the question as to who has produced the largest fruit, each in turn claiming the championship for its town. B. Kemper, of Muscatine, had a fruit weighing sixteen ounces which held the blue ribbon until a reporter for the Des Moines Capital discovered one in the greenhouses of the Iowa Seed Co., which weighed nineteen and a half ounces. They have a stock of 2,000 plants.

PAINESVILLE, O.—Otto Hacker has retired from the service of the Storrs & Harrison Co. after being with the firm for fifty years. He was in the greenhouse department.

BOILER AND PIPING.

I am going to build two connected houses, 18x75, walls five and one half feet, ridges thirteen feet, glass on east end, boiler shed covering the west. I would like to divide one house for roses and mixed stock and one for carnations. How would you partition the houses and how pipe them? I have a No. 15 Hitchings corrugated fire-box boiler. Will it be large enough to maintain the required temperature in weather 20 degrees below zero? C. L.

I am not quite certain that I understand your proposition. You say the houses are connected and yet say you wish to divide one house for roses and mixed stock and one house for carnations. If the houses are connected, i. e., are as one room, I should separate them by a board or brick wall, so that they will be the same as independent or isolated houses. One can then be piped sufficiently to maintain a proper temperature for roses and mixed stock while the other can be given the proper amount of radiation for carnations. The rose house will require sixteen runs of 1 1/4-inch pipe, while the carnation house will require fourteen runs of 1 1/4-inch pipe to maintain a proper temperature.

The two houses require 1,080 square feet of radiation, or a boiler with a rating of 1,100 to 1,200 feet of radiation. The No. 15 Hitchings boiler is rated to carry 600 lineal feet of 4-inch pipe, or about one-half the amount of radiation required in your plant. Two boilers of this size will do your work.

CLEVELAND.

Copies of a New York "financial" journal have been received, containing the following:

It is always a treat to visit the place of the Gasser Co., at 234 Euclid avenue, Cleveland. The display is always beautiful at this leading florist's place and there is very often something new. The Gasser Co. have a new rose this season called the General MacArthur. Its color is a brilliant red, even brighter than the Jacqueminot rose, and the odor is the most delicate and fragrant ever produced in roses. It is what the florists term a remarkably fine grower and unusually productive, with a long bud, a good long stem, and is very hardy. The Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind., first grew the General MacArthur.

This rose is growing rapidly into favor, not only in Cleveland but throughout the entire west, although this is its first season. It will soon be as great a favorite at New York and throughout the east.

The store of the Gasser Co. is a very fine one, spacious, well arranged for flower display and well lighted and ventilated. There is a fine double window space, always containing an attractive flower display. Mr. Gasser is in California, but he is well represented by L. F. Darnell, who is an expert in floriculture.

BROWN, CREAM AND PINK.

A plant of Spiraea Gladstone and about a dozen sprays of pink stock, with some wood ferns, constitute the decoration of the brown fiber basket shown in the accompanying illustration. The long cluster of stock starts at the rim of the pot and follows the direction taken by the handle of the basket, and finishes just above the cross piece. This is an important point to remember in the decoration of any object. Let the flowers, green or any other decorative material, conform to the shape of the object. Many branches and elaborations may be added, but the main trend of the decoration must start from some point on its surface and show its connection therewith from first to last. Where one spray of the stock ends and another begins need not appear. Let the heavier stems follow each other, wired here and there to the supporting handle, while the side sprays take care of themselves. Following out this idea of keeping to the object decorated, one can see that if the top of this spray of stock should be allowed to fall out to the right of the top of the handle instead of turning in to the left, as it does, the result would be very awkward. On the opposite side three or four stalks take similar positions with a shorter effect. Light sprays and buds fall irregularly at the sides of the basket.

It is easy to overdo a trimming of this kind to the extent of producing a top heavy appearance. "Just enough" should be the watchword. To know when to quit is as important as knowing where and how to begin.

Someone might think that the flower of the stock used out of water in this way would scarcely keep long enough. But if the stems are well filled by standing in water several hours, or over night, they will last well for a whole day.

Now, a word as to that everlasting subject of coloring: The creamy white of the spiraea settles itself easily into the union with the brown of the basket, both having considerable yellow in their composition. The introduction of the light crimson pink of the stock is an easy blending and much closer than that of such a pink as is seen in Enchantress carnations, which is a scarlet pink.

To display such a basket to advantage, plenty of space and a yellow or green background is best. GERTRUDE BLAIR.

GAINING TRADE.

The retail florist who sits down and waits for trade will lead a life of leisure, if not ease. If you want business, go after it; it won't come to you uninvited, not in these days of keen competition. A great many retail florists do not know anything of the power of advertising. They don't know how to go about gaining trade by any other than the slow method of building up patronage by doing the best they know how whenever they get an order. That's well enough in its way, and should always be made a part of any plan looking to more immediate results. Here is a method which has brought good results to the progressive florist who uses it:

He is located in a small city where his store is on the principal street of out it has a small but attractive advertisement offering the same prices, like the one produced on the next page.

But how can he make any money selling good stock at those prices? He doesn't, at least not much. But he doesn't sell many at those rates, although that's a little ahead of the story. He buys his stock in a wholesale market and pays from $1 to $1.50 per hundred on the carnations, $2 to $3 for the roses. When he pays the lower prices he sells for even less than the prices mentioned per dozen. When a customer enters he finds two vases of roses and two of carnations on the counter; the other stock is in the ice box. One lot of roses has a tag showing the advertised price, the other, manifestly better goods, is marked at a higher price. It is the same with the town and he has the help of a lively little newspaper. He keeps up an attractive window and usually there is pasted on the glass a neat sign, "Carnations, 20c dozen," or "Roses, 35c a dozen." When the weekly paper comes the carnations. Three customers out of five look at the flowers, appreciate the better quality—which the florist wisely refrains from pointing out—and buy the better goods. If there happens to be a run on the advertised grade and the supply is exhausted the better stock is sorted over and the poorer flowers put in at the cheap price, even at a loss. No one who enters looking for the advertised flowers is ever disappointed. It is a plan worth experimenting with for anyone who does not feel that the "tone" of his establishment will be lowered by the offer of cheap prices. Of course, the advertised prices will depend on your location, quality of goods, character of the neighborhood, etc.

BRITISH HAIL ASSOCIATION.

The greenhouse owners in Great Britain are insured against loss from hail by an organization now in its eleventh year. Harry J. Veitch is chairman and, with the directors and secretary, has held office continuously since the inception of the concern. The income for the tenth year was in the vicinity of $15,000. The assets are now over $100,000 and the reserve fund is $45,000. The association, like the American one, supplies a form of insurance not to be had elsewhere but, unlike the society which has done so well for greenhouse owners in the United States, this is a limited liability corporation and pays a profit to its shareholders, last year seven and one-half per cent.

piece of cypress the smallest knot and up to date see no sign of decay, even in the most abused places, like gutters. This clear cypress would be too expensive, but what is called "pecky" cypress is now largely used for benches. This quality would, of course, have some knots but is not unsound and, while few, if any, have used it for benches long enough to testify to its durability for that purpose, we believe it remains sound at least three times as long as the quickly rotting white pine or hemlock. The latter has about doubled in price within eight years, costing now $20 per thousand feet, and this pecky cypress can be bought within $1 or so of that price. There is no question, if building a wooden bench, which you will use.

Circulation of Air.

Now I said earlier that light was not the whole question. The fullest light, we know, is a necessity for producing blooms in the dark days, but there is also, we think, a good deal to consider about the circulation of the heat or condition of the atmosphere in different parts of the house. In October and April, when air can be freely given, there may be little difference in the atmosphere of the house one foot from the floor or six feet, but it is between those months, when little ventilation is given and fire heat almost entirely depended on, that we think there is a purer, lighter atmosphere say five feet above the floor than there is one foot. I have previously had occasion to remark on the great health and vigor that many plants show on a shelf very near the glass and that there were other influences at work besides perfect light and that circulation and pure air were found, and had much to do with the free and robust growth of plants, near the roof.

The same principle will apply to plants on the benches and, therefore, I think that every foot you rise from the floor the more genial and purer the air. If the surface of your bench is thirty inches above the floor the top of your plant, rose or carnation, is three feet six inches and soon it is another foot and, though it may cost more, we believe there will be found a great advantage even in the little difference between a bed thirty inches above the floor and one only a foot.

The Right Height.

I want to say as modestly as possible that we have tried every bench described, from six inches of good soil right on the ground up to a bench three feet high, and, what is of more value to me, is that the best roses we ever saw and by far the finest lot of carnations in the depth of winter were on benches about thirty inches high. We are not going back to hemlock boards that will rot out in three years, but shall try the cypress. We do not attach any importance to the air space beneath the bench and will say, concluding this subject, that whether they be built of wood or of bricks or cement walls with tiles, keep them thirty inches above the floor.

Distribution of Heat.

It is quite true in connection with these benches that much depends on the plan by which the houses are piped. If the steam pipes are confined to the side walls, as they often are, then it is still more necessary that the benches or beds should not be too low, because the heat rises to the roof and the air near the

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Various Kinds of Benches.

The time will very soon be here for bench building and repairing and many are doubtless considering whether the old-fashioned, wooden table can be improved upon. If I could have the ideal bench for roses and carnations, and we may say also for plant benches, it would be of 4-inch socket tile filled with cement for legs, tee iron for cross pieces and hollow brick for the floor of the bed, with an edging of four or five inches of cement. Here would be a bench, if not everlasting, at least with unrottable material. Expense, however, is of great consequence to most commercial men and to avoid the continual rotting out and renewing of wooden benches has driven many to adopt the solid or semi-solid bed. The very great majority of greenhouses are detached, or have a dividing partition, and without a good space of glass in both the front and back walls the low beds are not at all suitable; they must be raised. In the large blocks of houses with no partition walls between them and only perhaps a 2-inch pipe supporting the gutters, the low beds get just as much light if the surface of the soil is one foot above the floor as if it is three feet. But light, in our opinion, is not the whole question, which we will come to directly.

A Very Good Bench.

A low wall of cement, say twelve inches high by three inches thick, and filled in with any material you have at hand, clinkers, ashes, stones or soil even with the top of the wall and then a floor of tile, with an edge of cement, must make a most excellent bench. The surface of such a bench would be eighteen or nineteen inches above the floor.

In some large establishments, instead of the little cement wall, they lay up four bricks. It may look neater than cement and perhaps is as quickly built, but the brick is much more expensive and certainly not more durable. Others make a cement wall a foot or fifteen inches high and fill in with rubble stone up to the depth they want for soil. Now this six to eight inches of stone, or coarse gravel or clinkers, must afford perfect drainage for the roots and as for the air at the roots, which it is claimed the drain tiles or the hollow bricks afford, we cannot believe that it is an essential. At the same time the tiles also give a perfect drainage and such a bench is much more pleasant to clean out and shovel off than the stone, gravel or clinkers and, if it can be afforded, we much prefer the tiles for a floor. Some believe so strongly in the tiles or hollow bricks for the floors of benches that they build as if for an ordinary wooden bench, but instead of boards for the floor of the bench they use tiles. This takes considerably more cross-pieces to support the tiles, whether you run them lengthwise or across, and after all, the wood, if pine or hemlock, is going to rot after a time.

and used almost entirely for some years for all kinds of horticultural structures, from the hotbed sash to a crystal palace, is now being used for bench building.

In the construction of twenty houses within fifteen years we have never seen in bars, ridge plate, gutters, or any other floor in the center of the house will remain stagnant. If the pipes are arranged as they should be, namely, one or two at the side of each bench or bed and returning on the other side, then there is not only a much more effective radiation, but every part of the house gets heated and a circulation of air takes place. I feel sure, backed up by some experience, that four 1-inch steam pipes at intervals of four or five feet apart are fully equal to six 1-inch pipes bunched close together on a side wall.

Use of Cement.

If you should use cypress for benches, don't fail to use plenty of water lime (hydraulic cement). The expense is not worth considering. A barrel at 75 cents will go a long way. Use it pure and just thin enough so that it can be spread on the wood with a stiff whitewash brush. Where wood lies on wood is the place that rotting occurs. The tops of the cross-pieces should receive a heavy coat, as well as the surface of the boards.

Some weeks ago I had occasion to say something in answer to a correspondent about concrete for cellar walls and floors. Now, making these low walls for the sides of benches is the same thing. They are much less expensive than brick. Sand in many locations is hardly worth considering and cement good enough for this purpose is worth from 75 cents to $1 per barrel. You can use four parts of sand to one of cement and, when that is thoroughly mixed (but be careful not to over-wet it) you can add as much crushed stone as you had of sand. This makes really one part of cement to eight of other materials, but you must remember that the stone has added to the bulk, has occupied space, but has not in the least weakened your concrete. The stone has absorbed no cement. It has only added to bulk. The smaller the wall, the finer the stone should be. If the wall is to be eight inches thick, stone as big as your fist can be used, but if only three or four inches thick then it should be smaller. The crushed stone I have in mind is that used by the asphalt pavement men. Concrete is daily growing in use in all structural work, and so it will in ours.

These remarks may seem premature to many who are just now driven to their utmost with the plant business, yet many also are pondering over beds or benches for roses and carnations.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

THE USE OF SULPHUR.

Dusting.

This chemical is commonly known as flowers of sulphur, sublimed sulphur and brimstone. Sulphur is an element, and is remarkable for its abundant occurrence in nature, in the uncombined state, and is found in combination with iron, as iron sulphide. In plants sulphur is also found in the form of sulphates, and as a constituent of the vegetable albumen present in the sap. Sulphur is entirely volatile at a high temperature, but very slightly volatile at ordinary temperature. It is insoluble in water, but soluble in carbon bisulphide. Sulphur has been known to horticulturists from the beginning of the twelfth century, and has been used extensively as a remedy against light fungoid diseases. It is used against mildew on vines, crops, strawberries and greenhouse plants, by dusting or blowing by means of bellows over the leaves. The action of sulphur is very mild and slow, and is only suitable for applying to slight fungous attacks and can be conveniently replaced with advantage by other more energetic fungoids as the copper salts, etc. Sulphur being non-poisonous is an advantage in its favor for applying to fruit crops.

Vaporizing.

The vapor of sulphur is very much more effective than the powder itself, and this is now being taken advantage of by many growers. The gas evolved from burning sulphur is very harmful to plant life; great care must be taken when sulphur is being vaporized that it does not catch fire, as sulphur vapor is very inflammable. Sulphur when burnt with free access of air forms a chemical compound with the oxygen of the air, forming sulphur dioxide, and this compound as stated above affects the plants. The sulphur should be placed in a receptacle which allows for no free access of air; the vessel must be capable of being heated to 836 degrees F., at this stage the sulphur boils and is converted into a brownish red, very heavy vapor, which, when disseminated into the air deposits minute microscopic particles of sulphur in every crevice and portion of the house which is being vaporized; the deposit of sulphur can hardly be perceived with the naked eye. This form of sulphur is the most powerful fungicide, and can also be recommended for killing red spider.—Horticultural Trade Journal.

to answer. It may be stated, however, that steam will cost less to install in a large plant and will give better satisfaction on long runs than hot water, but will require more attention. The steam will have the added advantage of quick cooling when not required after sunrise. If the cost of a night fireman is not too great an item, I should say use steam; if this is a very considerable obstacle, then use hot water. The system of heating used will depend somewhat on the character of the crop grown and the type of benches used. With solid benches on the soil, or such crops as lettuce and cucumbers, the heating can all be overhead. With some other crops it might be well to have a portion of the pipes beneath the benches, if they are elevated. I should judge about twenty per cent of the normal piping used in a house in the north should be sufficient for your purpose in a climate so mild as that of Florida. L. L. C.

INDOOR SUMMER CULTURE.

If you are going to grow part of your carnations indoors all summer it will pay you well to get them planted just as soon as you can. The young plants will take hold much better before the weather is extremely hot and they will be better able to stand the heat later on. If the house has good ventilation they will grow luxuriantly all summer and come into bloom early in the fall.

We handle only Mrs. Lawson this way and we consider it the proper way to handle that variety, although we shall try some in the field again. Good Lawsons are produced under both methods, so "you pays your money and takes your choice."

One thing is certain; you must have good plants to start with and you must not neglect those intended for indoor culture while you are planting the rest in the field. We try to at least plant them on the beds just as soon as we get through planting outside and sometimes we get a chance to do it before we finish outside. There are occasional rainy days when you cannot plant outside and that is when you should refill your benches intended for indoor culture. If there are enough rainy days you can plant them as well. There should be no shade whatever over these plants at any time. Plenty of ventilation and a mulch to prevent too rapid drying out is all that is needed. A. F. J. BAUR.

MAKING A START.

I am about to build two new houses for carnations. Having no houses in which to prepare the plants for next season, may I ask what course you would advise? Shall I get rooted cuttings or 2-inch pot plants? Would you pot the plants and plunge or plant in the open ground? I expect to be ready for planting in the houses by August 1.

S. C. T.

By the time this appears in print most of the wholesale carnation growers will have the bulk of their young carnations in the field, but if you can find the varieties you want, and in the quantity you want, I would advise you to buy the young plants from pots now and plant them in your own ground. The advantages are all in favor of this plan, as against the plan of waiting until fall and buying field-grown plants. The cost will be far less. You will be able to handle the young plants and care for them according to your own ideas during the summer and you can take them up as you need them in planting into the houses. I would not bother with rooted cuttings this late. You will be sure to lose a large percentage on account of the heat and, unless the season is exceedingly favorable, they will not make strong plants for early planting.

I would plant them into the open ground in preference to potting and plunging. If you are going to use solid beds you could pot them into 3-inch pots and as soon as you can get the beds ready plant them into the beds and leave the glass off until early in September. If you are prepared to water them occasionally this plan will work to perfection. A good mulch would keep them from needing watering very often. I would not recommend this plan with raised benches, however, as they would dry out too rapidly.

Three years ago we planted about 10,000 carnation plants on a spot where we intended building a house 45x175. We planted them in beds and left walks just as we intended to have in the house. During the summer we built the house over them, leaving the glazing until just before freezing. The plants were treated just the same as those in the field except that they were mulched in July to save cultivating. They grew well and produced fine crops of high grade blooms and they were far ahead of the transplanted stock up to January and just as good after that. This year we are working the same plan with a house 30x355 and we look for just as good results. Perhaps the greatest advantage in this plan is that you need not rush through your building as you have all summer to finish, just so you get the glass on and a steam pipe or two connected by the time it turns cold in the fall. That extra six weeks gives you a chance to take care of your other work so much better, and nothing needs to suffer. All the work on that house was done by our regular help except to cut and erect the sash bars, etc. A. F. J. BAUR.

SEASONABLE NOTES.

With the sudden and extreme fluctuations of temperature which we are likely to experience during the next month, the danger to young stock is multiplied and greater care should be exercised to prevent damage.

The strong and arid winds which are frequent dry out the pots rapidly and make close observance in that respect a necessity. Keeping the paths wet and all empty spaces on the benches in the stock house watered just the same as if they were occupied by young stock, will help to keep the air moist and cool.

Young stock should be set in regular rows on the benches after each picking over, so that watering and syringing may be possible. How often we see the plants in the stock house scattered over the benches in irregular groups or lying on their sides, suffering from want of water and becoming a prey to red spider, when an hour's work would put them in a position so they could be properly cared for.

As the weather gets warmer care should be taken that the young stock should never approach the condition of being pot-bound, as this is ruinous, especially to Beauties. A careful examination of the roots will be necessary at least once a week and when the plants require a shift they ought to be repotted at once or planted in the bench.

As there is always more or less of a mixture of varieties, especially where Maids and Brides are concerned, it is a good plan to let at least one bud develop on each plant till it shows color, when any mixture can be detected and relegated to its proper place. If this work is properly attended to while the plants are in pots it saves a deal of trouble when propagating time comes around again, and it looks so much better to have our varieties clear of mixture and enables us to supply the stock our customers call for with the certainty that no complaint will come back on that account.

Last season I was forced to purchase some thousands of Brides and Maids and specified the quantities of each. Well, I got the number of plants I ordered of each, but it would be a difficult matter today to pick out which were the Bride or Maid benches, so evenly are they mixed. This of course causes a whole lot of trouble and we cannot be too careful in guarding and keeping our varieties separate.

As the planting season approaches, all preparations, such as having soil, tools and repairing material ready, will greatly facilitate the labor of that busy season when every hour of labor means so much.

RIBES.

A NEW ROSE.

A. S. Swanson, of St. Paul, is growing a new rose which for productiveness seems to be something exceptional. The accompanying illustration shows a house containing two benches planted with this variety, a total of about 450 plants in their second year. The photograph from which this illustration was reproduced was taken on April 13 and in the eight days following 6,500 flowers were cut. The buds are formed in clusters and from five to ten on every shoot and for every flower cut at least five buds were removed.

Mr. Swanson thinks this rose is a great thing for Easter. The color is very closely that of La France. It comes with stiff stems, those of the first crop being somewhat short, from twelve to eighteen inches, but the next crop, coming about the first of June, gives stems thirty-six inches long. From the house shown in the picture 1,000 flowers had been cut in the end nearest the camera before the photograph was taken. In April, 1904, when the plants were in their first year, Mr. Swanson kept account of number of flowers cut. These totaled 3,060 for thirty days from 450 plants. He notices that the cut all comes within about two weeks. For the second year's growth the canes were bent down and some of them made as many as twenty good flowers each. The house has been inspected by many in the trade and no one thus far has ever seen anything like it.

GERANIUMS.

I should be pleased to see in the REVIEW an article on the growing of geraniums for the wholesale trade, both rooted cuttings and plants. I am interested in the wholesale plant trade and should very much appreciate some information from a practical, well-informed grower.

These universal favorites, as well as easily grown plants, would more greatly be missed than any one plant from our gardens. They submit to many abuses and everybody has his own way of caring for his geraniums, but they must have light. Heat with poor light and excessive moisture would be the very worst conditions for a zonal geranium or any of the pelargonium family.

Presuming that S. C. has reference to the zonal section, our ordinary bedding geraniums, then they will propagate any month in the year except perhaps June, July and August. In those months they would need keeping quite moist to prevent severe wilting and the tissue of the cuttings would get filled up with water and rot often sets in. Early in September we take cuttings from outside and put into 2-inch pots and place in a light greenhouse or cold frame. No bottom heat is necessary at this time, or any other, for this class of geraniums. If shifted at New Year's into 3-inch and in early April to 4-inch, these should make splendid plants by the end of May. In most cases a cutting can be taken off the top of each of these about the first of February, which, if shifted as soon as well rooted, will make a good bedding plant in a 3½-inch pot and a neat size for shipping. As far as price and profit are concerned, there is more in these smaller plants at $1 a dozen than the larger at $1.50.

We have, as retailers, mostly no space to give to old plants, but the man who wholesales can not only take off all the cuttings possible in September and October, but should at the same time lift these same cut down plants and put them on the bench in five inches of good soil, giving them space to grow. They will soon take hold and in a night temperature of 50 degrees and a light bench you will be able to take off at least three good batches of cuttings from fall to March.

The trouble with most all the young geraniums you buy of wholesale growers is that they are drawn-up, elongated, weak things. They have been grown too crowded and warm. In the winter months, whether for your own spring retailing or for shipping, 45 degrees at night is plenty and they must have light and ventilation whenever possible. When these succulent plants are in a low temperature they are often kept too wet and that makes them soft. Being on the dry side, and only watered when they are decidedly dry, makes them short jointed and hard and that is the condition a zonal geranium should be in if you expect a free-growing and free-flowering robust plant in the summer months.

A rather stiff loam and firm potting is essential at every stage of their growth. To use too much manure and induce a rank growth is a big mistake.

Now a word about packing these plants for shipping. Perhaps you have noticed that there is no plant that so soon suffers with yellow leaves if excluded from the light a few days. Even if left in the packing shed for forty-eight hours the leaves lose their color. Therefore, express is the only way they should be shipped. The small 2-inch or 2½-inch pot plants are the sizes mostly shipped in winter and nothing is easier. A tight box of moderate depth, well lined to keep out frost, each little plant wrapped in some pliable paper and then laid tightly in layers till the box is full. I say tightly, because there should be no chance for any plant to move which ever way the box may be tossed about. Any small plants, roses, carnations, verbenas, petunias or anything else, travel finely except that with carnations or plants with small tops, four plants can be put in one parcel instead of each plant singly. The principal thing is that there should be no chance of any plant moving in the box. Plants should be dry when shipped, never just watered. Moist would be correct, and the foliage dry.

We often have to ship a few hundred fine 4-inch zonals in full flower at bedding time. To pack these plants tightly in a closed box would mar their appearance a good deal, although no permanent injury would be done, but these we wrap in paper and stand in a box with the sides as deep as the tops of the flowers. There is a way which must suggest itself to everyone; that is, after the first row of plants is stood firmly in the end of the box, another tier can be put between the stems of these. The next row is stood on the bottom of the box, and so on. If compactly packed no foliage will be bruised or broken. Then the box is covered with a few strong strips, leaving plenty of space for the plants and flowers to be seen. Then I never knew an express man to turn the box on its side or on end, but they can stand other boxes on top of your box without harm and charge only reasonable rates.

Boxes of plants unprotected must be charged high. A few experiences in packing we won't forget. We once wired to an auction sale in New York to buy us 1,000 single petunias. They arrived in flats. The petunias cost $10. The express charge was $11. Wrapped in paper in a closed box 50 cents would have been the charge. We once ordered 200 pansies from some pansy man, "fine plants in bloom." They were poor little wretches. Three of them would not have weighed as much as one good bloom. A dozen were wrapped in a bunch, packed in the bottom of a box and then tightly nailed down. It took us half a day to run the whole conglomeration through a half-inch sieve and separate the little plants from the soil. I dare say we have made our own mistakes in days gone by. A good packer is a valuable man and it is a great advertisement for a firm when they gain the reputation of packing well without making expensive charges. We once received $400 worth of herbaceous plants from an English firm which has an international fame on some specialties. When unpacked it was a disgusting mass. There was neither moss, straw, hay nor paper and you could scarcely tell whether it was delphinium roots, sour kraut in an advanced state, or tripe.

Pot Plants.

Plants intended to be grown in 6-inch pots may be rooted any time for the next four weeks, the sooner the better in the case of such dwarf growers as Merza or Cheltoni. I believe that many florists could grow more plants of this class to their pecuniary advantage if they only would. An exhibition flower on a stem twelve to eighteen inches in height, with the foliage hanging over the pot, would sell at sight in many of our florists' stores, and yet they are never met with outside of an exhibition. Half the pot plants usually shown in the stores as such are not worthy of the name.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, May 10.—The market is still unsettled because of the strike but generally lower on greenhouse products. Head lettuce, 20c to 40c box; leaf lettuce, 15c to 20c case; cucumbers, 35c to 90c doz.

BOSTON, May 9.—Lettuce, $1 to $1.50 box of three doz.; parsley, $2 bu.; tomatoes, 25c lb.; cucumbers, $2 to $4.50 bu.; carrots, 80c to $1 doz. bunches; beets, $1.75 doz. bunches.

NEW YORK, May 8.—Cucumbers, $1.50 to $2.00 case; cauliflower, $2 to $4 case; lettuce, 50c to $1.25; mushrooms, 25c to 50c lb.; radishes, 75c to $1.25 per 100 bunches; tomatoes, 10c to 20c lb.

SEASONABLE WORK.

Cucumbers in most cases will be the principal indoor crop at the present time. Though the setting of the fruit is easy at this season, compared with the duller months of the year, they will nevertheless need watching, as a crop cannot be depended on unless the flowers are properly fertilized. Less hand pollination will be necessary as natural agencies, such as bees and other insects, will be sure to find their way through the open ventilators and help distribute the pollen. If bees are very plentiful the work can safely be left to them but otherwise they can hardly be depended on to do it all. The syringe must be kept going pretty freely to keep the plants clean. Both red spider and thrips quickly show themselves if syringing is neglected but if syringing is thoroughly done it is the best means we have of keeping them under control.

Cantaloupes require practically the same general treatment as cucumbers, only in the setting of these care must be taken to try and get as many flowers pollinated at about the same time, for if one or two are set on a plant and get the lead they will take the whole strength of the plant and no more fruit can be set, or, if set, they will never mature. We have often seen fruits set in such cases swell until they were about as large as a small chicken's egg but here they stop, gradually turn yellow and fall off. The inexperienced might think they were all right and begin to make sure of a good crop but disappointment is usually the outcome unless enough for a full crop can be set at one time. It may look like wasting flowers to pick them off when two or three good strong pistillate blossoms appear, but this is the

Few if any of the average florists' establishments are in shape to plant out chrysanthemums until after the bedding plants are disposed of, the combination of bedding plants and mums being a very common one and one that, as a rule, gives satisfactory results, the bedding plants filling the house during the winter and early spring and the mums the balance of the year.

While the space for planting is not yet available, still everything should be in readiness so that when ready to begin operations everything can be done smoothly and expeditiously. It is easy to figure out how many plants one needs and if there are not enough propagated yet, cuttings should be got into the sand without delay. The weather is warm now and cuttings do not root nearly so easily as they did a month ago, so that enough cuttings should be put in to allow for a reasonable percentage of loss.

Kind of Soil.

Soil should be chopped down and got in readiness and if it can be turned over once or twice before planting it is all the better for it, as during these turning operations bone and other ingredients can be added and much more thoroughly mixed with the soil than they could with one single mixing. The question of what kind of soil is best to use is not of so much importance to the mum, since it seems to do well in almost any soil if properly handled and the necessary fertilizing elements supplied. I have seen the old soil taken from the carnation benches, after having a little manure mixed through it, put right back to grow the mums in. Such methods, however, I do not like, because, though, as I just stated, the chrysanthemum is not so particular as some other subjects, it amply repays any care that may be bestowed on it and should have a new "live" soil with lots of fibre in it. Any soil that has just borne a crop in a greenhouse bench is not, I consider, in a fit condition mechanically to immediately carry another, aside from the fact that it has been robbed of its "goodness" to a large extent.

A good loam that has been stacked up the previous fall, with one-fourth of its bulk of cow manure, will, with the addition of a little bone, furnish the ideal soil for the mums to make a good, healthy, normal growth in. Later on, when the soil is full of roots, the question of feeding can be taken up to better advantage.

The Easter Display of J. B. Braidwood, Successor to Wm. Clark, Colorado Springs, Colo.

only practical method. Keep taking them off until enough can be had at one time. This is a case where hurry cuts no ice but where a little patience is sure of its reward. There is little danger of getting left in the matter of flowers, as once the lateral shoots get growing freely and attain sufficient length they will produce pistillate flowers at almost every joint. Pollen bearing flowers are always plentiful.

The regulation of the growth by pinching is another matter that will require frequent attention, both in cucumbers and melons. Nothing much in the way of rules can be laid down for pinching. In regard to cucumbers, as they fruit so much more abundantly than melons the only thing to do is to regulate the growth according to the size of the trellis and prevent over-crowding. With the melons the general rule is to pinch out the point of the shoot two points beyond the fruit and then pinch all secondary lateral shoots after they have made one joint, but here again the available trellis space must be taken into consideration. Rather pinch closer than allow the shoots to become thick and over-crowded.

HEAD LETTUCE UNDER GLASS.

Evolution of Lettuce House.

Head lettuce has been grown under glass by the Boston market gardeners for many years, and the success which they have obtained in growing this crop offers one of the best examples of skill in the management of plants. Much of the head lettuce produced years ago was grown under sash. Then came the large frame house built of sash, which today seems crude in construction and badly deficient in light. Most of the lettuce houses today are even or two-thirds span constructions and built out of light frames and generally run east and west. These houses are usually 300 feet long, forty feet wide and occasionally they are 400, or in some instances 600, feet or more in length. The roof glass generally employed is 16x24 or 16x28 inches and in some modern houses 20x30 glass is employed. The glass now employed is much larger and of superior quality to that originally utilized. The tendency has been in the growing of lettuce, as with other crops, to increase the light conditions by using larger glass and by the construction of lighter frames.

Importance of Light.

The importance of light to crop production under glass, even at the present time, is not fully appreciated by greenhouse gardeners, and undoubtedly the tendency in the future will be to increase the light facilities even more. Few practical gardeners realize as fully as they ought to that it is the action of sunlight on plants which is responsible for the bulk of the material of the plant organism, or that photosynthesis or carbon assimilation is proportional to the intensity of light. The more light you can give plants between October and April the more they will assimilate, and as a consequence they will have more material to furnish the necessities for growth. Moreover, light is a great factor in the development of the texture of tissues, which materially assists in rendering plants immune from various diseases.

Character of Soil.

Head lettuce requires a soil containing a considerable amount of the coarser constituents, together with a large amount of organic matter. The Atlantic sea coast soils, termed by Prof. Whitney, truck soils, are especially adapted to the growth of lettuce and other market garden crops. In these soils the clays, silts and very fine sands are subordinate to the coarser constituents. Where the clay, silts, etc., predominate, as is the case in most of our inland soils, head lettuce cannot be grown so successfully.

In the large establishments in the east, the growing of lettuce under glass has become well systematized. The lettuce seed is usually sown in separate houses devoted to this purpose. The seed is sown broadcast, and covered lightly in a coarse or loose texture soil. There is no selection of seed by sifting or other process but it is sown as it is bought. No doubt it would pay lettuce growers to sift their seed and discard the smaller ones, as they develop into inferior plants and their germinating capacity is lower than in larger seeds. Some space and labor could be saved if the process of seed selection were applied.

Selection of Plants.

After the seeds have germinated and their first leaves are about one inch long, in which stage they are called "prickers," they are carefully selected as regards vigor, size and freedom from black root (beginning of botrytis rot) and transplanted three inches apart in special houses provided with good loam. They remain in this condition until they have developed four to six inch leaves, two inches or more wide and four or five inches long, after which they are permanently transplanted in larger houses at a distance of eight inches apart, where it takes from six to eight weeks, according to conditions, etc., for them to head. The requisite qualities that go with a first-class crop are a large, firm, solid head perfectly free from top burn, mildew and other diseases. Besides the nature of the soil, the temperature of the house and the light conditions influence the nature of the produce, and the skill which lettuce growers exert in controlling these factors is quite marked.

Fertilizers.

Commercial fertilizers are seldom if ever used in greenhouses for market garden crops. Horse manure, however, is put on profusely and often. By this practice the soil becomes very rich in organic matter and is so exceedingly light, porous and friable that one can readily push one's hand into the soil to a considerable depth with little exertion. It might be supposed that soil so heavily manured would in time become undesirable for growing plants. This, however, does not prove to be the case, since on the whole there are soils that have received two or three heavy coats of horse manure each year for twenty-five years or more, and they are still producing excellent crops of lettuce. In fact, most lettuce growers consider an old soil the best.

Watering.

The practice of watering lettuce plants is somewhat different from that followed by growers of other plants. Some growers water their house only once, and this is just previous to putting the plants in, and no further watering takes place until the next crop is set, or six or seven weeks later. Occasionally hot water is used instead of cold water but in either case the soil is drenched. This method of watering has practically the same advantages as sub-irrigation, since the water is in the lower depth of the soil, where the roots have to seek for it, and in this method of watering the surface of the soil soon becomes dry, which is an especially desirable feature in controlling certain rots. Some other growers follow this practice in a general way but continue to water the plants in the soil for two or three weeks. Afterwards they stop watering until the crop is mature. This method of watering constitutes one of the most important features in reducing or eliminating botrytis rot.

Temperature.

The temperature at which a lettuce house should be run varies somewhat according to the weather conditions and crop, and in the regulation of temperature the skill of the lettuce grower is well illustrated. In general, it may be stated that the night temperature is from 36 to 45 degrees and the day temperature from 65 to 90 degrees. So much depends, however, upon the knowledge and judgment of the plant's requirement during its development that this range of temperature signifies very little to those who are not familiar with lettuce growing. A slight misjudgment in the regulation of temperature would cause the ruin of a crop in an exceedingly brief time.

In no other part of the United States has the growing of vegetables under glass reached the point of perfection that it has in Massachusetts. According to W. W. Rawson, there are 1,200 market gardeners who bring produce to Boston, and this number is increasing. Mr. Rawson estimates that there are about 200 acres under glass in Massachusetts.

GEORGE E. STONE.

IN THE ADIRONDACKS.

P. H. Ryan, of Saranac Lake, N. Y., is one of the progressive florists of the mountain region and the accompanying illustration shows the excellence of the stock he produces. The picture was taken just before Easter and shows, in the background, Chas. M. Jones, who is grower for Mr. Ryan. They have very little sun in winter and many weeks of zero weather. Two weeks before Easter this year they had to give pretty strong heat to force out their Easter plants. Everything came in all right and sold out clean. They were among the few who had to wrap all stock for delivery, as the thermometer stood at 26 degrees at the highest on Saturday and on Sunday morning there was snow. In the picture Mr. Jones is holding a hydrangea in an 8-inch pot. This plant had eleven heads of flowers and a dozen plants from the stock had a total of 132 heads. They were equally successful in flowering azaleas, rhododendrons, genistas, etc. Bulbous stock afforded them no difficulty in holding back for Easter. Mr. Ryan has begun work on three new houses each 100 feet long. Two are for carnations and one for roses.

FLORIST AND THE COAL TRADE.

The following is an extract from an article which recently appeared in the Black Diamond, the recognized authority in the coal trade:

"Every now and then, when a jobber or territorial sales agent finds demurrage piling up, he bethinks himself of some greenhouse owner who will take the coal off his hands at a concession. There are a few who will appreciate the full extent of the consumption of fuel in greenhouses, and take full advantage of the business opportunity it presents, but the many make no effort to till this profitable field, far underestimating its importance.

"The public quite generally fails to appreciate the extent to which the cut flower industry has developed in recent years, but coal men should be well versed in the facts, though many are not. Cook county, Illinois, grows more flowers than any one county in the United States; then comes Philadelphia county, Pennsylvania; then Middlesex county, Massachusetts; then Kings county, New York; then Hudson county, New Jersey; then Queens county, New York. But these counties, which are the producing areas for the wholesale markets of Chicago, New York, Philadelphia and Boston, represent only a small fraction of the florist establishments of the country, although it is a matter of census record that Cook county, Illinois, produced in 1899 to within $75,000 in value as many flowers as the whole state of Ohio. Several greenhouse establishments in Cook county burn from seventy-five to 150 cars of coal a season, with one or two which burn 175 cars and one burned 7,000 tons of Pocahontas coal last winter. There are many which burn twenty-five to forty cars of coal a season. Indeed, one coal man told the writer recently that he sells the florists north of Chicago from 600 to 1,000 cars of coal a year.

"The census enumerators in 1899 found 30,417 greenhouse establishments with an area of 96,230,420 square feet of glass. By far the larger number grew vegetables, but much the larger part of the glass, 68,030,666 square feet, was devoted to flowers, which makes it look very much as though the flower growers were more prosperous and expanding faster than the vegetable growers. The total investment of the flower growers was $52,462,419, and their total sales in 1899, $18,505,881 at wholesale value.

"A conservative estimate is that the florists' business in all respects, glass area, value of sales, coal consumption, etc., has increased at the rate of fifteen per cent a year since the census, which would make the present glass area for flowers around a hundred million square feet, or nearly 25,000 acres!

"The census office went to the trouble of trying to figure out the value of the heating apparatus in each greenhouse, with the result of provoking considerable merriment among the men who own the plants when the figures were published. It would have been easier and of more importance to have ascertained the annual coal consumption. The record of one of the largest Cook county growers shows that in the winter of 1903-4 he burned approximately fourteen pounds of Pocahontas coal for each square foot of glass area in his place. Another grower's record shows thirteen pounds per square foot, using part Carterville and part Pocahontas. One of the best authorities in America on rose growing states that for a winter like 1903-4 it is necessary, with average coal and average greenhouse, that is, fairly tight, to figure on eight tons of coal for 1,000 feet of glass area. By a little figuring you can estimate what it will take to run a place of any size.

"Taking the man who used fourteen pounds of Pocahontas as a basis, to heat the whole hundred million square feet of greenhouses in the country last winter must have taken around 1,400,000,000 pounds of coal—700,000 tons—20,000 cars!

"As a matter of fact only a small proportion of the greenhouses are burning Pocahontas; most of them in the west burn the cheaper grades of western steam coal and in the east many burn anthracite, but where the greenhouse is at a distance from the mine the florist is likely to use a pretty good grade of fuel. First cost does not stand in his way; if you can figure out to him that you can save him money in the end he will do business. He has learned to be forehanded in his purchases. The larger growers will make coal contracts in February, March or April for a good deal of coal for delivery in July and August; others will buy in the summer for immediate delivery. Then there are many others who do not look so far ahead who are in the market all winter, so the enterprising coal man can find something doing all the year around among the florists."

PROPAGATING DAHLIAS.

Dobbie & Co., Rothesay, England, have been long recognized as among the very largest growers of dahlias. This season propagation has been carried on under the happiest conditions, owing to an almost entire absence of damping. Damping off at one time was a serious matter, but the firm had some houses built specially for striking cuttings, and ever since damping has been a lessening evil, until this season not more than three to five per cent of the cuttings have been lost in this way.

The roots from which the cuttings are obtained are bedded into houses about Christmas, and allowed to start slowly into growth, a temperature of about 60 degrees being maintained. The cuttings are taken off during February and March, and dibbed into beds in a house. The bottom heat is procured from three rows of pipes running round the side beds and under the center one. The bed of soil is about five inches in depth, and Messrs. Dobbie's experience is that the cuttings root as well in fresh, clean, slightly sandy loam as anything. The bottom heat in this house runs from 70 to 80 degrees, and the top heat always 10 to 15 degrees less. Shading is, of course, essential, and dewing with water is given whenever required.—Gardeners' Magazine.

ARNOLD ARBORETUM.

[An extract from a paper by Wilhelm Miller, read at St. Louis, November 10, 1904.]

One of the most fruitful gifts that was ever made to humanity was that which resulted in the Arnold Arboretum, the best collection of hardy trees and shrubs in the United States. Although the arboretum is of immense practical value to horticulture, the chances are that the story of its foundation is unfamiliar to the majority of this audience, even to those who have had the pleasure of a visit to it.

James Arnold was not particularly interested in trees and shrubs; he did not leave the money for that specific purpose, and his gift was rather small. He was a New England merchant who retired at fifty, enjoyed a good garden, and had confidence in the judgment of his friend, George B. Emerson, author of the well-known report on the forest trees of Massachusetts. Doubtless acting on Mr. Emerson's suggestion, he left the money for the improvement of agriculture or horticulture, purposely stating the object in the vaguest possible manner, so that the trustees could put the money into whatever promised the biggest returns to humanity. It happened that they put the money into a collection of trees and shrubs. It happened that they were fortunate to secure as director a wealthy man, who not only gave them the best collection of books on trees and shrubs in the world, but, better still, has devoted his life to the service of science in the same spirit and with the same effectiveness as Lawes and Gilbert or Charles Darwin. In fact, it was this director, Professor Sargent, who made the notable bargain with Harvard University and the city of Boston which has magnified the original gift of James Arnold to an effectiveness far beyond his dreams.

Let us now examine this triangular bargain between city, college and horticultural institution and see what each party gets out of it and whether there is anything left for the people. Harvard University owns a big piece of land, given to it by the founder of the Bussey Institution, which it has no funds to develop. The city of Boston takes this land by the right of eminent domain for use as a park, but leases it back to the university for 999 years. The city builds, maintains and polices the roads, as it would have to do with any other park. The arboretum gets for nothing the use of the land on which to grow its trees and do its other work; the university gets for nothing a splendid new department, viz., a great outdoor laboratory where classes go to study botany, forestry, horticulture and landscape gardening; the city gets a park for a thousand years without taxing the people to buy land worth $2,000,000. It is a remarkable example of the fact that a good bargain benefits all parties concerned and reminds one of the famous dollar bill which passed and repassed round the circle of a roomful of people and paid everybody's debts.

Now for some of the fruits of this piece of financial engineering which it took five years to perfect. First, the Silva of North America, probably the most splendid scientific book of any kind that has been produced in the western hemisphere, certainly the best work ever published that describes the trees and shrubs of any country; second, Garden and Forest, the best horticultural periodical we have ever had; third, the Jesup collection of the trees of North America, now preserved in the American Museum of Natural History at New York, a collection which is all that a tree-lover, horticulturist, botanist, forester, lumberman or woodworker could wish for; fourth, its census of the forest wealth of the country, which had much to do with the establishment of a national forest reserve that now amounts to 62,000,000 acres of timber land; fifth, its work in connection with the establishment of the first state reserve, that of New York; sixth, its part in the rescue of Niagara Falls and the creation of a great park there; seventh, its contribution to landscape gardening, since it has shown that a botanical garden may be made primarily a beautiful park, instead of a mere outdoor museum; eighth, its educational value to the general public, to college students and to nurserymen and gardeners; lastly, its direct practical services to horticulture in testing the hardiness and ornamental value of new and rare trees and shrubs. All this is a good deal to grow out of a gift of about $10,000 in 1868, but a wise gift often grows that way. An acorn makes a small start, but it has big possibilities.

THE HUCKLEBERRY BRANCHES.

The branches of the high-growing huckleberry have been known to the decorators on the Pacific coast. The branches are flat and well furnished with enduring, lustrous, green leaves and can be used in almost the same manner as wild smilax. Usually there has been enough wild smilax to meet the spring demand, but this year most markets are wholly without wild smilax and in some what little remains is of such poor quality that the decorators are not using it. This has made an opening for the huckleberry, which is finding its way to northern markets through the same channel as came the first wild smilax, from Caldwell, at Evergreen, Ala. The accompanying illustration gives an idea of the character of the foliage. It endures well and seems to have already established itself as a permanent decorative green in many parts of the country where it was unknown a month ago.

HERBACEOUS CALCEOLARIAS.

"The charge that is generally brought against the herbaceous calceolaria by unsuccessful growers," says a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine, "is the one that has often been brought against the stage pelargonium, viz., that it's a dirty thing for greenfly. Now, it must frankly be admitted that greenfly are somewhat partial to both pelargoniums and calceolar-ias grown under certain conditions, but by fulfilling a few simple conditions, both plants, especially the calceolaria, can be so grown that the aphides will give very little trouble. I do not remember ever having to fumigate or vaporize a batch of plants more than twice, and I have often found once quite sufficient. This leads me to make one preliminary remark, and I attach great importance to it; it is this, that I am certain that nine-tenths of the failures that occur in calceolaria culture are due to coddling; in other words, when the calceolaria is killed, it is almost invariably by kindness.

"Calceolarias were first introduced to this country from Chili and Peru in the end of the eighteenth and beginning of the nineteenth century, some of them being of a shrubby and some of a herbaceous habit. Our present day superb strains are the results of hybridization between such old named varieties as amplexicaulis, integrifolia, purpurea, corymbosa, and a few others.

"I should think there are comparatively few really poor strains of calceolaria seed in the market today, but some strains are undoubtedly superior to others, and I would therefore, advise caution in the purchase of seed. In comparing strains, two points ought to be kept in view. The first and primary one is the size and quality of the flowers, as every other consideration is only a means to this end. A second point is, however, worthy of consideration, viz., the habit of the plants. I have no admiration for the Tom Thumb strains that are sometimes to be met with nowadays, but, on the other hand, a leggy habit should be avoided, a medium height with a compact habit being the most desirable. Another point worth noting in connection with habit is this: It will be found that plants which naturally produce ample foliage of a thick, succulent character are more vigorous and healthy than those with thin, spare foliage; moreover, a groundwork of massive green foliage helps to relieve the bright color of the flowers."

A FINE PHALAENOPSIS.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph of a specimen of Phalaenopsis Schilleriana flowering at the greenhouses of H. G. Selfridge, Lake Geneva, Wis. C. H. Gebhardt, the gardener in charge, supplies the following note on the subject:

"Phalaenopsis Schilleriana, from the Philippine Islands, is one of the finest orchids in cultivation, quite dissimilar from any other kind. The roots are very distinct, being flat and rough and free in growth. The leaves are oblong, six to eighteen inches long, finely variegated, dark green mottled with streaks of greyish white on the upper side, the under surface purple. The scapes produced from the axils of the leaves, are from two to three feet long, more branched than those of any other kind. The individual flowers are from two to three inches across. They are of a beautiful light pink color edged with white. They flower in summer and autumn and last for several weeks. We keep them in our East Indian house. The culture is the same as I have given lately for Phalaenopsis Rhimestadiana."

GONGORA GALEATA.

The photograph shows a plant in the collection of H. G. Selfridge, Lake Geneva, Wis., whose head gardener supplies the accompanying note: "Gongora galeata (syn Acropera Loddigerii) is from Mexico. It is not a showy orchid but very interesting for an amateur, as the flowers are curious in their formation. When fully developed the pseudo-bulbs are ovate, clustered. From their base the drooping racemes of flowers are produced. They are pale, tawny yellow, with a brownish red and are very fragrant."

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business is dull. These are all the facts in a nutshell. Even sweet peas are hard to sell. A feature of the market supply is the arrival of flowers from the specialist in outdoor blooms. Thomas J. Oberlin, of Sinking Springs, near Reading, Pa., has sent in first shipments, including Gesneriana tulips to Fred Ehret. It may be said that most of the stock brings something, but the average is not in sight of the listed prices, the street proportion being large.

The Center of Activity.

It is today no longer a question whether to buy stock east of Broad street or west, the desire to sell cut flowers being infinitely greater than the desire to buy them. The question is where to find the growing plants needed to adorn the garden, the lawn, the window and the porch. The fateful tenth of May has arrived and more business is now being transacted in the suburbs than in the heart of the city. The Alburgers, the Colfeshes, the Woltemates, the Westcotts and fifty more well known growers, who have houses filled with this class of stock, are working early and late reaping the harvest that virtually ends with Decoration day.

Removal.

M. Rice & Co., well known dealers in ribbons and florists' supplies, are now moving their machinery and stock into their new building at 1220 Race street. This handsome structure, designed by one of the foremost architects of the city, is admirably adapted for their purpose and when in complete running order will give the firm all the facilities for manufacturing and handling florists' supplies that modern ingenuity can devise. The work has been so rapidly pushed that it now seems probable that business will be running smoothly in the new building by the beginning of next month.

The foundation of the present firm was made in 1885, when the Philadelphia Immortelle Co. was started at 725 Arch street. In 1892 this company consolidated with the firm of Marchentz & Co., doing business at 25 North Fourth street. In 1894, on the death of Joseph Marchentz, the firm name was changed to M. Rice & Co. In 1899 B. Eschner entered the firm and in July of that year the business was removed to their present quarters at 918 Filbert street. The rapid expansion of their business, which now covers the entire United States, required the addition last year of the next building, 916 Filbert street. Their many friends congratulate them upon their acquisition of quarters so well suited to the accommodation of the "leading florists' supply house."

Germantown Horticultural Society.

Frank Miles gave an able lecture, most beautifully illustrated by stereopticon views, on "Italian Gardens" before the Germantown Horticultural Society on Monday evening. His audience was large and very appreciative. N. Dubois Miller read interesting extracts from an amateur gardener's diary. Edwin C. Jellott extolled the society's good work, past and present. George Redles gave an able botanical talk on the wild flowers shown. The exhibition was highly creditable.

Horticultural Hall.

It is the evening of a big ball. I do not know whether the decorations were arranged by Graham or by Habermehl. I do know that a young man ran up the steps and explained to the doorkeeper that his ticket was at home, ten miles away, that he must go in and would mail the ticket the next day. The doorkeeper said he was sorry, but his orders were positive. No one could enter without a ticket. As the young man turned away disappointed, a seedy looking chap approached him. "Give me a dollar," he said, "and I will get you in." "First tell me how," the young man asked, but the other shook his head. Well, the young man thought, "I'll risk $1." The other pocketed the money. "Now give me your hat and overcoat," he said. The moment they were off he ran across Broad street with them, leaving the young man standing in evening dress bareheaded on the sidewalk. Suppose he did not return? Presently, however, he reappeared, bringing a check from the cloak room at the Walton for the hat and coat. "Here is your check, now go in," he said. The young man entered unchallenged.

Various Notes.

H. Bayersdorfer and family will sail for Europe on the Deutschland on Thursday, May 25. Mr. Bayersdorfer's annual trip is of benefit to thousands of American florists, who look to him for new ideas to be used in their business next season.

The United States Express Co. has agreed to pay to A. Farenwald, of Hillside, part of the loss caused by four frozen and one delayed shipment of flowers.

John Burton, assignee for Robert Craig & Son, has called a meeting of the firm's creditors for Monday, May 15, at 3 p. m., at 49 Market street.

H. M. Collins, of Boston, was in town this week. He reports a very fine Easter business.

Morris Myers has succeeded Joseph Swearer as foreman for Charles E. Meehan.

Edward Reid to Phil: "I work hard,

Charles F. Krueger has decided to sell or lease his six greenhouses at Narberth, devoting his whole attention to his retail business in the Reading Terminal.

Joseph Heacock has been shipping many of his fine kentias this week.

Godfrey Aschmann is the moonvine specialist of the day.

Wm. J. Baker is receiving many fine carnations.

The Millbrook Lea Greenhouses expect to be on crop, W. J. Moore says, with carnations for Decoration day. PHIL.

MORTON GROVE, ILL.—Kirscht & Co. will this spring add one house to their place. It will be 22x100 and will bring the total of their glass up to about 18,000 feet. They grow carnations and the principal stock for next season will be Lawson, Enchantress, Estelle, Boston Market and Fiancee.

W. L. Morris Bankrupt.

On May 5 W. L. Morris filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States court. He gives his liabilities as $9,446.61 and schedules no assets.

The Morris greenhouse establishment is distinct from the Morris-Blair Floral Co., which is the retail end of the concern and is apparently doing an excellent business. There is without doubt a field for such a store here, as a local census just completed shows a population of 74,178 and the community is one of the best in the country. All business is good here and financial wrecks are the result of bad seamanship rather than dangerous waters.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business has been very quiet during the past week, with an oversupply of most flowers coming in. The quality of both roses and carnations is deteriorating with the warmer weather. Beauties are abundant, the best bringing $15 to $20 per hundred. A good many short-stemmed ones are sold at low figures. A few extra select Brides and Bridesmaids make $8, but as a rule $6 has been as much as good stock would bring. Grades selling at $2 to $3 are in best demand, short-stemmed ones going for $1. Carnations are somewhat lower. A few Lawson, Harry Fenn and other colored sorts have made $3, but as a rule $1.50 to $2 has bought good stock, ordinary and poor grades going as low as 50 to 75 cents. Some double violets are still coming in from one or two growers. Thomas Pegler had 10,000 on May 6 of nice quality. Prices average 75 cents.

Sweet peas are the best selling flowers at present. People are naturally getting tired of roses and carnations and buy these freely. Prices hold at 50 cents to $1 for good stock. William Sim has some 10,000 daily and other growers offer large quantities, but not enough for the demand. In addition to Mont Blanc and Earliest of All, quite a number of other sorts are now coming in, including the new Gladys Unwin, which is of a soft, bright pink color. Bulbous stock sells very well. A good portion of it now comes from outdoors. Lily of the valley sells very well and is not over-abundant. Callas and lilies move slowly. Some very good gladioli is coming in, the best making $5 to $6.

Various Notes.

The Boston Public Gardens are very attractive just now with the annual tulip display, some hundreds of thousands of which are in flower.

Bedding plant trade is now getting very brisk. These seem to be handled in every imaginable kind of store.

The forsythias are blooming magnificently this season in this section. Those in the parkways and arboretum are a beautiful sight at present. Magnolias and other spring flowering subjects are also in fine flower.

Warren Fenno, of Revere, who died on April 28, aged 50 years, was one of the most expert fruit growers in Massachusetts. He was elected chairman of the fruit committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society last year and also a member of the board of directors at the last election. He had for years been a large and successful exhibitor before the society and his loss will be severely felt.

William E. Doyle states that in his thirty-five years' experience in the florists' store business, no other rose has proved so good a seller, since the earlier days of Jacqueminot, as Killarney. He has disposed of as many as 1,700 flowers a day of this variety and all purchasers attest to its wonderful keeping qualities.

The next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club occurs on May 16, when Dr. R. T. Jackson will lecture on peonies. A large attendance is expected.

Rain is quite badly needed at present. We had a dry fall and winter and the spring rainfall has been far below the average. A greater loss than usual in spring planted trees and shrubs as a result of the drought is likely. The loss in deciduous trees and shrubs from the late winter was less than usual, but as the season advances the destruction among evergreens becomes more apparent.

Great regret among horticulturists of all classes is felt at the death of Professor N. H. Goodell, president of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, Mass. The deceased, who had been in failing health, spent the last winter in Florida and died on his way home from there on April 23. Professor Goodell did much toward advancing horticulture along scientific lines as a director of the Hatch Experiment Station and was always welcomed as a lecturer before the Massachusetts Horticultural and kindred societies. He had presided over the college at Amherst for nineteen years. His loss will be severely felt.

Intelligence of the death of James Rough, one of the oldest, most highly esteemed and successful of our city florists, reached us just too late for the last issue of the REVIEW. Mr. Rough died on the night of May 2, of pneumonia, after a sickness of ten days' duration. A Scot by birth, the deceased came to America in 1871, working for C. M. Atkinson on the John L. Gardner estate in Brookline. After a year's work on private estates he entered the commercial end of floriculture and for many years operated a store on Washington street, moving to Huntington avenue, nearly opposite Horticultural hall, soon after that building had been opened. Here he had a well equipped store, which always looked attractive and where he did a large and increasing business. All those who had business relations with him speak of him as a strictly honest and upright man and deplore his loss.

Mr. Rough was in his fifty-eighth year and well preserved for his years. He leaves two daughters and a son. The latter, James, Jr., better known as "Jim," is manager of the Music Hall Flower Market at present, and will, we trust, prove a worthy successor to his lamented father. At the funeral services on May 5 there was a very large gathering, including many of his former business associates. The numerous and beautiful floral souvenirs bore tribute to the esteem in which he was held.

A familiar greeting among carnationists these days seems to be, "Has your Fiancee shown up yet?" Replies generally appear to be in the negative.

Everyone anticipates a big Memorial day business. This is the one holiday in the year when everything in the shape of a flower goes. From orders already booked by the large growers, there would seem to be a heavier demand than ever.

Welch Bros., as usual, are prepared for a record breaking Memorial day trade and they will handle an enormous quantity of cut flowers in all seasonable varieties. They hope all needing stock will place orders early, as late comers are likely to be disappointed. They report good orders for plants of Killarney rose.

The Arboretum Flower Store, on Boylston street, has extra good lots of ixias and Gladiolus Colvillei, both white and colored varieties, better grown than are usually seen.

Seed merchants express themselves as

....PEONIES....

We have 'em. White, pink and red. Most popular flower for spring weddings. Enough for all. Also all other stock. Let us have your orders.

The express drivers' strike is still on, but you wouldn't know it. So far as we are concerned, everything going on as usual.

well satisfied with trade this season, which goes ahead of previous years.

Brown tail moth caterpillars are getting in their work now with a vengeance and people are crying out for immediate action on the part of the state, which has an appropriation of $75,000 to use this season in fighting it. Many cities and towns destroyed nests in thousands the past winter and the warfare against the pest will this year be on a larger scale than ever before.

Thomas Capers, a well known and much respected florist, of Newburyport, died on April 29, aged 66 years. Coming from England to America while quite young, he settled in Newburyport thirty years ago, having been in private and later commercial floriculture all that time. He leaves a widow and one son.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Not in a very long time has the market been in so bad a shape as during the past week. Receipts are very much in excess of the demand. There are fair crops on in nearly all lines and various circumstances have served to limit the demand. Because of the strike, the local retail trade amounts to practically nothing, particularly with the down town stores. At the same time it seems that every other market is suffering with a glut of stock and there is no need for buyers in many cities to send to Chicago. Strange as it may seem to those unfamiliar with the circumstances, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Cleveland and Pittsburgh, where there are numerous wholesale houses, are usually among the best patrons of the Chicago wholesalers. This is not so at present. They have enough stuff in their home markets to meet all requirements.

There is no great oversupply of Beauties, or fine Liberties, but of first-class Brides and Maids there are too many to hold the prices and Chatenay and Golden Gate are both in over-abundance and selling very cheap for splendid stock. The value of carnations dwindled steadily all through last week and this week bids fair to give the growers the lowest averages ever seen for the corresponding grade of material, for much of the receipts are strictly fine.

Easter lilies have become absolutely immovable. It is not a case of cleaning up at cheap prices, but one of dumping the lilies when they are no longer presentable. Callas are in almost as bad a way. There are now large receipts of outdoor tulips, including some of the finest ever seen in the market, Parrot tulips being particularly good. There is a fair demand for valley for wedding work and McKellar reports many advance orders for cattleyas.

Peonies began to come in at the end of last week. The old red was quickly followed by the later sorts and all colors are now offered in quantity. The crop seems likely to come all at once this year and on May 9 quantities of Missouri goods went into cold storage. It is reported that in certain quarters the crop will be lighter than usual, but there promises to be enough for everyone unless conditions change radically. We escaped the large lots of lilac from southern Illinois because the express companies would not accept consignments except where special arrangements had been made, and these did not interest the wholesalers with so much other material in the market. There is now a goodly lot of local lilac.

There are increased receipts of smilax and poor stock does not bring as much as it did a week or two ago. Southern ferns appear, but there are yet several hundred thousand Massachusetts ferns in cold storage.

The Strike Situation.

The situation as regards the express drivers' strike has changed very little in the past week. The wholesalers' teaming arrangements are still serving to get the outgoing shipments of "funeral flowers" to the depots without trouble, the union favoring the trade very greatly in this respect. Individual arrangements are still in force as to getting the incoming stock from the depots to the wholesale houses. The express companies are willing to make deliveries under guard but this the wholesalers do not wish. Practically all greenhouse stock which usually reaches this market is getting in safely, but the outdoor stuff, such as southern lilacs, has been largely eliminated, as with so great supplies the greenhouse grown flowers the wholesalers did not care to guarantee charges, assume all risk of damage and go to the depot to get this class of material. Otherwise the express companies would not accept it from consignors. The same thing is likely to occur with cape jasmines if the strike continues so long. However, in so far as the regular cut flower trade is concerned, it may be said that our trade is practically uninterrupted and in manifestly better condition than any other business which is in any measure dependent upon the express companies.

Decoration Day.

Everyone hopes that the strike will be over before Decoration day, but so long as conditions are as at present business will not be interfered with. Decoration day is constantly growing in importance and great quantities of stock are called for from this market. Inquiries to hand would indicate good business again this year.

Various Notes.

B. F. Rubel, who is the head of the Fleischman Floral Co., 3 Jackson boulevard, has taken the store at North State and Division streets, which proved a losing venture for T. D. Mosconesotes, and will place it in charge of John Gormley, formerly with the Ernst Wienhoeber Co. The down town store is now in charge of George Wienhoeber, a nephew of Mr. Wienhoeber.

The Florists' Bowling Club took up regular practice on Tuesday evening. From now until convention time there will be a weekly meeting at Bensinger's alleys, 114 Monroe street, and the players who make the best averages will be entitled to represent the club at Washington. Everyone is invited to try his hand. There will also be bowling by the ladies on an adjoining alley. E. F. Winterson, J. S. Wilson and Fred Stollery are the committee in charge. There will be a regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club tonight.

Bert Budlong, of J. A. Budlong's, has returned from a month's trip to New York and Boston. He says he was very hospitably received by every one of the many growers whom he visited and shown their stock and methods of growing. He found that on carnations and Beauty roses Chicago is not behind but that the East leads on high grade tea roses. He found, too, that practically all the best growers are using grafted stock, so while at the Waban Rose Conservatories he bought some grafted Brides and Maids for trial next season.

Kennicott Bros. Co. calls attention to the very unusual circumstance that earliest, midseason and even some of the late peonies are all coming in at once. They had a few Festiva maxima on May 8. Mr. Pieser says he thinks all the big lot for cold storage will be in within a week.

F. S. Schmeling was down from Milwaukee this week and gave the Foley Mfg. Co. an order for cypress for four greenhouses 29x100 and for pecky cypress for bench material for them. Two of the houses will be put up this spring and two during the summer, the latter being for plants.

In Friedman's window there is a miniature ship's wheel, supported by oars, bearing the words "Flowers delivered on board steamers." The center of the wheel is a blackboard on which are lists of the "sailings" from New York and Boston.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is getting some splendidly colored Prosperity carnations. John Poehlmann says that he has noted that the first crop of Prosperity in the fall is pretty white in color but that after the first cut is off, the flowers which follow have plenty of variegation.

Frank Beu, on North Fortieth avenue, has recently added three houses to his establishment. They will be planted with chrysanthemums for next fall.

P. J. Hauswirth spent four days last week at a state meeting of Red Men at Mt. Vernon. He tells it as a joke on the "Indians" that at the election only a couple of weeks before the meeting, the town voted no license.

E. C. Amling says that he is looking for the usual increase in Decoration day business again this year. He figures that there will be no trouble in handling it.

George Reinberg says that this has been a very good season for the sale of carnation cuttings. It started very poorly, but in April he did an especially big business in this line.

Vaughan & Sperry are receiving several good seedling roses from Charles Hopp, of Grand Rapids. One previously mentioned in this column, as on the order of La Detroit. Another Mr. Hopp calls the white Chatenay, but it has many more petals. The stems are like fishpoles, some of them are so long.

E. H. Hunt reports a good business in supplies for Decoration day. They make shipments by freight rather than run any chances with the pickets about the express offices.

"Larry" Kelly is again in the flower business, busy bringing incoming stock from the depots.

A recent report was that the wagon service was costing the wholesalers 17 cents a box to get outgoing shipments delivered to depots. That's a whole lot cheaper than most lines of business are getting off.

Wietor Bros. are showing some extra Enchantress carnations. They say 3 cents is now the top, where the same goods brought 8 cents in winter. They have finished planting carnations in the field.

John Zech, of Zech & Mann, says that, although he hasn't the monopoly of the gladiolus supply as in previous weeks, still it is his best selling item.

Peter Reinberg is getting a big cut of Chatenay of splendid quality.

Bassett & Washburn are now hauling in a little stock from Hinsdale each day but still do most of their shipping from the greenhouses.

A. L. Randall says he does not remember a season when collections after Easter came in slower. It is a general complaint.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is still getting New York violets of fair quality. The cool weather seems to have prolonged their season wonderfully.

L. Coatsworth went to New Castle Tuesday night for a few days' stay. The Bentley-Coatsworth Co. is rebuilding some of its houses there.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

There is not much to say about the market these days. The ship is running slowly on an even keel. The supply is very abundant and prices very low. Except for roses, stock in the cut flower line is excellent in quality. The street merchants have turned to lilacs and pansies and violets have gracefully retired. Trailing arbutus has ceased to trail. Good American Beauties have been few and far between since Easter. There have been lots of Brunners and Jacqs. to depreciate their value. Killarney seems to grow in popularity. Its keeping qualities are wonderful and its proven hardness commends it to the amateur for outdoor planting. Gladioli are

Florists' Club Meeting.

The May meeting of the club was held Monday evening, about forty being present. It was bedding plant night, under the management of John Birnie and the exhibit he succeeded in getting together was large and creditable. The award committee awarded certificates of merit for culture for their exhibits to the following: S. A. Steinhoff; Chas. Hunt, Port Richmond, N. Y.; Herman Mende, Ceacaus, N. J.; Pesenecker & Son, Jersey City; Smith & Lappie; J. A. Henderson, Jersey City; S. C. Schroeter & Son, Bayonne, N. J.; John Birnie, West Hoboken; H. Baumann, West Hoboken; Hartman & Wagenfohr, Winfield Junction, N. Y.; John Reichert, Union, N. J.; Peter Yost, West Hoboken; John Tschupp & Co., West Hoboken; Aug. Spies, New Springville, N. Y.; Wm. Stadmiller, Jersey City; Fred Engler, West Hoboken; Geo. Darsley, Jersey City; John Harrison, Jersey City; Leach Bros., Jersey City; F. Weinberg, Woodside; F. Dressel, Weehawken. Honorable mention was given to the following: Geo. Fick, West Hoboken; Aug. Kreisinger, Jersey City; Chas. Heinz, West Hoboken; Mr. Tonicassia, Brooklyn.

Guttman & Weber exhibited a vase of Carnation Victory. Chairman O'Mara made a very appropriate address before reading the awards. He characterized the exhibits as the "stuff" for everyday service in the New York market and well worthy of the cultural awards bestowed.

The printing of certificates of award was ordered and the change in the by-laws and the increase in the salary of the secretary were unanimously adopted.

J. B. Nugent "made good" with an elegant spread of chicken casserole and other delicacies that his own personal larder supplied and that everybody warmly appreciated. His appointment on the transportation committee was an appropriate recognition of his services. Messrs. Sheridan and O'Mara were named as the other members of the committee.

The question box was opened about 10 p. m. "What are the essential qualifications of a judge of plants and flowers?" was the first consideration and Messrs. O'Mara and Scott of Tarrytown humorously and learnedly discussed it. "Are street merchants detrimental to the interests of the wholesaler and retailer?" was opened by A. H. Langjahr, who referred to the street fakir as a necessity. Mr. Darsley spoke of the times when 20,000 plants were of more value than 50,000 now, stating that the plant trade is absolutely in the hands of the street peddlers. John Donaldson agreed with Mr. Darsley. Mr. Marshall spoke of the increasing demand for window boxes as a result of the street merchants' aggressive campaigns. Messrs. Wallace and Wheeler gave humorous accounts of the street bulb salesmen. Mr. Darsley denounced the sales of roses by department stores as injurious to legitimate trade, while Mr. Wheeler thought the evil rights itself in its eye opening influence.

The question as to the most valuable plant introduced in the memory of the members met with an assortment of opinions that left the matter still undecided. Mr. O'Mara put in a claim for Ampelopsis Veitchii; Mr. Darsley, the double geranium; Mr. Lenker, the Crimson Rambler rose; and Mr. Scott, of Tarrytown, the American Beauty rose. Mr. Birnie said ninety per cent of all plants brought to the market were geraniums. The carnation and Crozy canna were also mentioned, while Mr. Wheeler thought from the Kentucky standpoint the mint carried off the palm.

Messrs. Duckham and Totty were up from Madison and did good service on the award committee.

Various Notes.

The Horticultural Society of New York holds its fifth annual exhibition this week at Bronx park and it is to be hoped a better attendance than usual may be seen. The exhibits will be in charge of Head Gardener Skene, which guarantees the best of care for the exhibitors. The usual prize for the year's best horticultural novelty has been left out of the schedule this year.

The boom in real estate in the suburbs of New York is large enough to gladden many a florist's heart these days. Mr. Dreyer was relieved of much of his real estate by the Pennsylvania R. R. to his advantage some time ago and its latest reaching out has included the property of Charles Smith and Victor Dorval. C. W. Ward is now within a stone's throw of the greatest racing park in the world. The florists who hold on will walk on velvet before many years. Away down on the outskirts of Flatbush, Jerome Suydam, the carnationist, is cutting his land into building lots and disposing of his greenhouses.

A week ago we "speeded the parting guest," E. G. Hill, of Richmond, on his way to Europe, intending to be back in time for the Washington convention.

Maltus & Ware, the custom house brokers, headquarters for many of the foreign bulb drummers, have removed to 14 Stone street.

A call at the Julius Roehrs Co.'s palm and orchid factory at Carlton Hill last week revealed an enormous sea of bay trees in every size and shape. The bay must be growing popular, for Mr. Roehrs tells me the advance orders will take many and that not one of them will be left before the summer passes. A Cattleya Mossiae with nearly 100 blooms is probably the finest specimen of this plant in this country. The Roehrs Co. has had a wonderful season.

If there is a busier nursery in the neighborhood of New York than Bobbink & Atkins', at Rutherford, I have not seen it. Their 100 acres are but the nucleus of what this firm will accomplish in due time. Both are young men, tireless in their devotion to the great work they have set out to accomplish. Their importations of evergreens and bay trees are reckoned not by car-loads, but trains this season.

Young & Nugent will fit up the first floor of their property on Twenty-eighth street as a palm room this week, which will make their retail department very complete and convenient.

A property on Twenty-eighth street, suitable for the New York Florists' Club's home for all time, is in the market and with a united effort on the part of its members can be secured.

The exodus to Newport has begun. Hodgson, Siebrecht & Son, Wadley & Smythe and Leikens have already sent on their forerunners to get everything in readiness for an anticipated busy season. In the absence of Mr. and Mrs. Leikens, Frank Good will have charge of the New York store.

Bowe had a big wedding at Summit last week and one at the National Art Club's rooms. Wild smilax with wistaria, apple and cherry blossoms and white flowering dogwood were extensively used with many lilies. Mr. Bowe is the first florist to advertise extensively in the street cars of New York.

The early closing movement is on, both in the wholesale and retail stores, the former shutting up shop at 6 and the latter at 8 p. m. Alex McConnell was the first to change from 9 p. m., the official hour all winter, with many a necessary hold-over till the wee sma'

Tuesday of this week the Torrey Botanical Club met at the Botanical Garden and "Violets" was the topic of consideration. Dr. Britton opened the discussion, which was very interesting.

The next Florists' Club meeting, in June, will be a special peony and possibly ladies' night and will precede the yearly outing, which now promises to be a great success. Tickets may now be obtained from Pres. Traendly and an

Now that the season for Wild Smilax is over and no more stock can be supplied, I wish to call your attention to the

as a most elegant Decorative Green. It is largely used by the Florists of the Pacific Coast, Washington and Oregon in decorations. The branches are FLAT, very thickly furnished with exceedingly lustrous, green leaves and it seems to adapt itself to almost any position in decoration that the Wild Smilax can be used in.

As the introducer of Southern Wild Smilax, I think you can give me credit for knowing a good thing when I see it, and I am convinced that in Huckleberry Branches you will have a very beautiful substitute for the Wild Smilax, of great value to you through the months of May and June. I am anxious to get the verdict of the Floral Trade on this introduction and offer to send you a Case on Suspicion, price $2.50 per case if it suits you, nothing if it does not. Will you try a case on these terms? Yours very truly,

M. Lecakes is expected home from Greece next week.

No such spring has ever been known around New York. Plantings on the large estates have been enormous and yet the nursery business in this country is only in its infancy.

Ralph M. Ward & Co. are now settled in their new and convenient quarters on West Broadway, close to the wholesale seed and bulb section. They have added to their foreign connections the nursery firm of Jans Smits, of Naarden, Holland.

Harry Bunyard, representing A. T. Boddington, is back from a successful western trip. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

HAVRE, MONT.—The Havre Floral Co. has been organized and is about to erect two greenhouses, one for carnations and one for general stock. The grower is John Linn, who was formerly with M.

Kranz, at the Montana Floral Exchange at Great Falls. He is thoroughly experienced in business and should make a success of the new company, as the town is a prosperous one. Mr. Linn is at present very busy in preparations for his building operations.

PIPING FOR HOT WATER.

I have two houses, one 20x100 and eleven feet to ridge, the other 11x100 and eight feet to ridge. These are heated by steam and piped with 1-inch pipe. I want to change to hot water heat. Can I use the 1-inch pipe for the narrow house and buy 2-inch pipe for the larger one or must I buy 2-inch pipe for both? W. H. K.

Your 1-inch pipe is too small to be economical for hot water. For this purpose, particularly in a small place, where a night fireman is not employed, larger pipe is better, for several reasons. In a small pipe the water cools faster and the friction causes slower circulation. While it is possible to use your 1-inch pipe, you will probably be repaid in the greater efficiency of your plant for buying larger pipe. A size commonly used is 1½-inch, although many places use 4-inch. But the larger the pipe the greater the cost of installation unless good second-hand pipe is to be picked up.

I GET much pleasure and profit out of the REVIEW every week.—FRED HATCH, Scranton, Pa.

PLEASE stop our advertisement of mums and geraniums; all sold.—A. REL-YEA & SON, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

THE GLASS MARKET.

The jobbers of American window glass report a fairly active business in greenhouse sizes. Prices are lower than usual, especially at this season of the year. The lowest price is usually in winter, with periodical advances as spring and summer approach, but this year the advances have not come, except as periodical recoveries from dips in the market. There is no over-supply of the popular greenhouse sizes, especially of 20-inch glass, but the abundance of small commercial glass has operated to disturb the market for all other glass. The trade is just now interested in a bond issue of several millions of dollars by the American Window Glass Machine Co., which looks as though the trust were getting ready to go into the manufacture of glass making machines on a large scale.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., C. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 23rd annual meeting will be held at Alexandria Bay, N. Y., from June 20 to 22, 1905.

IN western Iowa and Nebraska there were light frosts May 4.

THE peas for next year's crop in Wisconsin and Michigan have been planted.

THE wholesale and retail seed stores in New York are rapidly becoming centralized.

THE weather has more effect on the seed business at Chicago than the teamsters' strike.

It is reported that H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford, Ill., is to write a book. It is to tell the public all about cultural matters.

WEATHER conditions for planting peas were fairly favorable. Reports are that the sown acreage is sprouting well and that the outlook is encouraging.

MANY of the vine seed growers are looking about for stock seed of the odd varieties of melon, squash and pumpkin. Safe stocks of some of these are very scarce.

THERE is much interest in the seed trade convention to be held at Alexandria Bay, N. Y., in the Thousand Islands, June 20 to 22. Information already in the hands of President Charles N. Page indicates a large attendance.

VISITED CHICAGO:—Theodore Roosevelt, head of the government seed business, Washington, D. C.; C. L. Allen, Floral Park, N. Y.; W. Carleton, of the Carleton Seed and Implement Co., Jackson, Mich.; Harry Claire, of the Planet Jr. Co., Philadelphia.

JOSEPH R. RATEKIN, proprietor and manager of the Western Seed Co., Shenandoah, Ia., was duly adjudged bankrupt on May 6, in the United States court for the southern district of Iowa. The first meeting of creditors will be held at the office of Jennings & Fischer, Shenandoah, on May 18.

It is reported that the Nebraska firm which thought of going into Colorado with extensive vine seed operations has abandoned the idea. Colorado is not thought to be as safe a state for vine crops as Nebraska. This, at all events, from reports is the conclusion arrived at by the Nebraska grower.

THE seed trade in Great Britain is suffering in the same measure as all other industries because of the condition of business depression following the war in South Africa. Word has reached dealers here of financial difficulties of the old and well known Surrey Seed Co., Redhill, Surrey, England.

CONTRACTING for the year's crop of seed beans in the Michigan regions is about closed up. Planting will begin in the southern section by May 25. It is hoped that dryer and warmer weather will prevail by the time seeding begins. The growers like to have the beans go into warm ground not too moist.

THE onion set fields in all sections are now far enough advanced to permit the use of cultivators. The stand is reported good. Cold, wet weather retards growth somewhat, but onions stand this sort of thing better than most crops.

REPORTS in general for the week show a normal demand for seasonable seeds. Turnip seed is quoted low by eastern wholesalers. Much complaint is registered against the spasmodic weather, which seems to have ruled all through the planting season at all points.

MOST of the Dutch bulb salesmen are on the water bound for England. Despite reports to the contrary, they say that they have had a very good season in America, with good prices. Advices from Holland are to the effect that the demand for choice tulips is causing an advance and that white hyacinths are also inclined to be higher.

SOME of the onion set dealers missed it by holding prices firm at the wrong time. Consequently a considerable quantity of sets is still being carried. The season was hard to gauge; it appeared that there was a good chance at one stage for high prices later. This might have occurred had the weather been seasonable, but it turned out wrong. To know when to force out sets and when to hold them back is the only secret of success in this line and the best of them miss it at times.

THE trade situation at Chicago is about normal for the time of year. The firms that confine their efforts principally to the wholesale trade are resting easy after one of the best years they have ever had. Those who depend mainly upon mail orders from the retail catalogues are about at the end of the season. The local trade, which always drags along with periodical spurts, will continue to worry the counter clerks for a week or two more. This is the sort of trade that is deceptive; it is hard to size up and hard to handle. The more you seem to have of it the worse off you sometimes find yourself after it is over.

AMERICAN BULB GROWING.

The REVIEW is in receipt of the following communication under date of Washington, May 1:

The Department of Agriculture is much interested in the study of American bulb growing, and desires to secure all possible information on the subject. We are already in touch with all the active bulb growers, but would be very thankful for any information that may be furnished us in regard to experiments on the growing of bulbs of any kind in America, whether such experiments have proven successful or not, and we should like to enter into correspondence with all persons who have conducted such experiments.

monument consists of a group symbolizing agriculture and horticulture, and three children, one winnowing the wheat, another uprooting a beetroot, the third holding a garland of flowers. In this way the idea of the committee in issuing its appeal for subscriptions is carried out. "Without the Vilmorins there would probably be less wheat in our fields, certainly less sugar in our beetroots, and surely fewer flowers in our gardens." On the pedestal supporting the group are four medallions representing four generations of the Vilmorin family.

FISCHER'S
GRAND FREESIA
PURITY.

A magnificent, snowy, glistening white, of very large size and great length and strength of stem: a dozen sprays making as fine a showing as a dozen large white carnations, and can be used wherever carnations can be used for decorative purposes. A truss bears from eight to eleven buds, of which six are frequently open at one time, making an immense flower. It is of great substance and bears shipping without bruising. Stems can be cut two feet long and are as rigid as sticks. It is very prolific in bloom, producing three to four side shoots of eight buds each besides the main flower. Bulbs no bigger than dried wax beans produce as large a flower as the largest bulbs, only the stems are shorter. It propagates very freely, producing from four to eight bulbs, all of which will flower the next year.

All growers of freesia should try this queen of freesia for when once grown you will want no other.

Price for large bulbs, $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The warm weather of the past week gave the wholesalers plenty of work, if it did not increase their total of sales. Stock of all kinds came in immense quantities, especially roses, lilies and sweet peas, much of which went to the garbage man. The wholesalers say business has been all that could be expected, but that they have been receiving about three times as much stock as this market can possibly use. However, it provided stock for the street boys who sell Saturday night and there were a half dozen in every block. They bought roses at about 25 cents per hundred, all had large stocks and sold them very cheap.

Various Notes.

A number of the boroughs and suburban towns have started civic improvement clubs which are working toward the improvement and beautifying of their respective towns and it will be to the interest of the florists and gardeners to encourage them whenever possible, as it will be the means of making a great deal of new business. W. A. Clarke, of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., is president of such an organization in his town, Sheraden, and reports that there are more beds being prepared for plants and more grass seed being sown than ever known in the history of the borough.

The drenching rain which fell Saturday night, followed by cooler weather Sunday, was a blessing to the growers who had worked all week to finish planting carnations.

Inquiry as to what had become of Ernest Fischer revealed the fact that he is moving his houses and stock to the new property he bought on the Brownsville road. We presume he is rushing this to get in that early cut of mums of which he is so proud.

This kind of weather makes things lively with John Bader, as his place is headquarters for all who are looking for porch plants and bedding stock.

The Florists' Club met last Tuesday night and, while it was not a large meeting, it was one of the most interesting for some time, with bedding plants the subject of discussion. Abraham Hostetter and E. P. Hostetter, of Manheim, sent cut blooms of pansies and daisies. Ludvig Mosbaek, of Onarga, Ill., sent cut pansies, all of which were very fine. H. A. Deer, Philadelphia, exhibited a couple of novelties, Alyssum saxatile flore pleno and Euphorbia pilosa major. The Valley Greenhouse Co., Sewickley, Pa., Goddin & Sons, Bridgeville, Pa.; Schenley park greenhouses and Blind Brothers showed some splendid bedding stock, all of which was criticized with much interest.

Hoo-Hoo.

MILWAUKEE.

In common with all other markets, Milwaukee is having its spring glut. Receipts are largely increased and the demand from the stores does not serve to clean up even all of the good stock, so that job lot sales have to be resorted to, and these at such low prices that there is protest from the growers. Particularly do belated lilies suffer. Since Easter it has been almost impossible to sell them and the supply has been large. One grower reports that the week after Easter he had 1,500, which were fine, but by the time the returns were in the average was just 2 cents a flower. But in spite of the present depression, the growers are getting ready to turn out more stock next season. Fred Schmeling is building four more big houses.

WILLIAMSPORT, PA.—Daniel E. Gorman is putting up more rose houses to meet the requirements of his steadily increasing retail trade.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Arthur Hannah, of the Grand Rapids Floral Co., is one of several who have started action against a concern which stocked them up with perfumes and gave them "exclusive" sale in this city. Notes were taken in payment and as these are now due and no settlement can be reached an injunction is asked to restrain collection.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

The past week has been very satisfactory from a business point of view, every day being busy. Prices are holding up in a surprising manner for this season. Roses are fair; some Brides and Maids are very fine. Carnations are holding up well but prices are not as high as formerly. Sweet peas are coming in better than usual and are selling well. Some large decorations the coming week promise to clear up a large quantity of stock. Bedding plants are in great demand and the florists at the market have a busy time these days in filling orders.

Various Notes.

Great interest is being taken by the general public in the coming flower show. A unique feature will be a display of garden decorations by the school children, also a display of interior decorations for houses. Mr. Kessler, who has the management of the coming show, had charge of the landscape work at the St. Louis Exposition and will use some new ideas.

C. A. Shaeffer, of the Kansas City Floral Co., is making arrangements toward moving to larger quarters.

D. Freudenthal reports business as very satisfactory.

A. Newell is doing a large business at both of his stores.

W. J. Barnes reports a fine Easter business and is deep in his planting orders. He is rapidly emptying his greenhouses.

Geo. M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, is sending in some very fine stock and reports business in the wholesale line as everything that could be desired.

A new flower store will be opened on Main street, we understand. The name of the firm we have not as yet learned but the store they are going to occupy is one of the largest on the street.

The market is crowded with growers these days and all are doing good business.

NARCISSUS.

MACOMB, ILL.

S. T. Danley was arrested May 1 and taken to Peoria by U. S. Deputy Marshal Tripp. The federal grand jury has indicted him for illegally making and dispensing liquor. The trouble grows out of the manufacture and sale of rhubarb and cherry wine at Mr. Danley's greenhouses. For a long time the revenue officers have been trying to make him pay license, but he has refused on the ground that the business as he conducts it does not require a license.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Mr. Radmer has retired from the firm of Riemer & Radmer, which will be continued by Louis A. Riemer. The firm is agent for the Furman boilers, which they have installed in thirty greenhouse establishments, heating more than 300,000 feet of glass.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

WORK & SMITH have succeeded Edgar King, landscape architect, Colorado Springs, Colo.

THERE are those who decry the nursery agent but he nevertheless sells the greater part of the stock which is planted each season.

PRETTY steadily the nurserymen are finding out that the advertisement which does not quote a price is the one they never hear from.

THE Fairmont Nursery Co., Fairmont, Minn., has been incorporated with $25,000 capital stock by Byron E. St. John, Sr., Nina St. John and Victor St. John.

JACS. SMITS, of Naarden, Holland, is in New York and has made an arrangement with Ralph M. Ward & Co. to represent his nursery interests in the United States.

THE board of appraisers at New York has just confirmed the invoice value of a shipment of 1,500 three-year Spiraea Anthony Waterer from Louis LeRoy, Angers, France, shipped in February and entered at 31.50 francs.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Vredenburg & Co., horticultural printers, have incorporated with $200,000 capital stock. The incorporators are Charles W. Vredenburg, Mina M. Vredenburg, Chauncy C. Vredenburg, John Drechaler, Spencer Arlidge and Howard W. Sneek.

THERE is every indication that the attendance at the nurserymen's convention this year will break all records. Certainly the association has never had so good a program. It supplies almost an embarrassment of riches.

THE report is general that the call for hardy perennials is heavier this season than ever. This is true at the older sources of supply notwithstanding that this line of stock can now be had at many nurseries where perennials were not handled a couple of years or so ago.

NURSERYMEN are still planting. It has been an unusually long season and has permitted a good clean-up and the putting of things into better shape than for several years. While there are reports of surpluses here and there on a number of items, it is a generally very satisfactory season.

HARLAN P. KELSEY, chairman of the committee, announces another change in the program for the West Baden meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen. For the paper entitled "Plants in Department Stores," by Howard A. Chase, of Philadelphia, is to be substituted one entitled "San Jose Scale Again; the Best Spray," by F. C. Hall, of Maryland.

THE FOREST PLANTERS.

A Northern New York lumber company has received 320,000 seedling spruce trees from Germany to plant upon a partly denuded tract of Adirondack land. It is only one of many recent instances showing an awakened sense of the value of forest preservation and culture among the very men who have been its chief enemies. The German spruce is especially valuable for its rapid growth.

Some of the more intelligent Adirondack lumbermen now follow to advantage the policy of cutting only trees above a certain size, leaving the rest to grow. Great railway companies are planting thousands of acres of forest for the purpose of providing ties for the future. In Kansas the commercial cultivation of the catalpa has proved a success.

Ten years ago the prospect of saving even a portion of the nation's forest wealth and thus preventing millions of acres of land from becoming a semi-desert waste looked rather discouraging. Today it is possible to report progress.

THE PRIMER OF FORESTRY.

As a source of positive information about what forestry really is, and to spread a knowledge of its methods, a book has been prepared by Gifford Pin-chot, Forester of the United States Department of Agriculture and Chief of the Bureau of Forestry, entitled "A Primer of Forestry," which is published in two parts. Part I was issued in 1899, and has passed through several editions, reaching a circulation of about 225,000 copies. It deals with the life of a single tree, with trees as they exist in a forest, with the life of a forest, and with the enemies of the forest.

Part II of the Primer has just been published. It deals with "Practical Forestry," the purpose of which is defined as "to make the forest render its best service to man in such a way as to increase rather than to diminish its usefulness in the future." In other words, it means "both the use and the preservation of the forest."

Strong Rooted Cuttings

Variegated Lawson This variety which we are introducing this season we are sure will prove to be the very best variegated sort. Pure ivory white with delicate carmine pencilings. Mr. W. N. Craig, an authority on everything pertaining to horticulture, says that he knows that this variety will out-bloom the favorite, Mrs. M. A. Patten, three to one. It has the Lawson habit and stem, and is bound to give satisfaction. $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Red Lawson A bright red sport of Lawson that is bound to be popular, and will be grown where Lawson is popular. $10.00 per 100; $75 per 1000.

Cardinal Bright cardinal, or crimson-scarlet. Won first prize for best 100 scarlet, first prize for best 50 carnations any color, first prize for best 50 scarlet seedlings, Chicago. $12.00 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Fiancee The queen of pink carnations; in a class by itself. Magnificent flowers, strictly fancy in every respect. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

White Lawson We consider this variety, which we introduced last season, the most profitable white carnation ever sent out. We think it will outbloom any other white two to one. It has given great satisfaction. When the flowers are left on the plants until fully developed they are much larger than Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson. We believe this will occupy among white carnations the same place that Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson does among pink carnations. Remember that we are headquarters for it. Splendid stock ready for immediate delivery. $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

Fred Burki Recommended as an extra free-blooming white variety and a claimant for popular favor. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Lady Bountiful A magnificent white of last season's introduction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Daheim Dark crimson. Grand stiff stem. Calyx never bursts. Free and abundant bloomer, developing very quickly. We consider this the best all-round crimson carnation. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Mrs. M. A. Patten This grand variegated carnation has given splendid satisfaction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Enchantress Freest blooming, bringing highest market prices. In great demand. $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

Prosperity A magnificent fancy carnation. $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

We are now prepared to book orders for 1906 for the Coming Victory. This is a real bread and butter variety. An early, free and abundant bloomer, with good stem; a magnificent keeper and shipper; flowers of the largest size, commanding the very highest price. This is going to be a money-maker. Orders will be filled in rotation, as received. Delivery beginning December next. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Notes of Easter Demand.

A talk with some of the retailers brought out some interesting facts about the Easter trade. Outside of lilies other plants were rather slow sale. Spiræas went begging. The flower is so much like our native varieties, which can be found growing on any vacant lot, that the public passed them up. Hydrangeas sold fairly well and azaleas were about cleaned up. Lilies sold generally at 25 cents per bud and bloom, but some could be bought at 15 cents. One of the large department stores bought in a quantity at 10 cents and sold for 15 cents per bloom. The H. Harrington Co. had an exceptionally fine lot of lilies, by far the best seen here, but as every store had all they could handle a good many were left. Some outdoor flowers, not usually seen in the east, played a prominent part in all the church decorations, as well as in the store windows, the native dogwood being used extensively. Branches of this covered with their large, star-shaped blossoms are very effective. The Scotch broom was just opening and was also used to some extent. This shrub was introduced here in the time of the Hudson Bay Fur Co., many years ago. It thrives well and blossoms freely. Another old-fashioned flower was the laburnum, with its hanging panicles of yellow flowers.

Club Doings.

It was definitely decided at the last regular meeting of the Seattle Florists' Association to hold a chrysanthemum show in November. The preliminary schedule has been arranged by a committee and after being passed on by the club will be put in the hands of the printer. The show is to be open to all growers in the United States and Canada, so that our neighbors at Victoria and Vancouver may come over and swell the entry list and take back some of our easy money. A guarantee fund has been established, the Woodland Park Floral Co. heading the list with $100. The premium list will be a very liberal one and will be issued in ample time.

Various Notes.

The Ledges Co., Inc., is the name of a new firm that has leased the L. T. Haas place of 50,000 feet of glass at Bellevue, Wash. This is just across Lake Washington from Seattle and is reached by steamboat in about an hour. They will grow about 20,000 carnation plants, also mums, and their cut will be wholesaled in Seattle.

The first steamboats to leave for Nome, Alaska, will carry the usual large consignment of cucumbers and tomatoes, which are grown here in large quantities, under glass, especially for this trade. The price for tomatoes is 25 cents per pound, wholesale.

MENACE OF CHEAP LABOR.

A subject of vital interest to the growers of this coast is now being brought to the attention of the nurserymen and wholesale florists and several meetings have been arranged by the principal dealers to consider it. I refer to the tremendous strides being made by the Japanese growers in all branches of the business. As I mentioned some time ago, they have become a power and having to reckon with them has commenced to worry the wholesalers not a little.

It is impossible for an easterner to realize the harmful and disastrous results of these little brown men, whose aim seems only to be to get enough to subsist on and sell their goods accordingly. The San Francisco Chronicle has been devoting several columns each day for the past six months, calling the attention of the working people to the danger of coolie labor and the damage to many trades that has already resulted by the supplanting of whites by the Japanese. This stand which has been so well taken and maintained by our largest daily paper has gained the endorsement of the labor unions on the coast. The Japs already control all the shoe repairing, a large percentage of the smaller restaurants, hundreds of orchards and they are now actively engaged in the growing of cut flowers and greenhouse plants.

The real danger lies in the fact that the Japanese never assimilate with the white race; they never become citizens; their only aim is to get together enough money to enable them after a few years to return to Japan and spend the rest of their lives there. Thus it is easy to see that they are undesirable in this or any other line of business. In Japan they exist for a few cents a day and when they arrive in California they adopt the same mode of living, immediately supplant white labor and when it is taken into consideration that there are in California already about 75,000 of them it is high time for Congress to take action and pass a new exclusion bill.

Until within the last few years they had not made any attempt to enter the field of growing flowers, but the success attained by a couple of them has induced others to go into that branch of business and now we have to compete with Japanese cheap labor and there is little chance for the white man to live when the Japanese can flourish. As an example of how they exist I can cite the instance of the town of Alameda, containing probably about 14,000 inhabitants. It is essentially a residence city and there are many splendid homes there. Ten years ago there were not less than 100 gardeners employed steadily in the various gardens of Alameda and today it would be impossible to find over a dozen. They have been entirely supplanted by Japs. A short time ago the attention of the health authorities was called to a Japanese boarding house in the town in which forty men were sleeping in five small rooms. They were all gardeners and had taken the places of whites who were driven out by cheap labor. This is only one instance of many I could relate.

They pursue the same course in flower growing, live on almost nothing and undersell their white neighbors usually about thirty to fifty per cent. They are patronized by the smaller stores, many of our better class dealers who can read the signs of the times having nothing to do with them. It is a short lived policy for any retailer to patronize them as it is only a question of time until they open retail establishments of their own and if they succeed as well in the store as they do in growing flowers, the florists' trade will soon be a thing of the past.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business for a few days after Easter was very flat indeed, but since then there has been a very fair demand for stock of all kinds, although there is no shortage in any line. There has been a steady call for funeral flowers and also considerable wedding work. The weather is beautiful and outdoor stock is arriving in goodly quantities. Coreopsis, gaillardias, bachelor's buttons, and flowers of that nature will help the florists to keep up a big show without too much outlay of money. Roses are a shade off crop at present, although there is no scarcity. Carnations are good, plentiful and cheap. Valley is in good supply and demand and nets the growers about $3 per hundred. Easter lilies have been of slow sale since Easter and the price, wholesale, is from $1.50 to $2 per dozen. I notice a good many florists got bit by buying too many Easter lilies in pots this year. There was less demand for them than usual and they were in much larger supply, so that the dealers, who usually have some trouble to have their orders filled, bought too heavily with the result that a good many dozens are still to be seen around town, decorating the various windows.

Various Notes.

F. Ludemann, of the Pacific Nursery, departs this week for a few months' stay in Europe. He will visit France, Holland, England and Germany.

R. Van Linge, of the Holland Nursery Co., Elmhurst, intends to devote his plant in future to the growing of valley and will have it all the year. He finds it is his best paying crop.

Thos. Hooper, of Elmhurst, reports a very fair season just passed. He makes a specialty of Beauty and his houses show he understands how to handle it.

W. H. Mann, of Pinole, is at present in Martinez, engaged in landscape gardening.

W. J. Down has removed to Point Richmond, Cal.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

On May 3 this city was visited by the most disastrous hail storm in its history. It lasted but ten minutes, yet did thousands of dollars of damage. The whole city suffered but of course the greenhouses came in for the heaviest loss. N. B. Stover, of Grandville, was touched for about 400 panes, L. C. Lincoln, of Grandville, suffered to the amount of $150, and the Mulick Floral Co. suffered for a like amount. Not till it reached Grand Rapids, however, did it show what it really could do. At Eli Cross' it struck from the south side and in a few brief moments there was hardly a pane left on his entire plant, the total loss to glass and greenhouse stock amounting to $5,000. Within two hours after the storm Mr. Cross had twenty-five men at work clearing away the broken glass preparatory to reglazing. They are still at it. Peter Kunst, Union and Crescent avenues, lost ninety per cent of all his glass, the money amount of his loss being $2,000. John Ball park sustained a slight loss, as did several lettuce plants, from $300 to $400 each. The rest of the florists escaped. Crabb & Hunter were on the edge of the storm. Their loss was nominal, while within two blocks of them the storm raged in all its fury and the stones that were weighed were two ounces each.

Peter Kunst says he will not rebuild; the boys say yes, but they will tear the houses down and build them anew. Some of the houses were pretty old and had small glass.

There is talk now of the desirability of hail insurance and it is likely several firms will insure forthwith.

The weather continues raw and unsettled. As far as known, all the florists have their carnations planted in the field. It is predicted there will be a scarcity of bedding stock before the season closes, particularly geraniums. While no concerted action has been taken to raise prices, it is noticeable that they are a little higher than last year. Particularly is this true on the smaller sizes of plants. Window boxes have advanced 10 cents a foot, while baskets and vases remain the same. G. F. C.

OCEANIC, N. J.

At the May meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society the prizes were presented to the authors of the best essays on "Fruit Culture Under Glass." Percy Hicks received a silver cup as first prize and Harry Griffiths received the society's certificate as second prize.

The prize winners on essays on chrysanthemum culture were announced. Mr. Griffiths received first prize and Joseph Kennedy second. So much time was taken up by the business matters of the evening that it was decided to postpone the reading of these essays until next meeting, at which time the prizes will be handed to the winners.

The first annual rose show of the society is to be held in Red Men's hall on June 16. The prize list has been prepared, with awards for garden roses, also a class for teas and classes for sweet peas and strawberries. A very good exhibition is in prospect.

JAMAICA, N. Y.

On the night of April 20 Henry Grebe, in a moment of mental depression, took his own life. He was a native of Darmstadt, Germany, 53 years of age. He learned the florists' trade at Darmstadt and had a flourishing business prior to his coming to this country some twenty years ago. He entered upon business here and was quite successful as a grower, although his natural inclination was toward machinery and he spent his spare time in building engines, etc., of his own invention for his son. He was of a very nervous disposition and his health had been known to be failing for some time. Recently he had been inclined to melancholy, but without reason, for he was in good circumstances and possessed of a happy home. At the time of his death he was engaged upon extensive alterations upon his greenhouses. His wife was a sister of W. C. Krick, of Brooklyn. Two sons are left with her.

SALINA, KAN.—E. L. Farquharson has bought the greenhouses and business of the late John Buchi.

Oncidium Varicosum RogersiiJust received from Collectors. NEW IMPORTATION.

This Orchid is undoubtedly one of the most profitable commercial varieties grown. It throws three-foot stems bearing as many as 170 blossoms of a rich golden yellow, two inches and over in diameter, and can be successfully grown either on blocks of wood, in pots or in baskets. Our competitors, as well as all commercial and private Orchid growers who have seen our stock, report that our importations of this valuable Orchid are the truest and best that reach this country. The plants we offer have several leads and bulbs, many with foliage, and our price, until sold, is as follows: $1.50 each; $15.00 per doz.; $100.00 per 100.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

It is really difficult for us to say much about the cut flower market at this writing. After a week of very fluctuating weather the report in general is that cut flower trade is dull, very little doing in any one line except in the sale of plants, which is reported good by the plantmen.

A great oversupply in cut stock of all kinds is still the report of the wholesalers and very little is bringing anything like average prices, the bulk of the receipts being sold very cheap in large lots.

Roses are of extra fine quality and high in color. Select teas are sold as low as $5 per hundred and fancy Beauties at $3 per dozen. Carnations are coming in fine, but too many for the demand. Extra fancy stock is again down to $3 and common as low as 75 cents per hundred.

The market is again flooded with Harrisii and longiflorums. Outdoor valley has its effect on the indoor crop. Other bulbous stock is about cut out. Red peonies are in the market at $4 per hundred. Sweet peas are very plentiful in all colors. White and lavender sell best at from 40 to 60 cents per hundred. Smilax, fancy ferns, adiantum, asparagus and all other greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

The executive committee for the fall flower show met at Mr. Koenig's on May 4 and decided on the dates of the show, which will be the week of November 7. The preliminary list will be out this week and will perhaps be distributed at the club meeting. A place for holding the show had not yet been found.

The city council has appropriated $126,397 to the city park department, which Park Commissioner Aull distributed as follows: Office of park commissioner, $11,097; Forest park, $65,000; Benton, $3,000; Carondelet, $10,000; Carr place, $2,000; Forest park boulevard, $1,000; Fountain, $1,500; Gamble place, $1,000; Gravius park, $1,200; Hyde park, $3,000; Jackson place, $1,000; Kendrick garden, $900; Laclede, $1,100; Lyon park, $2,000; O'Fallon park, $10,000; Rose Hill, $300; St. Louis place, $6,500; South St. Louis place, $800, and Washington square (City Hall), $5,000. Lafayette and Tower Grove parks are not mentioned, as they do not come under the jurisdiction of the city park departments and Messrs. Hunt and Gurney are paid from a separate fund.

It has been reported that Phil Hauswirth, of Chicago, was in town last week, calling on friends, but we did not see him.

Carl Beyer had to do jury duty the past week. He wants some one to tell him why they always come for him during the busy planting time.

Fred C. Weber was busy the past week with funeral work for several society people who had deaths in their families.

Grimm & Gorley report that they are doing nicely in the new store at Sixth and Olive streets, which they recently opened.

The great wind, hail and rain storm on Thursday of last week did a great amount of damage to trees throughout the city. The greenhouse men escaped with a few lights of glass broken. Had the hailstones been larger the damage to glass would have reached into thousands of dollars.

Bedding has begun and planting is going on all over the city and at the city parks. City Hall park has added some new features. Many more beds are being planted than usual.

The bowlers had plenty of fun on Monday night. Nine members rolled five games, in which R. Meinhardt was high, 777; Kuehn, second, 741; Theo. Miller, third, 735. Next in order came C. Beyer, Beneke, Ellis, F. Meinhardt, Ed Gerlach and H. Lohrenz. Next week the boys will make the DeSoto trip.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—W. B. Paterson will add three greenhouses to his establishment at a cost of $2,500.

GREENVILLE, MICH.—On the afternoon of May 4 the heaviest hail storm ever known here inflicted great loss. L. C. Lincoln's greenhouses were hit hard. On one house glazed with single thick glass hardly a whole pane was left. Stock outside was badly cut up.

SAVANAH, GA.

John Wolf's business has been increasing in a very satisfactory manner and he now has the largest place in the south, as he recently bought an adjoining piece of property consisting of six acres and has erected on it seventeen greenhouses, amounting to 140,000 square feet of glass, which would be a pretty fair addition for one season even in the big cut flower growing centers, where the business is much better developed than it is in Georgia. Mr. Wolf used cypress and yellow pine in his new range, adopting all the latest improvements in regard to ventilating and heating.

Six of the new houses, each 22x150, have been planted to roses. Four houses 22x100 are to be devoted to carnations and two houses 22x115 are planted with chrysanthemums. A house 36x100 is used for palms and ferns and there is a high house 22x98 for smilax and asparagus. A house 22x162 is used for miscellaneous stock, including asters, Harrisii lilies, etc. A propagating house 11x100 is also provided.

In addition Mr. Wolf has 500 hotbed sash, under which he grows a variety of stock but largely bulbs, principally Paper Whites and Romans. The adjoining land is planted with such nursery stock as is needed in the vicinity of a prosperous southern city. A very large number of roses are sold for bedding purposes. The city water system is used in both houses and field and is very satisfactory.

Mr. Wolf does both a wholesale and retail business. He began with only a few hotbed sash and has every reason to feel proud of what he has achieved. He is certainly one of the most progressive florists of the south.

The Bee is Like

The Prosperous Florist, NEVER IDLE.

The bee is the first that takes advantage of the great work Godfrey Aschmann, the never-resting florist, and his people have done since Easter. They are swarming and enjoying their life. "O, Aschmann's flowers taste so sweet," the bees say; "we cannot stop, we have a big field to work in. 100,000 of the choicest plants; every nook and corner full. Let us harvest."

Secure bargains now and for Decoration Day. Please note our lowest prices. Plants out of 4-inch pots at $7.00 per 100 in the following varieties:

Geraniums, S. A. Nutt, the best double crimson; La Favorite, the best double white; Mme. Thibaut, double pink; Le Pilote, double scarlet, and some other mixed colors.

Ageratum, dwarf blue. Heliotropes, Begonia Vernon, 5,000 of the dark red, and Erfordii, pink, 3-inch, $5.00 per 100. Scarlet Sage Clara Bedman, 3-inch, $5.00. Periwinkle, or Vinca variegata, $10.00 per 100; 2 1/2 to 3-inch, $5.00 per 100. Nasturtiums, all colors. Ivy Geraniums, Cobaea Scandens, $8.00 per 100. Fuchsias, 5-inch, $1.50 per dozen.

Dracaena Indivisa, broad leaved, imported, 30-inches high; 50 per cent home grown, 5 to 5 1/4-inch pots, 25c each.

Hydrangea Ottokars for planting out; some have buds and some not, 6-inch pots, 25c to 35c each.

The following is a list of small plants out of 2 1/4-inch pots.

Coleus, Golden Queen, Verschaffeltii, Queen Victoria and fancies. Petunia Inimitable Dwarf, California Giant, all in 3-inch, at $5.00 per 100. Phlox Drummondii; Verbenas; have 10,000 Sweet Alyssum Little Gem; Lobelia, dwarf and trailing; Cuphea; Pyrethrum Aureum; Parlor Ivy.

I also have a new Variegated Carnation to which I have not yet given a name. Vigorous growth, heavy stems. The odor is like a real clove. Everybody who has seen it is crazy over it. 3-inch pots at 15c and 2 1/4-inch, 10c each.

Don't forget that I am the Moonvine grower of the land. Only A. W. Smith's Hybrid Moonvines, (Ipomaea Noctiflora) is exclusively the one I grow and is the only true Moonvine in America, as Mr. Smith has the world wide reputation of growing the best Moonvine seed. Please bear in mind that this is no morning glory like so many sell for Moonvines but the pure white waxy moon flowers as large as saucers. 2 1/4-inch pots, $5.00 per 100; 3-inch pots, $7.00 per 100; 4-inch pots, $10.00 per 100. Nicely staked up.

Araucaria Excelsa just arrived from Belgium per steamer Etonian, May 1. First consignment 3,000; 2,000 more coming by next steamer; grown for me under contract by an Araucaria specialist in Belgium. I must say to the benefit of my customers, that I never before received for the money so nice and strong araucarias as I did this time. I herewith quote you special prices on them. Just look. 10 to 12 inches high, 2 years old, 50c each; 12 to 14 inches high, 60c each; 14 to 16 inches high, 75c each; 16 to 20 inches high, $1.00 each. Specimen, 7-inch pots, 30 to 35 inches high, $1.50 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Compacta, very beautiful, unusually large, $1.00 to $1.25 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, 75c to $1.00 each. Kentia Forsteriana, 30 to 36 inches high, 4 years old, $1.00; 4 years old, 25 to 30 inches high, 75c each. Beilmoreana, 4 years old, 25 to 30 inches high, $1.00 each.

Cash with order please. My best thanks to my customers for their liberal Easter orders. All goods must travel on purchaser's risk.

SEED SOWING.

"Writers and teachers have so persistently advised the practice of covering all seeds to the exclusion of light," says a contributor to the Gardeners' Chronicle, "that it has with many become as much a matter of course to do this as to provide crocks for drainage. Were growers to make the simple experiment of sowing two batches of any sample of seed, affording the same treatment to each, except that one shall be darkened and the other left exposed, I am confident it would soon be seen that the practice of darkening has nothing to recommend it.

"Dr. Pouchet, in his interesting book, The Universe, says: 'Following Ingenhousz and Sennebler, men have long taught that light was opposed to germination. This is an error, as Saussure noticed. Nevertheless, all the colored rays of light are not favorable to it; the chemical and the calorific rays have an opposite action upon this phenomenon. The former, which are the blue and violet rays, clearly increase its activity; the latter, the red and yellow rays, are hurtful to it.

"It would appear from this that if, instead of totally excluding light, we could exclude the calorific rays only, germination would be appreciably hastened, and if that be the case, it would surely be good policy to place seeds of such plants as are difficult and slow of germination under handlights of blue-stained glass."

"The same authority (Pouchet) says: 'If we pass an electric current beneath a sown surface, the seed develops much more quickly than in a part which has not been submitted to electricity.' One wonders whether such treatment would tend to impair the constitution of the young seedlings; if not, it would probably be a useful method to adopt when handling seeds of such subjects as are stubborn and difficult to start.

"The greatest difficulty to contend with when seeds are fully exposed arises from the necessity for repeated watering. Not only is this a question of labor, but a necessity which involves dangers such as washing out, souring soil, rotting of seeds, and facilitating the growth of moss and fungus on the surface of the soil which so often spells disaster. If, however, care is taken in the choice of composts and of situation for the seeds, the necessity for constant watering may be minimised. Too high a temperature is frequently the primary cause of failure in raising seedlings."

We can't do much with a "JUST WON'T GROWER"

Who KNOWS that ALL tobacco powder is the same cigar and tobacco store trash he gets at his cigar store or from his seedman and JUST WON'T ask for our booklet, that is full of the sayings of his fellowa, that read:—

H. A. S. Co.—Send 200 lbs. Black Stuff Fine for dusting; the like in action we have not yet seen.

KIMMERLE & MINDER, Newark, N. J.

H. A. S. Co.—Please send 200 lbs. Fumigating Kind Tobacco Powder; best thing I have struck to date; got some from a neighbor. A. G. LAKE, Wellesley Hills, Mass.

He JUST WON'T believe that 95 per cent of all the growers that send for our free five-pound trial sample bags of THE FUMIGATING KIND (for fumigating) and THE BLACK STUFF FINE (for sprinkling), have purchased not once, but again and again, after the trial. WHY BE A JUST WON'T, when you can have these free trial sample bags; yes, two of them if one won't do. All we ask is for you to pay the express charges on them. ASK NOW, don't be a JUST WON'T.

SOUTH BEND, IND.

Death of Benj. Gingrich.

Benjamin Gingrich died very suddenly on May 2 of dropsy, at the age of 62 years. Mr. Gingrich was born April 2, 1843, near Hamburg, Ontario, and came to South Bend in October, 1865. He was married June 21, 1866 to Elizabeth Beyler of Bremen, Ind. In 1872 he embarked in the furniture business and continued in it until 1887, since which time he has been a building contractor until December, 1901, when he organized the South Bend Floral Company and was its president at the time of his death. Besides his wife he leaves two sons, Edward W. and Irving, also an adopted daughter, three brothers and two sisters.

ORANGE, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held on May 5. Orchids of extraordinary merit were shown by Julius Roehrs, William Barr and Henry Graves. Roses were shown by John Crosby Brown, carnations by the Colgates, A. C. Von Gaasbaek and Chas. Hathaway, and vegetables from Stewart Hartshorn and Mrs. William Pierson. It was decided to have an exhibition, in a large hall, if possible, in November. The June meeting was appointed as a special ladies' night. Two new members were elected and two placed in nomination.

After the meeting the formation of a special orchid society was discussed. The society has at the present time among its members Dr. J. M. W. Kitchen, Lager & Hurrell, Julius Roehrs, and Edwin Thomas, Arthur Bodwell, William Warner and Peter Duff who are special growers of these flowers. J. B. D.

ALLENTOWN, PA.—George W. Fetzer has rented his greenhouses to Otto J. Sawyer, who was formerly employed by Geo. S. Geiger, at Nazareth, Pa.

WINONA, MINN.—Fuhlbruegge Bros.' greenhouses were visited by a very destructive fire on the morning of May 2, destroying pottery and packing sheds, office and salesroom, also one carnation house, palm house and show house. The loss on the stock was complete; building covered by insurance. The origin of fire is not positively known but probably resulted from defective flues.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

We are in the midst of the worst glut of the season. The quantity of roses and carnations that are coming in is simply awful and there is not a ghost of a show to get anything like a price out of them. While this is the usual time of the year for a glut, and we expect it, yet it was made much worse this year because of the strike in Chicago. Many of the regular consignors to the Chicago market have been shipping here and the majority of them might have done better to have dumped their cut at home.

The weather is warm and outside of a few small weddings nothing at all is doing. Roses and carnations were offered at the buyers' own price; $5 per thousand was not unusual. The warm weather is having its effect upon the quality of the stock. Brides and Maids are getting smaller every day. Beauties went better than anything else but at very low prices. They open very fast now.

Lilies of all kinds have been equally plentiful and sell very low. Some good outdoor tulips sell well, also outdoor valley. Many other kinds of outdoor flowers are in. Lilac is about done for.

Green goods go very slowly, with the exception of smilax. Southern ferns are beginning to arrive but they are a little soft yet.

Various Notes.

It is expected that there will be a goodly number of members present at the Florists' Society meeting on Saturday night.

Stand rents in the Jabez Elliott Flower Market are now due and the holders are fast paying up. All report a prosperous year and especially good trade in bedding plants at the present time.

Charles Jones has discontinued his Avondale store for the present. Owing to a cleaning establishment next door, flowers would not keep. As soon as a good location can be secured he intends to start up again.

Cape jasmine is coming in from the south but it moves slowly.

Visitors: Miss Bessie Martin, Huntington, W. Va.; Mr. Dieterich, Maysville, Ky. C. J. OHMER.

FERGUS FALLS, MINN.—On May 3 heavy hail broke 500 panes of glass in the two greenhouses at the State Hospital and at the greenhouses of N. Mehlin it broke half the glass. The latter is a member of the Florists' Hail Association.

USE "BURNHAM" BOILERS and REDUCE YOUR COAL BILL

YOU WANT PROFITS which continue to grow. The reason why "BURNHAM" BOILERS will save coal for you is that there is a large combustion chamber, also a large active fire surface for each square foot of grate. They heat easily, quickly, efficiently. It takes but a short time to set up one of these boilers.

Write to-day to our New York Office for our catalogue of Greenhouse Construction and Heating and Ventilating Catalogue.

PIERSON Water Steam BOILERS

Will reduce your coal bill. They did it for others last winter.

The Reason of this is found in the construction of the boilers. They have a larger amount of direct fire surface than other horticultural boilers. The flue areas are large and all parts are easily accessible for cleaning. They are adapted for the use of any kind of fuel.

We Manufacture Every Type of Greenhouse and Everything for Heating.

NEPHROLEPIS —BARROWSII—

Of all the new forms of Nephrolepis this is the HARDEST and BEST.

Fronds more dense, more finely pinnate of more massive and delicate effect.

Thrives in same temperature and under same conditions as the old Boston fern. Having more fronds than any other form, well supported by stout midribs, it is of more shapely and bushy habit.

Very dwarf and compact.

A decided improvement over other introductions and is admitted by the highest authority to be the Best introduction up to date for all purposes.

Prices for 2½-inch stock from bench, per 100, $25.00; per 1000, $200.00; 500 at thousand rate.

GOOD
ASBAD BULBS*BUY GOOD BULBS AND GROW THEM PROPERLY*HORSESHOE BRAND BULBS

Are the best that can be obtained. They produce the most satisfactory results at a reasonable cost.

THEY ARE NOT THE CHEAPEST.

We will sell you bargain bulbs at bargain prices however, if you want them. You can buy a bulb for ten cents and you can buy a bulb for five cents, but you can't buy a ten cent bulb for five cents and don't forget it.

GOOD QUALITY.

There is no business where quality tells more. The quality of the flowers you send out determines the reputation you establish for your business. A good reputation is your best advertisement. Good advertising pays.

REMEMBER.....

The first cost of bulbs is small—it's the growing that costs—why waste time, heat, valuable space, labor, etc., on poor stock?—and the disappointment. It is false economy to buy bulbs of doubtful quality.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Filling Cemetery Vases.

Memorial day will soon be here and it brings a busy time. Not only do our customers want their vases filled in the cemeteries, but there is often the desire expressed: "I want our flower beds and veranda boxes filled by Decoration day." Those who do what we call a cemetery business, and fill 300 or 400 vases, know what a laborious business it is. Some years ago there were several kinds of vases and baskets used for this purpose. There were cast-iron vases, wire baskets or stands and rustic baskets. Now there are few of any kind but the iron vases and they certainly have the best appearance, as well as being practically everlasting. A coat of paint annually and they are always new. We think there is rather too much sameness in the painting. Ninety-five or more per cent are painted white. While any gaudy color would be quite out of place, if more were painted a deep green and others a stone color it would relieve the monotony.

Time was when we used to send wagons loaded with plants and other wagons with soil and a gang of men and attempt to fill fifty vases in a day. We have got over that, for there was too much waste of material. Plants were broken and wilted and the battered plants that came back made too big an item. There are a few old-fashioned iron vases and, of course, some large stone vases that have to be filled at the cemeteries, but nearly all iron vases are of the reservoir type and the top, or bowl, can be lifted off and brought to the greenhouse and much more satisfactorily filled. The work can be done much better, with no waste of plants, and you have the contents of the whole greenhouses at your back. There may be a little more teaming this way, but, all things considered, it is by far the better plan.

Don't Procrastinate.

Another weakness we used to have was to try to persuade people to wait until a day or two after Decoration day. That is a big mistake. Don't put off for an hour anything that can be done now, for the first ten days of June find us as busy as on Easter Saturday.

We never considered that there was much margin of profit in this vase filling business, yet a change in style of late years has been somewhat in our favor. Ten years ago, with few exceptions, the vases were filled with a mixture of plants, with vines around the edge. Often have we counted the plants and found that at wholesale prices they would cost as much as we got for the filling, soil, moss and labor thrown in. But remember that in those cases we largely used what we had and so cleaned up on everything, and that makes a wonderful difference.

Did you ever think of the difference in the profits of a place where all the stock is in salable shape and the benches emptied and one where one-third or one-half the plants, for some reason or other, are left unsold? It is the difference between success and failure. Every foot of your bench room must yield you some profit. If it does not, it has dragged down the profit of the space that did pay.

Too Much Red.

But to return to the vases. The great majority are now filled with one kind of plant, mostly geraniums. There are several reasons for that. They are always in bloom, are neat and compact and do not suffer from a little neglect of water. They make a bright, gay spot. S. A. Nutt is such an admirable variety for this purpose that it is overdone. The fine for the purpose. A mixture of drooping plants for the edge is not at all suitable for a geranium vase. The green vinca is good for the scarlets and the variegated vinca for the pink and salmon shades. A dwarf white geranium is fine for Mrs. Perkins and Mme. Salleroi is often wanted as an edging for Nutt. A combination that many want is a pink geranium for the center with an edging of the pink ivy-leaved geranium.

Other Good Material.

Large vases are sometimes filled with dwarf, free-flowering cannas of one variety, such as Tarrytown, The Express, or Souvenir de Antoine Crozy. Large stone vases are sometimes filled with Caladium esculentum but these vigorous rooting plants should never be used in combination with other plants, for they quickly starve them out. Begonias of the Vernon type make pretty vases and where there is some shade during the hottest hours we have filled vases with tuberous-rooted begonias, and rich and choice they look.

I don't pretend to have exhausted the list of available plants for this purpose, but always recommend the filling to be individual lot-owner may be charmed with his brilliant mass of scarlet blooms, but when there are forty similar ones within 100 yards, the effect is not pleasant. There should be more pink, white and salmon. Beaute Poitevine, Mrs. Frances Perkins and John Doyle are all of one kind of plant. There is more profit for you and it is sure to be more satisfactory to your patron. If your customer wants scarlet geraniums, it will have to be so, but encourage variety. It is not the beauty of one lot that should please the visitor to the city of the dead, but the generally pleasing appearance of the whole grounds.

Mixed Plants.

If the mixed vase is still preferred, there is considerable choice of material. For a center plant there is nothing equal to that cast-iron plant, Dracæna indivisa. It not only exists but it grows and endures the fierce sun and drying winds. Then there are the zonal geraniums, coleus, achyranthes, variegated geraniums, Begonia Vernon, acalypha, Boston fern, centaurea, fuchsias (in the shade), petunias, etc. About the only palm that would be good for a center plant in place of the dracæna would be the phoenix. They will stand the sun and the wind.

It is neither fair nor wise to put in plants that will make a fine show for a week or two and then be out of bloom for the whole summer. Such plants as the white feverfew or show pelargonium will not do, or any plant whose season of flowering is short. Nearly every cemetery has situations where any plants will thrive and other bleak, windy positions where only the hardiest plants will preserve a decent appearance. This must be studied.

Drooping Plants.

All these mixed vases will want an assortment of drooping plants and there are very few really good ones. Some that may thrive and flower in a sheltered, partly shaded place will look like rats' tails in a few weeks if exposed to the winds and starved for root room. The English ivy will remain just where you put it, but in a vase is not graceful. The vincas are truly the best of all. Then there is the ivy geranium, Abutilon vexillarium, double sweet alyssum, money vine, senecio (often called German ivy), lobelias, maurandia, nasturtium, etc. There are two splendid climbing plants, both excellent for this purpose, but seldom seen because they are neglected in the winter, in fact, often lost, viz., Ipomœa Mortonii and Pilogyne suavis.

Don't Crowd the Plants.

Now, if you are a beginner at the laborious vase business, remember that you crowd into a space of two feet in diameter or less, as many plants as would about properly fill a 6-foot bed. Therefore the soil should be of the best. In addition to manure, use a 6-inch pot of bone flour to every wheelbarrow of soil and be sure to get the soil firmly and compactly down between the balls of the plants. Let each plant be well firmed in its place. We cover the surface of the soil with green moss. It keeps the soil from washing off, prevents some drying out of the soil and when the roots reach it they thrive in it.

One thing more. When you start a young man filling these vases, your stock is abundant and he wants to make a nice looking job and crowds in your fine geraniums. Now, with these early filled vases there is no need to crowd, for they will soon fill up and be all the better for a little room to spread. Save your plants, for there are lots of belated orders coming along until July 4. Then you would be glad of the plants you so lavishly used when they were plentiful, and it is the late filled vases that need crowding, if any.

We like to water the vases we fill and if you water several hundred at $2 or $2.50 each for the season it does not seem a large charge for the individual, but it will be found a better paying operation than the charge for filling and you have the opportunity to care for your own work.

Veranda Boxes.

There is a good deal being said of late about window boxes. We noticed just twenty years ago the coming summer, in England, that the window box was greatly in vogue in the windows of houses of moderate pretensions, and conspicuous in all those boxes were two gay colors that we in this country are deprived of, the shrubby yellow calceolaria and the blue lobelia. The former is absolutely useless here and the latter goes out of flower in a short time.

The window box has been used in this country in the modest homes for many years, but never in pretty detached residences. Their gardening embellishment has been the veranda box, and fifteen to twenty years ago it was in the height of its favor. I feel sure I am within bounds by stating that no other city in the Union used so many thousand feet of these ornamental arrangements as the city of Buffalo. It began some thirty years ago. We have lived through its birth, its days of glory and, I am sorry to say, almost its "decline and fall," although it has by no means quite fallen. There are perhaps not 100 feet filled now to 1,000 feet ten years ago.

Nearly all the houses on residence streets stand back from the property line from twenty-five to fifty feet and are all detached and seldom a fence of any kind. This latter fact wonderfully surprised Mr. Goldring, of the London Garden, on a visit here. He was surprised that there was not all kinds of trespassing and vandalism going on. There is nothing of the kind. Perhaps if there were a big fence and a bull dog inside there might be some attempt at trespassing. These residents object to the little stretch of lawn being cut up for flower beds, preferring to view the restful green sward and a clump of flowering shrubs or a few small growing trees.

So on the verandas they placed boxes filled with flowering and ornamental plants, with drooping vines. Some houses on front and side verandas had as much as 100 lineal feet of boxes and fifty feet was common. It was not your own embellishment you enjoyed as you sat on your veranda, for you looked over that and admired the beauty of your neighbor's across the street. And for the passerby on the shaded avenue it was beauty the whole way along.

I know of no good reason why many have given up their veranda boxes, except that they desired a change, got a little tired and in many cases for the trivial reason that the wooden boxes rotted out and they did not trouble to get new ones. There is no style of gardening which will make a street more beautiful and we trust the taste for it will again come around.

A Good Style of Box.

If we were asked to supply the boxes, as we have thousands of feet in the past, we should have them made of cypress and painted deep green, or the color of the veranda. A good size is nine inches wide at the top and eight inches at the bottom and six inches deep. Let the front splay an inch outward. This is all inside measure. As these boxes are much better filled at the greenhouses, they should not be too long. A box of the size mentioned and six feet long is a good lift for two men. Don't forget a few holes in the bottom for drainage.

The beauty of these veranda boxes is that invariably they flourish and grow. They can be watered faithfully and are seldom exposed to hard winds. The drooping vines are a most important part. The boxes themselves should never be visible. After a few weeks' growth they should be covered with a drooping curtain of green vines. The soil should be rich, but rank growth of such plants as coleus should be kept in check or they smother the geraniums.

An Easter Plant Receptacle Originated by C. H. Fox, Philadelphia.

Plants to Use.

There are plants for every situation and often these boxes are shaded most of the day by the stately elm on the avenue. We have filled some with Begonia Rex, others with Boston ferns. If sunny, then everybody likes color and there is nothing like the gay geranium. Unlike the vases, a mixture for the boxes is preferable to a mass unless it be a very shady situation and the drooping greenery is the chief beauty.

Such a box as described, filled with ordinary plants, should be worth 75 cents per running foot, exclusive of the box, which made of cypress and painted, should be worth 35 cents per lineal foot. Encourage the veranda box. There is nothing, except the beautiful trees, which will better embellish our residence streets.

EASTER NOVELTIES.

The illustration on the next page shows the interior of the show house at "The Sign of the Rose," one of Philadelphia's most unique flower shops. Chas. H. Fox is the proprietor and a man of original ideas. One of the illustrations shows a bougainvillea in a receptacle which Mr. Fox originated for Easter of 1904. These are plain willow and silk fibre and have since been supplied to the trade by some of the dealers in this class of material but in the form of a more conventional basket. It was the idea of Mr. Fox to depart as far as possible from conventionality, and he seems certainly to have succeeded, at the same time retaining the artistic qualities.

GROUPING OF PLANTS.

The grouping of plants is an interesting but neglected study. It should be given as much care and thought as the displaying of cut flowers. Instead of that thought and care, when plant displays are to be arranged it seems to be born into human nature to immediately and invariably measure out rows and bring every pot in line with the mark, with a generous addition of all the colors in and out of the rainbow, well mixed. To begin with, such an arrangement is often thought necessary on account of having no background worthy of the name. Now, a background is just as important as the plant display itself and it may make or ruin a fine effect.

For the display illustrated there were first placed as a background a number of Porto Rican mats in plain, olive green and one lighter green mixed with white in an indistinct pattern. The latter kind were tacked along the wall above the two long shelves where the plants were to be displayed. The darker mats were spread out over the shelves, some straight and some cornerwise, till the surface was covered and also the space beneath to the floor. These mats made a clean, soft background for the group of plants to be arranged for display. Of these plants there was quite a variety, as is often necessary in a retail store. Longiflorum lilies, rubber plants, Asparagus plumosus, Boston ferns, Crimson Ramblers, white geraniums, a kentia, Hermosa, Kaiserin and Ideal roses and light scarlet geraniums, a problem in color, sure enough. The first act was to clear out the scarlet geraniums in a side group by themselves. The second move was to group the lilies after the style shown in the illustration, showing each plant individually and yet making each stand in a relation to the whole group, which suggests mildly the form of a crescent. Within the center of the group above there appears a Boston fern in a matting cover and to the right an Asparagus plumosus tipped forward. To the right outside of the line of lilies are two rubber plants and another Boston fern.

Inside of the circle backed by lilies and bordered in front by the white geraniums, are the Crimson Ramblers. This marked contrasting of the color intensifies both the crimson and the white, which advantage, of course, does not appear in the picture. The Hermosa, Ideal and Kaiserin roses all being harmonious colors, are placed together within the left side of the crescent. The intervening space toward the center is comfortably filled with the white geraniums and a few more of the plumosus plants.

There were only a few pot covers used, and those few included but one of each kind. A brown basket cover may be seen around a lily jar, one lavender striped Porto Rican mat tied with a purple cord covers the Boston fern near the center, and an inconspicuous green jardiniere guiltless of any decoration except gold handles, is barely visible on the right.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Decoration day, the anniversary on which the graves of the soldiers of the United States are decorated with flowers. It is observed on the 30th of May, and is much cherished by the American people.—Encyclopedia.

While "Decoration" will doubtless always be the popular name for the day now again approaching, "Memorial" is a better term and, unless usage makes for correctness, the proper one. For a number of years ago the Grand Army of the Republic, whose very own the day then was, at one of its national encampments, expressed its belief that the word,

The Grouping of Plants.

the dead, but the generally pleasing appearance of the whole grounds.

Mixed Plants.

If the mixed vase is still preferred, there is considerable choice of material. For a center plant there is nothing equal to that cast-iron plant, Dracena indivisa. It not only exists but it grows and endures the fierce sun and drying winds. Then there are the zonal geraniums, coleus, achyranthes, variegated geraniums, Begonia Vernon, acalypha, Boston fern, centaurea, fuelsias (in the shade), petunias, etc. About the only palm that would be good for a center plant in place of the dracena would be the phoenix. They will stand the sun and the wind.

It is neither fair nor wise to put in plants that will make a fine show for a week or two and then be out of bloom for the whole summer. Such plants as the white feverfew or show pelargonium will not do, or any plant whose season of flowering is short. Nearly every cemetery has situations where any plants will thrive and other bleak, windy positions where only the hardiest plants will preserve a decent appearance. This must be studied.

Drooping Plants.

All these mixed vases will want an assortment of drooping plants and there are very few really good ones. Some that may thrive and flower in a sheltered, partly shaded place will look like rats' tails in a few weeks if exposed to the winds and starved for root room. The English ivy will remain just where you put it, but in a vase is not graceful. The vines are truly the best of all. Then there is the ivy geranium, Abutilon vexillarium, double sweet alyssum, money vine, senecio (often called German ivy), lobelias, maurandia, nasturtium, etc. There are two splendid climbing plants, both excellent for this purpose, but seldom seen because they are neglected in the winter, in fact, often lost, viz., Ipomoea Mortonii and Pilogyne suavis.

Don't Crowd the Plants.

Now, if you are a beginner at the laborious vase business, remember that you crowd into a space of two feet in diameter or less, as many plants as would about properly fill a 6-foot bed. Therefore the soil should be of the best. In addition to manure, use a 6-inch pot of bone flour to every wheelbarrow of soil and be sure to get the soil firmly and compactly down between the balls of the plants. Let each plant be well firmed in its place. We cover the surface of the soil with green moss. It keeps the soil from washing off, prevents some drying out of the soil and when the roots reach it they thrive in it.

One thing more. When you start a young man filling these vases, your stock is abundant and he wants to make a nice looking job and crowds in your fine geraniums. Now, with these early filled vases there is no need to crowd, for they will soon fill up and be all the better for a little room to spread. Save your plants, for there are lots of belated orders coming along until July 4. Then you would be glad of the plants you so lavishly used when they were plentiful, and it is the late filled vases that need crowding, if any.

We like to water the vases we fill

MEMORIAL DAY.

Decoration day, the anniversary on which the graves of the soldiers of the United States are decorated with flowers. It is observed on the 30th of May, and is much cherished by the American people.—Encyclopedia.

While "Decoration" will doubtless always be the popular name for the day now again approaching, "Memorial" is a better term and, unless usage makes for correctness, the proper one. For a number of years ago the Grand Army of the Republic, whose very own the day then was, at one of its national encampments, expressed its belief that the word,

The Grouping of Plants.

"decoration, that which adorns, something added by way of embellishment," was not in harmony with the sentiment of the occasion, and adopted formal resolution substituting "Memorial" as in keeping with the purpose of the day.

But Memorial day no longer belongs to the old soldier and the families of those who have answered the last roll call. Not that their memory is honored less but that the custom of remembering the dead with flowers is so fine a one that it has been generally adopted by the people. Since this has come to pass Memorial day has become of prime importance to the trade. Nowadays everyone who has loved ones in the silent cities wants flowers on the 30th of May and the quantities of cut flowers sold exceeds even Christmas or Easter. Naturally the call is in most instances for low priced flowers but at this season cost is also low and the opportunity for profit is as good as on the other important flower days. Preceding Memorial day the plantmen who handle bedding stock are rushed to the limit but the day itself, unlike Christmas and Easter, calls for few flowering plants. It is a cut flower day and one which should be fostered by the trade. Don't let a customer go out of your store because your prices are beyond the would-be buyer's means.

FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Flags and the national colors in some form or other immediately suggest themselves to us on mention of Memorial day. Both as a celebration and as a trade getter, let "Old Glory" in silk, bunting, or flowers, appear in the show window a week ahead of Memorial day. There will be no time at the eleventh hour for window decorating, anyhow, and a window that is worth having need not grow stale in a week's time.

Since the jasmine is so largely a Memorial day flower, suspend a wreath of them overhead in the window. Draw a large flag through the wreath. Spread out the larger end so that it will drape easily and loosely, and attach the upper corner to some convenient point. Let the lower end form a streamer on the opposite side of the wreath. Fill in the window below solid with blue and white pansies and blue ageratums.

Other suggestions: Make a miniature "Monitor" in the bed of the window; historical pictures of the "Yankee Cheese Box" can be easily copied for this purpose. Float it if possible, and finish the sides of the tank of water with sheet moss. Fill the "cheese box" with long-stemmed flowers in red, white and blue.

Group on a small stand in the window an old army coat or cape, faded though it be; a canteen, and a generous bunch of scarlet and white carnations. Put in as many carnations as the canteen will hold in water and suspend it with blue ribbon.

Fill the window seat with daisies in bloom sprinkled with blue ageratum and dark red sweet peas.

Fill an old drum with long-stemmed red, white and blue flowers. Have a life conspicuously on the front of the drum, and set off the group with a flag drapery beneath.

Longiflorum or candidum lilies in pots in two good-sized groups on opposite sides of the window, will combine nicely with an immense cobweb made of narrow red and blue ribbon among the tops of the lilies.

Now, when wood fern leaves are off quality, is a good time to cultivate the use of extra foliage with its own flower. Rose foliage can always be had, and to make a flat cluster of roses more easily seen, place quite a bushy mat of rose foliage down as a foundation and lay the bunch on it. Treat carnations the same on Sprengeri or plumosus.

Boston fern fronds with snapdragons is a pleasing introduction. For a new-made grave large flat bunches of ferns form a good covering without undue expense, and flowers in vases or flat bunches can be used above with much better effect.

As to ties for flat bunches, a square double bow, or two loops with long streamers are all very well, but we might as well have a change once in a while. Try a brisk rosette of chiffon and ribbon mixed, or a flat rosette, or a cluster of short bows of No. 3 ribbon, or a butterfly bow, which is an ordinary square bow of chiffon with the bows and ends stuck straight up and tied tight in their upright position with baby ribbon. One yard does it, and the place it looks best is on a wreath among delicate flowers like sweet peas. Tie with smilax, with asparagus sprays, with the twisted stems of flowers used in the bunch, with a wisp of wheat, with cord or small flowers or with birch bark strips.

FLORISTS' ADVERTISING.

There is no form of business enterprise which is conducted wholly without advertising. The sign on the store window is advertising, and the stock displayed behind the glass is advertising, and, while many appreciate the value of this second kind of advertisement, there are comparatively few retail florists who take so full advantage as is possible of the many avenues open to them for attracting the attention of the public. Nevertheless, retail florists are gradually coming to see the light in this respect. There are those who believe that anything in the nature of publicity detracts from the "tone" of their establishment, and this may be true if the advertising is of the common sort, but it applies to only a few high class stores and to only such as have no thought of growth save a growth in keeping with the increasing wealth of their patrons. This is too slow a growth to suit the average young man in the flower trade.

Show House of the Unique Store of Chas. H. Fox, "The Sign of the Rose," Philadelphia, at Easter.

One of the most active advertisers in the business is the Geo. Wittbold Co., Chicago. For years they have pushed their wholesale department by liberal use of printer's ink and have built up the largest decorative plant business in the west. They conduct three retail stores in connection with their wholesale business and have steadily been adding to their sales in this department by the use of the same advertising plans which are used by other lines of business, of course with such changes as are necessary to fit the florists' trade. This was the first concern in the west to employ tastefully color-printed signs in the street cars operating in that section of the city in which their stores are located. This served to give their name familiarity to large numbers of people. Then, too, they tried advertising in the daily papers and also in the monthly magazines. The Wittbold stores are located in the resident districts, where they are accessible to only a small part of the people in so big a city, and it was soon evident that the daily newspaper advertising did not pay. The cost was too high when one considers that only a small part of the circulation of the paper was of value to its advertiser. Louis Wittbold, the secretary of the Wittbold Co., says that because they did not find daily newspaper advertising to be profitable in their case, it is no sign it would not pay a florist with equal facilities and a location in the center of the city. As to advertising for country trade through the use of such papers as the Ladies' Home Journal, they found that the responses were immediate and very numerous, but the inquiries were for catalogues or for information and little money came in. Then again, they found that the inquiries came from localities in which they had wholesale customers and they did not care to follow them up on that account. Therefore this plan of advertising was discontinued.

This spring the Wittbold Co. has put a number of large street signs along the electric car lines in that part of the city in which their stores are located. One of these signs is shown in the accompanying illustration. They are painted on billboards eight feet high and twenty to twenty-five feet long. Chicago has a number of companies operating these boards and painting really attractive signs. On a contract of ordinary amount they paint the sign and maintain it at a charge of 50 cents per month for each lineal foot. These signs have already served to attract much attention to the Wittbold establishments. It is the first time they have been used by a florist.

The Wittbold Co. has an addressograph list of many thousands of names of people located in the neighborhood of their stores. Every few weeks they get up some attractive printed matter to mail to these names. It costs them much more in proportion to the people reached than does any other form of advertising, but by having the names carefully selected it is pretty certain that the people reached are interested. The experience is that no direct results are seen unless a definite proposition is contained in the printed matter. For instance, advertising the cut flower department brings only indirect returns; that is, it brings orders at some future time when the people addressed are in need of floral designs or similar service. But when the offer is a definite one, as for instance, the planting of a stated number of red geraniums in a flower bed for a certain price, the response is immediate, two telephones being necessary to the handling of their business. In the past month of April the total of sales was larger than in any previous month, and the business goes back to 1856.

WOOD LICE OR SOW BUGS.

Will you kindly let me know through the REVIEW the best way to get rid of sow bugs, as they are doing me much damage?
A. W.

Take your choice of names; they are both elegant. If you do not want to use poison, get some large potatoes, cut in halves and scoop out the inside. Lay these pieces about and the sow bugs will creep under them to feed and roost and in the morning you will find them there. Rutabagas are even better than potatoes. Brown sugar mixed with one-tenth of its bulk of arsenic and a small quantity placed on the beds or benches on pieces of shingles or chips will soon rid you of these pests. You should remove the poison when watering or the sugar will melt and be no longer attractive.

There is no form of business enterprise which is conducted wholly without advertising. The sign on the store window is advertising, and the stock displayed behind the glass is advertising, and, while many appreciate the value of this second kind of advertisement, there are comparatively few retail florists who take so full advantage as is possible of the many avenues open to them for attracting the attention of the public. Nevertheless, retail florists are gradually coming to see the light in this respect. There are those who believe that anything in the nature of publicity detracts from the "tone" of their establishment, and this may be true if the advertising is of the common sort, but it applies to only a few high class stores and to only such as have no thought of growth save a growth in keeping with the increasing wealth of their patrons. This is too slow a growth to suit the average young man in the flower trade.

One of the most active advertisers in the business is the Geo. Wittbold Co., Chicago. For years they have pushed their wholesale department by liberal use of printer's ink and have built up the largest decorative plant business in the west. They conduct three retail stores in connection with their wholesale business and have steadily been adding to their sales in this department by the use of the same advertising plans which are used by other lines of business, of course with such changes as are necessary to fit the florists' trade. This was the first concern in the west to employ tastefully color-printed signs in the street cars operating in that section of the city in which their stores are located. This served to give their name familiarity to large numbers of people. Then, too, they tried advertising in the daily papers and also in the monthly magazines. The Wittbold stores are located in the resident districts, where they are accessible to only a small part of the people in so big a city, and it was soon evident that the daily newspaper advertising did not pay. The cost was too high when one considers that only a small part of the circulation of the paper was of value to its advertiser. Louis Wittbold, the secretary of the Wittbold Co., says that because they did not find daily newspaper advertising to be profitable in their case, it is no sign it would not pay a florist with equal facilities and a location in the center of the city. As to advertising for country trade through the use of such papers as the Ladies' Home Journal, they found that the responses were immediate and very numerous, but the inquiries were for catalogues or for information and little money came in. Then again, they found that the inquiries came from localities in which they had wholesale customers and they did not care to follow them up on that account. Therefore this plan of advertising was discontinued.

This spring the Wittbold Co. has put a number of large street signs along the electric car lines in that part of the city in which their stores are located. One of these signs is shown in the accompanying illustration. They are painted on billboards eight feet high and twenty to twenty-five feet long. Chicago has a number of companies operating these boards and painting really attractive signs. On a contract of ordinary amount they paint the sign and maintain it at a charge of 50 cents per month for each lineal foot. These signs have already served to attract much attention to the Wittbold establishments. It is the first time they have been used by a florist.

The Wittbold Co. has an addressograph list of many thousands of names of people located in the neighborhood of their stores. Every few weeks they get up some attractive printed matter to mail to these names. It costs them much more in proportion to the people reached than does any other form of advertising, but by having the names carefully selected it is pretty certain that the people reached are interested. The experience is that no direct results are seen unless a definite proposition is contained in the printed matter. For instance, advertising the cut flower department brings only indirect returns; that is, it brings orders at some future time when the people addressed are in need of floral designs or similar service. But when the offer is a definite one, as for instance, the planting of a stated number of red geraniums in a flower bed for a certain price, the response is immediate, two telephones being necessary to the handling of their business. In the past month of April the total of sales was larger than in any previous month, and the business goes back to 1856.

WOOD LICE OR SOW BUGS.

Will you kindly let me know through the REVIEW the best way to get rid of sow bugs, as they are doing me much damage?
A. W.

Take your choice of names; they are both elegant. If you do not want to use poison, get some large potatoes, cut in halves and scoop out the inside. Lay these pieces about and the sow bugs will creep under them to feed and roost and in the morning you will find them there. Rutabagas are even better than potatoes. Brown sugar mixed with one-tenth of its bulk of arsenic and a small quantity placed on the beds or benches on pieces of shingles or chips will soon rid you of these pests. You should remove the poison when watering or the sugar will melt and be no longer attractive.
W. S.

SYCAMORE, O.—Mrs. T. G. Babcock will add one greenhouse 20x50 feet this summer. Trade is good here, particularly on vegetable plants.

GERANIUMS AGAIN.

Would you please tell me how to get my geraniums more short and stocky? I have a neighbor who grows them stout and short and still he does not have his farther apart on the bench than mine. Could there be a difference in the fertilizer? I use well rotted horse manure and I think he uses cow manure. As I take special interest in geraniums, I am anxious to get information about their culture, particularly how to keep them from running up tall. H. C. O.

There is nothing wrong with your fertilizer. Most likely you use too much manure and too light a soil. A stiff, fresh loam and not more than one-fifth of manure is the thing, and pot firmly. Light and temperature will have much to do with the growth of your geraniums. They at all times want the fullest light and air on all possible occasions. Young plants that are for summer bedding should not be kept at over 45 degrees at night during winter and in dark weather they should be kept rather dry. About February 1 they should be grown enough to need the top pinched out, or maybe a cutting taken off. Our zonal geraniums flower more than we wish for in April and May and we have to keep the buds picked off. You must be growing them too rich and too warm. W. S.

POTS VERSUS BENCHES.*For Growing Exhibition Flowers.

There has the past year or two been a reaction with some of the best exhibition growers in regard to bench culture for exhibition blooms, the claim today being, and apparently with good reason, that deeper, better finished flowers can be produced from pots and an increasing number are being grown in this manner. For general cutting and commercial culture, there is no question but that the bench method is the better way, since not nearly so much water and care is needed and the question of supports, etc., is more easily disposed of. But when we get down to growing the very finest flowers, which have to be fed to the limit and handled as carefully as possible, it is another story. In pots every plant gets its individual treatment, since the roots are confined and a plant that has reached the stage where feeding is not necessary need not be watered with liquid, whereas in a bench discrimination is well nigh out of the question.

Anyone who has ever carefully turned over the soil in a chrysanthemum bench after the crop has been cut has seen the roots running for yards along the bottom of the bench, and this shows very plainly how useless it is to try to discriminate when feeding plants in a bench, where different kinds are growing together.

Another big advantage when the plants are in pots is in being able to move them about at will. When the flowers are developing, if it is seen that they are coming along too quickly they can be moved to a cellar, or some other dark place, and held back for several weeks. Also with varieties that are predisposed to damping of the petals (and most varieties are affected more or less in this manner when heavily fed) pot culture has an advantage because the roots can be kept much drier and there will be less moisture in the atmosphere.

Several methods of growing are used that may be said to be intermediate between pots and benches. Thus one noted grower I am acquainted with, partitions his benches off into sections a foot wide and four feet long, planting one variety in each section. This seems to work well with him since he manages to capture his share of prizes every year. Others grow in boxes made large enough to hold from four to six plants and I may say that the finest flowers I ever grew were produced in this manner, but the idea is the same with all these different ways, and that is restricted root action.

Why a plant should produce a heavier, deeper flower when grown in this restricted manner I do not pretend to say, but the fact remains that it does. Many fruits, notably tomatoes, produce much more freely when pot bound and I presume the same rule works in the case of the chrysanthemum, checking somewhat its exuberance of growth and diverting its energies to the flower more directly, as bearing on its reproductive organs.

For those who want to try this pot method I would not recommend a larger pot than 8-inch and the plants should be growing in these as soon as possible now. Use a soil that has lots of turf fibre in it, because such a soil does not sour in a pot and the roots love to cling to the lumps of fibre. Bone meal may be added with advantage and also a little clay fertilizer and the soil in the final potting should be made very solid, so as to keep a stocky, short-jointed growth on the plant.

Plants on Benches.

Those growers who are compelled to grow in benches, or prefer to do so, should get in their plants now as soon as possible if they are figuring on growing for exhibition, as there is no question but that the longer season of growth is all in favor of the plants. Early planted stock should not be set out closer than nine inches by eight, and even wider than this would not be too much. Give the tall growers the most head room. The catalogue description generally notes the height more or less, so one can get an idea from that. Among the tallest growers are T. Eaton, Gen. Hutton, Henry Barnes, S. T. Wright and Ben Wells, while Alice Byron, Cheltoni, Donald McLeod, Nellie Pockett and others will not exceed three feet in height. A little forethought at planting time will mean much less work later on. I never did like having to pull down the plants from the glass, because, outside of the work entailed, I do not think that the flowers open so well after the stem has been tied down. Eight feet of head room is not one bit too much to allow for the tall growers, and if you cannot do this, pinch the tops off at once, which will take a foot or two off the height next fall.

C. H. TOTTY.

THE PLANTING SEASON.*Disposing of Old Plants.

With the planting plans complete and everything in readiness for that work, general planting can be started immediately after Memorial day trade is past. In order to make as much out of the old plants as possible, it will pay to advertise and sell them at a reasonable price for planting outside. These old plants, especially of Beauties, Kaiserins, Chatenay and Meteor, make excellent bloomers during the summer and if properly handled and cared for during the winter are good for years to come and, as they have to be thrown out anyhow, if they can be disposed of at a figure that will pay for the work and leave a margin it is like money found.

June planting has, in my experience, proved the most profitable and the planting should be pushed along so that by July 4 every rose should be benched, thus securing the best part of the summer, when growth is at its best.

Cleansing the Houses.

When the old soil has been removed from the benches and all repairs made, the house should get a thorough cleaning, washing the benches, walls and roof, as there is always more or less of an accumulation of scum and dirt from the last year, which, if not removed while the house is empty, is rather a difficult job after the planting is done.

All benches made of wood should be thoroughly washed and should then receive a good coating of hot lime wash. This, while acting as a preservative to the wood, is a great help in destroying insects and their eggs. One grower of note tells me that he uses about one-fifth sulphur with the lime and assures me that this is a good preventive against mildew and other fungous troubles. Whether this is so I cannot say, never having experimented with it, but as it is inexpensive and does not endanger the plants, it may be worth a trial where these pests are troublesome.

Filling the Benches.

When filling the benches the soil should be spread evenly all over and each barrow-load thoroughly broken up, so that it may settle evenly with the subsequent watering.

It has been my practice for years to add whatever bone flour was necessary at planting time. This is done by simply spreading the bone flour on the surface, without stirring it in, as we find that sufficient of the bone for the present needs of the plants will fall around the ball during the operation of planting, while the subsequent stirring of the surface and watering will carry the remainder within reach of the roots, thus liberating the gases slowly but quite quickly enough for the use of the young plants.

Planting the Benches.

The bench being ready, the young stock should be handled and planted with the same interest and care it has been receiving since propagating time. How frequently do we see the young stock roughly handled and hustled into the soil with as little ceremony as if they were so many coleus, without regard to any of the rules governing the planting of rose stock, all of which must be to the detriment of such sensitive subjects.

The plants should be carefully turned out of the pots, disturbing the balls just as little as possible, not even removing the drainage, and should be planted firmly, just sufficiently deep to cover the balls and leaving a small depression around the neck of the plant to receive the water. They should then be slowly watered to prevent the formation of mud, as this is detrimental to the health of the plant. Each plant should be watered individually for a week or so until the roots begin to spread and should be syringed frequently during bright weather to keep the atmosphere charged with sufficient moisture to encourage leaf development.

The same regularity and care in attending to ventilation, fumigation and temperature are just as necessary after-planting as when the young stock was in pots.

STANDARD VARIETIES.

What are the best standard varieties of carnations in pink, white and red? Are Lady Bountiful, Nelson Fisher and Indianapolis superior to the standard sorts? I mean, are they the most healthy and profitable kinds? T. F.

The question, which are the best varieties to grow, if submitted to a dozen growers, might bring out a dozen different replies. Varieties do not behave the same in different soils and climates and occasionally you will run across a variety doing grandly for a few growers and no good at all for anybody else. There are a few varieties, however, that are considered good everywhere, and their profitableness depends entirely on the treatment they receive. In recommending varieties to be grown in quantity we must of course stick mostly to varieties that have been on the market several years and which therefore have been tried pretty well all over the country, in different soils and under different methods of culture. But every season we get a few new varieties that will in time displace the older ones and it pays the grower well to buy these in limited quantity at least and find out as early as possible whether they will do well for him, under his culture and on his soil. In many cases one season will be sufficient to establish a variety's value, but in many cases a second season's trial will be necessary and a variety that was extra fine with the originator should not be discarded on the strength of one season's trial. The trouble lies most likely with the grower and not with the variety.

Among the older white varieties the most generally profitable ones are Flora Hill, White Cloud, Queen Louise, Boston Market and Lorna, but far superior to these are the recent introductions. Lady Bountiful, the best of them all, White Lawson, The Belle and Vesper. In light pink Morning Glory and Mrs. Higinbotham were largely grown but Enchantress has put them all out of the running as a variety that is easy to do and very profitable. We grow only it and Beatrice, a variety of our own, in this color except some seedlings in limited quantity.

In deep pink all agree that Mrs. Lawson stands on top. When handled properly it is free and strong, the blooms are of high quality and they will stand more handling than any other carnation. It is the ideal commission-house carnation. Nelson Fisher was "touted" to displace Lawson, but there was something wrong with the "dope." The color is much darker, bordering on a carmine, which alone prevents it from hurting Lawson. The variety Indianapolis is a production of our own and I may be prejudiced, but on the other hand I know its peculiarities all the way through and will give our experience. Up to the time of dissemination we firmly believed that it would become the leading variety in pink and growers who saw it here said the same thing, but we have since found several faults that will stand in its way of taking the place of Lawson, but it has several points that make it a very desirable variety under certain conditions. Its blooms will not stand the handling that Mrs. Lawson will. Therefore, it will not do for commission-house growers, but for those who sell direct to the public or those who ship to the retailer it will hold up as good as any. The petals are naturally cupped and I might say ruffled and knocking the blooms around makes this more pronounced. It keeps well, however, outside of taking on this sleepy appearance. It will outbloom any variety we know of during the winter months and is therefore very profitable to grow. The blooms come as large as Lawson for us and retail for the same price. The plants in the field need to be kept topped back very close on account of its tendency to run to bud. We will grow only this and Lawson in quantity next season. Floriana is a pretty shade of pink but is not in the same class as the above two as regards profit. Nelson is too shy during the winter and Joost is too small.

In scarlet Crane and America are both grown largely, though Estelle is favored by some. We grow Crane for early winter, until after Christmas. After that date we depend on our Flambeau, as it is free from that sleepiness of Crane. There are several scarlets coming now for which great things are promised and we hope to get one or two that will rank with the best in the other colors. It seems that all through the scarlet class there runs that sleepy tendency in warm weather.

In crimson Harlowarden and Harry Fenn divide the honors; some prefer the one while others pick the other. We grow Harlowarden.

We grow no variegated, but Mrs. Patten is conceded to be the best in that class. Prosperity is not generally considered profitable to the grower.

The above list embraces the best varieties on the market, but it will pay you to be constantly on the lookout and to devote a bench or two every season to the new varieties that are offered. Not near all of them will turn out good but you will pick up a good one every now and then that will pay for all the loss on the poor ones.

CARNATION COMPOST.

Please give me your judgment about using one-fourth violet soil used one year and three-fourths fresh soil for carnations. Or would you use a fresh compost of one-fourth manure to three-fourths sod stacked up last fall? Which would be likely to give the best results?

F. A. V.

I cannot see why you hesitate between the two lots of soil. Certainly the sod mixed with one-fourth manure is the proper thing to use. The one-fourth violet soil would not add a single bit to the value of the soil and it might be a great detriment to it. The sod and manure heap should be turned over as soon now as you can do it, to break it up and let the air into it. It will rot better, too.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

General Remarks.

With the rush of Easter and press of work in planting in the field closely following, carnation growers have experienced a strenuous period. Memorial day is next in order, when the season may be said to be over. On this occasion the call is more for quantity than quality and on this account it may be best to continue for a short time some sorts whose room is thought to be worth more than their company.

After the first of June those varieties which are badly lacking in vigor, diseased, or infected with insect pests, are best thrown out and burned.

Those giving promise of satisfactory returns during the summer should receive a thorough cleaning and the soil lightly raked preparatory to receiving a mulch.

It is not to be expected that prices will be high from this on but it is the better grades of bloom that move quickly, while the "rubber necks" and culls fur-sod and manure in such a way as to utilize the good qualities of both.

We like the plan of building a long pile in alternate layers of sod and manure, finishing top flat and about shoulder high. Do not be afraid to use fresh manure. My experience has been that most manure is too rotten. After laying three or four weeks the pile should be cut down and thrown back. See to it when this is done that it is cut clear to the ground and thrown well back. Often times as work proceeds the two piles run together and the finish is but a lick and a promise.

The addition of air-slaked lime will facilitate decomposition, thus rendering many ingredients more available. I would not advise the use of bone meal at this time. Reserve this until filling time, but it is a good plan to get it on hand, as often just the brand you prefer is out of stock when most needed.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

THRIPS AGAIN.

We are sending specimen blooms of Mrs. Lawson carnation and would like to know what is wrong. The night temperature has been 52 degrees, but at Christmas we did run it at 58 degrees for a couple of weeks. The soil is fairly heavy and has been well watered at all times. The houses are well built and of the REVIEW, the time to fight thrips is all winter, or better still, all the year around. We used to have much trouble with them when we depended on tobacco stems to keep them down, but ever since our carnations were housed last fall, we have sprayed once each week with an extract forty-five per cent nicotine, and this spring there is no sign of them on our stock. Mrs. Lawson shows the effects quicker than any other variety we have here, but Lorna suffers badly too. In the winter, when the sun is weak, the petals will be spotted white, but later the hot sun burns and dries up these dead spots and ruins the blooms.

I feel that I cannot recommend this nicotine extract too strongly. It fills a want that was felt for years, for something that would keep down thrips effectively, and, in fact, keep down all kinds of insect pests and could be used without disturbing the regular routine of cutting and selling the blooms. The discoverer deserves success in selling his product for the greatest benefit comes to those who use it, because those who have used it to any extent will tell you that with every dollar you spend for it you will save yourself at least ten dollars in blooms that you used to lose through these insect pests. We have not smoked our houses once in the last ten months and our stock throughout was never so clean. We shall use nothing else in the future, unless we find something still better.

BACTERIA FOR LEGUMES.

The United States Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin entitled "Beneficial Bacteria for Leguminous Crops," which will be of interest to every nurseryman and seedsman, to every florist, every fruit grower, and every farmer, in fact to every one whose interests are in any way related to the science of the soil.

From the earliest days of agriculture it has been recognized that leguminosæ, which in general, bear their seeds in pods, have a decidedly beneficial effect upon the soil. Pliny, who met his death in the year 79 A. D., in the great eruption of Mt. Vesuvius which destroyed Pompeii and Herculaneum, had recorded that "the bean ranks first among legumes; it fertilizes the ground in which it is sown as well as any manure." But it was not until comparatively recent times that it was demonstrated that the fertilizing qualities were dependent upon the formation on the legumes of root nodules which came to be known as "nitrogen knots," or "nitrogen traps," from the part they play in furnishing the plants with nitrogen derived from the air. Research showed these root nodules to be the result of the presence of certain bacteria in the soil. But there are many localities where these beneficent bacteria are absent, and here a crop of legumes is of no more value to the soil than a cereal or other main crop, which might be a distinct source of profit. It was this fact which led to the series of experiments and the results summarized in the present pamphlet by George T. Moore and T. R. Robinson.

By working with the nodules it was found possible to prepare a pure "culture" of the nodule forming organism which it was practicable to put up in a dry form for shipment to the districts nish likewise revenue for the express companies and food for the rubbish heap; therefore, if you decide to continue supplying the market this summer, aim to keep up quality.

The Soil Pile.

Now is a first-class time to roll up a pile of soil. If put up now it will be ready for use at bench-filling time. There are several methods of proceeding, but the main principal is to incorporate we have had splendid success in previous years. The other varieties are showing the same spots, but not so badly.

M. N. C.

Your carnations are badly infested with thrips and you will find it up-hill work to get rid of them now. During the warm spring weather they increased very rapidly, and it will keep you busy to destroy them as fast as they appear. As I told P. M. in the Easter Number which it is desirable to artificially inoculate. When this result was attained the Department of Agriculture took a patent on the process in the name of Dr. Moore for the purpose of guaranteeing to the public that no monopoly could be maintained by commercial producers of similar cultures.

The dry cultures are prepared by saturating absorbent cotton in a liquid culture, prepared by introducing the bacteria in a nutrient jelly, where they multiply amazingly. In this way millions of the bacteria are held within the cotton where, after this is dried, they remain dormant in much the same way as seeds, waiting for the proper conditions to revive them. To do this it is only necessary to immerse the cotton in water, but for best results, it seemed best to furnish at the same time two packages of nutrient salts, one containing sugar, magnesium sulphate and potassium phosphate and the other ammonium phosphate. The contents of the first package is placed in the water with the cotton, the ammonium phosphate is added twenty-four hours later and in a second twenty-four hours the clear water has changed to a milky liquid, so rapid has been the growth of the bacteria. To apply two methods are practical. The liquid may be used to moisten the seeds or to moisten the soil, which is then scattered as fertilizer and at once worked into the ground. When the seed is treated and dried the inoculation remains effective for several months and Dr. Moore predicts that inoculated seed will soon become a regular item of trade.

Up to November 1, 1904, the Department of Agriculture had distributed 12,490 packages of inoculating material, each stamped with the name of the crop for which it was intended, a different culture being prepared for alfalfa, clovers, peas, beans, etc. Each was accompanied by a circular of simple directions and in nearly every case very beneficial results were reported, although in instances where the recipient used on sweet corn a culture marked for red clover, or even buried it unopened in his field, he failed to see wonders wrought.

It is stated that inoculation is necessary when: (1) The land is at all poor or "thin" and has borne no legumes previously. (2) The land has borne legumes with roots devoid of nodules.

Inoculation is desirable when: (1) The legumes previously grown on the land belong to another group of these plants. (2) The soil produces a sickly growth of legumes even though their roots bear nodules.

It should be added that no formula will enable a planter to produce his own cultures as these can be prepared only by a trained bacteriologist with laboratory facilities. To reliable firms which are equipped to go into the business the department extends co-operation, but expressly states that there will be no hesitation in calling attention to any attempt to deceive, either by offering spurious material or material at prices which the department knows by its experience to be exorbitant.

A Well-Grown Crimson Rambler.

A CRIMSON RAMBLER.

A well grown and flowered plant of this popular rose is nothing uncommon. This plant was a little over six feet in height and nearly four feet across and it was not easy to decide which was the best side to be photographed. The man who planted this rose in the open ground two years ago this spring has written often advising that the surest and most satisfactory method of forcing these roses was to start in the spring with a good, cut-down, dormant plant. Grow it in the greenhouse until the canes are a good size and then put it outdoors to ripen. We have not gone back on that method, yet the plant shown, which was loaded with trusses of fine flowers from tub to top and on all sides, happens not to have been grown that way. After two summers' growth in the ground it was lifted about November 17. After a good watering it was stood in a house of Kaiserin roses that were going to rest with no fire heat. Perhaps there was little frost in the house before the end of December, but from then on to near the end of January there was frequently pretty hard freezing. Then the Rambler was started in a violet house at about 40 degrees and later removed to a rose house. We have a good many times tried lifting these Ramblers in the fall, but this is the first we can call "a go."

CARNATION SOCIETY'S REPORT.

The Proceedings of the Fourteenth Annual Meeting of the American Carnation Society have been mailed to members. It is the usual pamphlet of 115 pages and contains a complete stenographic report of the Chicago meeting last January, which was quite fully reported in the REVIEW at the time and therefore familiar to our readers. The book, nevertheless, affords much interesting reading, particularly those numerous pages devoted to discussions. The list of varieties registered totals seventeen, not counting several sports of Lawson and Enchantress which were not admitted to registration under other than descriptive names. In pages 97 to 99 a stenographic error is noted which evidently escaped the eye of the editor of the volume. The gentlemen who referred to the good work done for floriculture at the Indiana Experiment Station were J. S. Stuart and J. A. Haugh, of Anderson, not Stewart and Hall, as printed.

OSKALOOSA, IA.—The Kemble Floral Co. is very busy with planting work. They have men in a number of the surrounding towns.

BOUNDBROOK, N. J.—A. C. Zvolanek has built a residence and two greenhouses 31x204 and will remove here from Grand View. As heretofore, sweet peas will be his specialty.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

A journey through the wholesale cut flower market of New York last Saturday was anything but an inspiration. The quantity of stock on hand was abnormal, even in this season of big shipments, and the prices, as one wholesaler put it, "anything we can get," with few exceptions. Beauties were very poor. A lot of the stock was entirely unsalable. I saw box after box of Maids and Brides go out as originally shipped as low as $1 per hundred.

Retailers and wholesalers both complain of the bad influence of the big shipments and "stealings" of lilac. By the stealings I mean that the streets are filled with venders, many of them boys who have scoured the adjacent country and appropriated all the lilac they could lay their hands on and who then turn an honest penny by supplying the unsophisticated New Yorkers. Even the wealthy people, the retailers declare, have been making their homes spring-like and their tables suggestive of the simple country life by buying lilac in preference to roses, valley and carnations. How have the mighty fallen! Wild violets have taken the place of the very "tame" ones and even the blossoms from the orchards and the woods make up the decorations of the retail windows and gladden the hearts of the people who pass.

The fakirs will soon be off to the big summer resorts and the demand from that source will perceptibly lessen, to the annoyance of the wholesaler, to whom, in the daily cleaning up process, these gentry have become a necessity.

Outdoor lily of the valley is abundant and prices of the real thing have fallen, notwithstanding that weddings continue. The Siebrecht factory, at Astoria, however, keeps on every day in the year turning out its daily and excellent supply. No need of any marriage ceremony being postponed because of a shortage of valley. Cold storage becomes, therefore, a preliminary of wedding festivities and the valley bouquet is always in season.

Lilies of fine quality command only $2 to $4 per hundred for the best of them. The "bulbist" who grows them must have moments of unspeakable thoughts. Cornflowers, gladioli and campanulas are arriving profusely. There seems to be no shortage of anything. The $1 boxes of cut flowers are again in the windows, a sure barometer as to bargains. They certainly look tempting and they are great value, from the public standpoint.

Monday was another bad day in the wholesale market. Looks like summer prices had arrived on an early train. But the skies will clear somewhat for Decoration day and there will be an upward tendency shortly.

Horticultural Society's Show.

The annual exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York was held last Wednesday and Thursday at the Bronx park museum building. The officers of last year were re-elected. The membership now totals nearly 200. An interesting lecture was delivered on "Summer in the Fruit Garden," by Prof. Fletcher, of Cornell University. A very small percentage of the 4,000,000 people in New York City's borders were present, rather less than usual. Dr. Britton exhibited some results of his recent travels south. The native dracaena from Honduras was the most interesting; D. Americana is its name. He brought a Mexican opuntia and Luther Burbank sent blooms of the Australian fadeless flower. The exhibits were not numerous. F. R. Pierson Co. displayed a fine bank of decorative plants and cut flowers, Siebrecht & Son the same. Julius Roehrs and Lager & Hurrell had their usual assortments of orchids, both plants and cut flowers. Weinberg showed succulent plants and cacti. Mrs. Glibes and Gertrude Paddock, of Woodside, also exhibited their collections. Louis Dupuy, of Whitestone, showed several fine plants of Crassula hybrida coccinea. Wild flowers and shrubs were exhibited by the Bedford Agassiz Association, P. Nelson, Mrs. Kauffman, H. S. Wood and Julia J. Knott. The New York Botanical Garden had flowering shrubs and decorative plants. It is most discreditable to New York that such exhibitions awaken so little popular interest.

Various Notes.

Outdoor valley brings from 50 cents per hundred down. Kessler handled 10,000 Saturday at the Cut Flower Exchange. Wm. Amos was re-elected president of this organization last week and the old board was reinstated, except that David Deans took the place of George Golmer.

Bonnot, of Newark and Jersey City, on Saturday opened his new store, 25x125, with conservatory at the back running to another street, the finest floral establishment in Jersey.

Geo. Saltford will again cater to the interests of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society's exhibition on June 10, at Annandale, as curator, in which capacity he won last year the plaudits of "the 400," who grow things up the Hudson. Amateurs and professionals, rich and otherwise, vie with each other in fruit and floral display here yearly. Mr. Saltford after June 1 will have floods of gladioli at his wholesale market in New York.

Brooklyn has a quartette of wholesalers now who make the church city quite independent. Hicks & Crawbuck handle grand stock and an abundance of it. Kuebler, with his two brothers as lieutenants, is rapidly building up a fine business and has made his headquarters quite metropolitan in appearance. Bonnot & Blake are doing well at 26 Boerum place and in addition to their cut flower trade are selling agents for the Lever cane clip, a most useful invention for rose and chrysanthemum growers, made by B. S. Blake & Son, of Rochester. Crawbuck & Wiles have monopolized the "green goods" trade across the bridge and keep on hand about everything in that line the florist needs.

In the retail department down-town Mallon, Wier, Phillips and Masur all rejoice in an extra prosperous Easter season. Mr. Masur, at 238 Fulton street, tells me sales were double last year and that his business has grown so that larger quarters will soon be necessary. Mr. Phillips' store has already been enlarged.

On May 11 the daughter of Julius Z. Schorna, of 627 DeKalb avenue, Brooklyn, a young lady of 17 years, who had just graduated from the Brooklyn business college, died suddenly.

On Saturday, Harry, the son of H. Hermann, retail florist of Broadway, Brooklyn, 15 years of age, fell through a trap-door at Kenny's, the wire manufacturer on Dean street, fracturing his skull and dying later in the day at St. John's hospital. The sorrowing parents have the sincere sympathy of the trade in their bereavement.

Secretary Peter Bisset, of the Washington Club, who was here last week, announces extensive preparations for the great convention there in August, with an abundance of interesting surprises for the thousands of visitors expected.

The New York Club's outing is close at hand. Those who have not already done so are requested to engage their tickets at once from President Traendly. The meeting of the club on June 12 will be ladies' and peony night and a great attendance is anticipated.

W. G. Badgley, of Chatham, was in the city Saturday. His roses are superb and he contemplates adding to his 10,000 square feet of glass at an early date. His stock has been handled since his first shipment by A. J. Guttman.

W. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, was a recent visitor, none the worse for his illness.

John and William Blake, private gardeners of Pasadena, Cal., were in the city Monday on their way to Europe.

A. T. Boddington reports a very good business on his seed specialties.

The Clucas & Boddington Co. are settled in their new home on West Twenty-third street and seem delighted with the change. They report a great increase in their nursery business at Sparkill this season.

Ralph M. Ward & Co. are also delighted with their enlarged space and added conveniences in their new quarters at 12 West Broadway.

Edwin A. Denham is in Europe replenishing his stock of Flanders pottery at 31 Barclay street.

The leading retailers on Broadway and Fifth avenue are closing at 8 o'clock. A few stragglers still keep open an hour later. What good it does them it is hard to understand. It seems easy for some to forget the long days and all night sessions of the strenuous winter and Easter season. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

At the close of last week business took a little spurt and Saturday found the market well cleaned up, but things have fallen into the rut again this week and the regular business consumes but a small part of each day's receipts. It is a case of cleaning up at whatever the street salesmen or job-lot buyers will give. For almost the first time on record wiring cheap offers to out-of-town buyers does not move the stock, for all other markets are also loaded.

The one exception is American Beauty roses. Receipts of these have become light, largely due to drying off or replanting operations. Some new Beauties are coming in and others have good crops in prospect, but for the time being good stock is scarce. The warm weather has had its inevitable effect upon all roses, the buds being smaller, softer and color poorer, although qualities are what would be called good for so late in the spring. Liberty is becoming more plentiful and promises a good crop for Decoration day. Chatenay is one of the most abundant of roses, particularly in the special grade.

Carnation receipts continue heavy and quality is very good for this late date. Of prices, however, the same cannot be said, as averages for so good a grade of stock were probably never lower than in the past two weeks. Sweet peas have been in large supply and are selling exceptionally well where the quality commends them. Peonies are coming in unusually heavily for the middle of May and thousands of dozens are already in cold storage awaiting the Decoration day demand. There have been reports of a shortage in the crop, but it is not yet apparent. There are peonies for all and most of the stock is of good quality. Lilac has been one of the principal commodities of the week but is past its prime. There are still quantities of outdoor tulips of exceptionally good quality. Outdoor valley is beginning to come in. Harrisii lilies are not quite so bad a glut as last week, but there are still plenty, and this applies to every other item in the market, including "green goods."

The Strike Situation.

There has been no change in the strike situation since last report. The express drivers are still out, but they have lost enthusiasm and most business operations are going ahead as though there were no trouble. The wholesale florists hardly know that a strike exists since they have become accustomed to the new methods of receiving and making shipments. The telegraph messengers struck on Tuesday and this delayed some orders. There is possibility of an extension of the strike to other trades, but it will not likely affect the florists. Country buyers are safe in sending important orders to this market and consignors can send along the stuff with perfect assurance.

Everyone hopes the labor difficulties will be over by Decoration day. The prospect is for a splendid business, to which the feeling of relief at the discontinuance of hostilities will add not a little. There is every prospect of plenty of stock and the city retailers want a chance to share in the prosperity.

Various Notes.

On May 11 there was two and one-half inches of rainfall and the growers who have their carnation plants on low places have sustained quite a loss.

Peter Reinberg has a very fine crop of Liberty just coming on.

E. H. Hunt is getting some especially fine outdoor lily of the valley, something that has not been very plentiful in this market this season.

It is stated that Weiland & Risch have sold their range of carnation houses and will devote their attention exclusively to rose growing, handling carnations on commission.

Since stock has become so cheap in the market the fakirs have opened stands in every nook and corner of the downtown district. They clean up a great deal of stock on pleasant days.

N. K. Welter has opened a retail cut flower store at 840 Custer avenue, Evanston, oposite the Northwestern passenger station.

It is reported that Mrs. Geo. S. McReynolds and Miss Nina Howard are building greenhouses at Glencoe, to go into commercial violet culture, having procured stock of Miss Chittenden, of Lansing, who has been one of Hunt's consignors for years.

Employees of the George Witthold Co. found a young man in the orchid house a few days ago with twenty-four cattleya blooms concealed in his clothing.

Only routine business was dispatched at the club meeting May 11. It is now proposed to wind up the season with that much-talked-of supper.

Sinner Bros. are rebuilding all their benches with pecky cypress.

Carl Thomas, of the A. L. Randall Co., has returned from his visit to his old home in Pennsylvania, feeling much refreshed by his vacation.

Warren Garland is sending Percy Jones some exceptionally nice sweet peas.

At Amling's, mushrooms are 35 cents a basket. He has done quite a business with this specialty for one of his growers this season.

Vaughan & Sperry, who receive considerable stock from Grand Rapids, say that with only one of their growers has there been any reduction in crop since the big hail storm over there. The rest got off easily.

N. J. Wietor seizes a day now and then while trade is dull to go fishing.

C. W. McKellar says he anticipates no trouble in handling cape jasmines. The express companies are again making deliveries.

The Gardeners' Union is reported to have withdrawn its demand for an increase in wages and is said to have received evidence that its members were mistaken in their belief that the big growers are making more money than ever before.

Matt Mann has a lot of cool-grown longiflorums coming on. Last year they brought big money at this season.

At J. A. Budlong's they say that business is good, referring to the shipping demand.

When visitors enter the office of the E. F. Winterson Co., they pause and wipe their feet. The carpet there is the only one of which the Chicago market can boast.

EVERGREEN, ALA.

George W. Caldwell says that the huckleberry branches have "caught on." They are pie for the decorators at this season, when wild smilax is out of the market. He has received many complimentary letters from the trade, as there is a manifest appreciation that he is giving them something of just as much value to the storekeepers as is a new fern, or rose, possibly of more value as it fills a place where there is nothing at present. One writer says he ought to have a medal, but Caldwell says there isn't even a leather one in sight.

CHARLESTON, W. VA.—J. W. Alexander says that this is his most successful year since going into business. The use of flowers and plants is increasing very fast in this region and he will add to his glass this summer to keep up with the demand.

Reports from southern Illinois indicate that the peony crop in that district is not more than one-third what it was last year. This should give a better market for the home-grown crop, which will be along soon.

Louis Wittbold has been at work perfecting his automatic watering and syringing apparatus and has it down to a fine point. He proposes to sell it to the trade, his first customer being Ohas. Heim, of Blue Island, who will put it in his rose houses.

Otto Kroeschell, one of the members of the Kroeschell Bros. Co., disappeared on May 8, and has not been heard from since. It was noted that the recent death of one of his brothers had affected him strongly mentally, but no theory is advanced as to his disappearance. The police have been searching for him more

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The market conditions show little change. Apple and dogwood blossoms are being replaced by shrubbery. Southern peonies have made their appearance, both Niessen and Pennock having shipments. The former are also receiving Golden iris, while W. J. Moore has the first pond lilies of the season in three colors. Beauties are good and very plentiful. Burton, Heacock and Myers & Samtman are all cutting heavily. Prices are low. Tea roses are falling off in quality and sell slowly. Really good carnations find a market, but the majority only do so through the medium of the fakir. Sweet peas are getting down to the prices for outdoor stock, the first of these having reached the Flower Market from C. E. Meehan's. S. S. Pennock has the best strings of asparagus seen in town. They are very long, heavy and of deep color.

At Julius Wolff's.

At Twenty-eighth and Sedgeley streets, Julius Wolff, Jr., has a store and half a dozen greenhouses adjacent to his residence, close by what was once Ridge avenue station on the P. R. R. This place is considered tributary to his main establishment at 1617 North Nineteenth street, the houses being devoted to palms, rubbers, ferns, etc., and to a good collection of spring flowering plants and vines. The place is especially noted in a wholesale way throughout the city for its orchids, of which there are a goodly number. Through some misunderstanding, the time set by Mr. Wolff for a visit found most of the orchid blooms cut, so that I shall have to look forward to seeing them in their glory at some future time.

The Craig Statement.

At the meeting of the creditors of Robert Craig & Son, held at Forty-ninth and Market streets last Monday, Assignee John Burton showed that the mortgage on the real estate had been reduced. There was a good balance in the bank, to be augmented by a considerable amount in bills receivable. All the creditors, with three exceptions, representing a comparatively small amount, have accepted the firm's proffered 50 cents on the dollar, which will be paid to them on June 15.

Various Notes.

E. D. Darlington, of Doylestown, is sending nice Kaisersins to Fred Ehret.

Charles E. Meehan calls attention to the fact that lilies that cannot be brought into bloom by Easter should be sorted out at as early a moment as possible and kept cool. Lilies have been a drug during May. A little later they will be in demand.

There is great activity in bowling circles now. There was the Essington picnic on Tuesday last, for all the bowlers and their friends. Then there is a great team tournament for prizes, in which thirty players are competing, divided into six teams of five men each.

John Curwen, of Villa Nova, has bought five acres of ground at Berwyn on which he expects to put up some glass this summer for growing carnations.

Mr. Devine, a graduate of Logan, is now foreman for F. & H. Mergenthaler.

George Burton has his houses in splendid shape. He sent fifty dozen fine Beauties to the Leo Niessen Co. on Monday.

The Wm. Graham Co. had the decorations for the Union League anniversary, last week. American Beauties were largely used.

Eugene Weiss is cutting heavily nice Brides and Maids, which Samuel Lilley disposes of to advantage.

Outdoor valley is in the market.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are doing a great business in their Memorial day specialties.

John Wilson has been improving the opportunity for artistic work in the Habermehl's attractive shop in the Bellevue-Stratford.

George Faulkner is well pleased with his spring business.

Alfred Burton has the houses on his father's new place, the Lonsdale estate, ready for glazing.

M. Rice & Co. report that their Memorial day orders this year largely exceeded last year's. Their factory has been working overtime to fill orders promptly. No orders are allowed to lag by this hustling firm.

The Department Stores.

K., whose Philadelphia column in a contemporary delights his many readers, sharply criticises the leading paragraph under Easter Echoes in this column in the REVIEW of May 4. While the views expressed were somewhat advanced, the source from which they came, one of our most prominent florists, entitles them to respect. A number of years ago Thomas Cartledge said "the fakir does our business more good than harm, but," he added, "better not say that yet, for they won't think so." Now the question has ceased to be an issue and the fakir is recognized as an aid to business.

I do not say that these advanced views regarding the benefits of department store advertising are correct. Time will show. I did not say that the popularity of the azalea was waning, but that they were less plentiful than last year. I believe this to be a fact. PHIL.

BALTIMORE, MD.

There is not very much to say about the market. Things are moving along as well as can be expected, weather and season considered. Carnations are a glut and good ones are bringing from $1 to $1.50 per hundred, with a few fancy at $2. Roses are also very plentiful, and only the best grades find ready sale. Short stuff is hard to dispose of at any price. The first peonies made their appearance the beginning of the past week and are bringing from $5 to $6 per hundred.

After an illness of about two weeks the wife of J. J. Perry, manager of the Florists' Exchange, died on May 10. There were many handsome floral pieces at the funeral, sent mainly from the trade. Mr. Perry has the sympathy of his many friends in the business.

Reduced Rate to Convention.

The Trunk Line Association has made the usual reduced rate to the Washington convention of one and one-third fare for the round trip. The Trunk Line Association territory includes the states of New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, West Virginia, and a portion of Virginia. Following the granting of this concession by the Trunk Line Association, application has been made to the New England, Central, Southeastern, Southwestern and Western Passenger Associations for a similar reduction. As soon as action has been taken by these associations, due announcement will be made accordingly.

ST. LOUIS.The Market.

To say that there is a glut and that business in cut flowers is dull would be putting it mildly. The wholesalers say that never before has there been such an abundance of stock in all lines in this market and at such cheap prices. The retailers report that business up to the present time is far below this season a year ago. Only a few days of the past week were enlivened by an occasional wedding, dinner, reception or a funeral design. The feature of the week was a carnation war among the down-town florists. The signs displayed in their windows read 7½ cents per dozen, which later in the week was changed to 5 cents. They bought their stock for $2.50 per thousand. The very choice fancy carnations brought less than 2 cents. Roses sold about as cheap and a great many choice Beauties went begging, there being so little demand for them.

Sweet peas are selling fairly well, but very cheap in large lots. Peonies are also flooding the market at $2 per hundred. Another flower that will flood the market is the cape jasmine, which is expected up this week from Alvin, Texas.

We have been having too much rain of late to suit the plantmen, who say that they have all they can do in that line, but the recent heavy rains have made the ground too soft, which will delay them about a week. At Union Market the reports are that the season so far has been exceptionally good, with fair prices.

Florists' Club Meeting.

The May meeting of the club, as was expected, was not well attended, most of the members being busy planting. The meeting opened with President Juengel in the chair and thirteen members present. Two applications for membership were made, by Ed Hicks and Henry Lohrenz. Both are young men and will make good members.

Mr. Koenig, who is manager of the fall flower show, made a report that everything is running along nicely and made a plea that the subscribers pay up. The rest of the committee also predicted a successful show. F. C. Weber is treasurer of the committee. Three new applications should have been voted upon, but owing to the small attendance the balloting was laid over until the next meeting in June. The chair appointed Messrs. Ammann and Fillmore to act as trustees during the absence of F. C. Weber and Theo. Miller, who will be in Europe this summer.

Under the head of new business John Steidle invited the club to hold its regular June meeting at his place in Central, Mo., which was accepted. The date of this meeting will be June 8.

Various Notes.

John Steidle, who was in the best of health while at the club meeting on Thursday, was reported very sick on Sunday. From reports Monday, he is on the road to recovery, which will be good news to his many friends in the trade.

Recent visitors were C. L. Brunson, of Paducah, Ky.; J. O'Neil, Chicago.

Wm. Ellison and his son Arthur have left for a month's trip south on both pleasure and business.

Henry Emunds reports that his ever-blooming tuberose bulbs are selling fast.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, reports that in the recent hail storm he lost about 1,000 feet of glass, all single strength, the hail not being large enough to break the double. He is making preparations to build this summer.

C. E. DeWever, gardener for the Woman's Magazine, has his place in fine shape. The bedding is especially attractive.

Geo. M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, Mo., was in town Sunday on his way to Dallas, Texas. Mr. Kellogg hopes for a big delegation from here to the S. A. F. convention. He says the glut in cut stock is also on in Kansas City, but is not in favor of the cheap prices.

The Florists' Club will give its annual picnic some time during July. Frank Fillmore and Fred Ammann have been added to the committee of arrangements. This year's outing should be a large one, as we had none last summer.

The bowling club had seven men at the alleys on Monday. Five games were rolled, in which C. A. Kuehn was high with 830; Beneke, second, 819; Miller, 811; Ellis, 802; R. Meinhardt, 728; F. Meinhardt, 653; Henry Lohrenz, 632. The highest single score was by Kuehn, 212; Ellis, second, 198.

Mr. Hippard, of De Soto, was in town on Monday. He is quite a bowler and has invited the boys down. Mr. Hippard says they will have a good time. Mr. Frost and himself will see to the entertainment. The visit will be made soon but not until the busy planting season is over.

The Market.

Very little change has taken place in the market during the past week. Roses continue plentiful enough for all requirements. Some nice Carnot and Kaiserin are now coming in. Carnations are abundant and the quality holds remarkably well. While a few select blooms bring up to $2.50 and $3, very good stock can be had at $1, or even less. Some double violets from O. L. Dorr still come in and of very fair quality. Sweet peas remain good sellers and are a little lower, the best bringing 75 cents to $1 per hundred. Lilies and callas are in oversupply and very little call for them. The supply of outdoor bulbous stock is lessening, the Trumpet narcissi being over. N. poeticus is quite abundant. Bunches of the later tulips of good quality are seen and there is a good supply of Spanish iris. Adiantum is more plentiful. Asparagus remains about the same.

Various Notes.

Dr. R. T. Jackson, of Cambridge, read an exhaustive essay on "Peonies and Their Culture" at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club on Tuesday, May 16. There was an exceptionally good attendance and keen interest was manifested in Dr. Jackson's remarks. A number of new members were elected and indications are that a membership of 200 will be reached by the end of the year. A more extended report will appear in next week's REVIEW.

Quite a serious drought has been experienced in New England of late. Very little rain has fallen this spring and a part of the three inches of precipitation which drenched Chicago a few days ago would have been welcomed here. One or two light showers have relieved the situation a little, but a soaking rain is badly needed.

The Arnold Arboretum is particularly attractive at present. The pyruses are very fine. At the end of the week the grand collection of lilacs will be at their best. The parkways under Superintendent Pettigrew's charge are also wonder-

LILIES

Longiflorums, flowered without heat. Long, strong stems, big flowers of fine substance—great keepers. This same grower's crop of these last year was the finest which came to the Chicago market that season.

This year's lot will be even better. We shall have them from Decoration Day on. $10.00 to $12.00 per 100 and worth even more.

RED GLADIOLUS FANCY PEONIES

We can supply extra fine flowers, long stems, $1.50 doz.

We have plenty of fancy Peonies, Red, White, Pink, 75c doz.

All Cut Flowers in season at market rates. Send us your order for Decoration Day and we will treat you so well you will come again.

fully beautiful just now. The Lonicera Morrowi in Franklin park will be worth a special visit within a few days.

J. W. Duncan reports a considerable death roll among the oaks and deciduous shrubs in the park system in addition to the numerous evergreens killed. We find similar losses have been sustained in many places. Pin oaks planted ten years in North Easton are quite dead and even maples in some cases are gone.

The rhododendron exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will be held on June 3 and 4. We fear the show of these will not be up to the average, owing to damage sustained the past winter, but herbaceous plants should make a brave showing. The peony show on June 10 should prove a grand one.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society will visit Hartford, Conn., on June 19, and hold a business session there. They will also view Theodore Wirth's fine rose garden, of which so many favorable comments have been made.

Indications at this time are that outdoor flowers for Memorial day will be none too plentiful. Such useful sorts as lily of the valley, Narcissus poeticus, Darwin and Gesneriana tulips, to say nothing of lilac, are likely to be gone unless very cool weather conditions prevail.

H. N. Barrows & Son's new fern, recently certificated in Boston and now being offered to the trade, seems destined to become as popular as the Boston fern. Orders are already pouring in for it, many from distant points.

The rival baseball teams from the markets are said to be practicing and are out for blood. We would not be surprised if the victors decided to challenge the Boston American team to a series later in the season.

As we have been placed hors du combat as the result of an accident, our news is brief this week. We hope to be in closer touch with humanity and do better in our next. W. N. CRAIG.

On May 9 Mr. Craig was thrown from a wagon at North Easton, one rib on the right side being broken and two fractured. One finger was split open and one crushed, and he sustained other cuts and bruises. His own report minimizes his injuries, for he narrowly escaped being killed. We are glad to report that he is able to be out.—Ed.

FISHKILL, N. Y.—Mrs. Chas. H. Fowler, Sr., died April 24.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Carnations to peddle and lilies to burn were offered in the flower market last week, with roses about as bad, and there was considerable complaint among the retailers about things being unusually slow, although funeral work at the last of the week helped out some. However, while they had a little idle time gossip was in vogue, and you must take the following only as gossip.

Various Notes.

The stock company which is to take hold of the Lorch place has been organized and almost all of the stock taken up. Another rumor is that arrangements are under way to organize a stock company to buy the Sidney Gibbs property and put up several additional houses for cut flowers for this market. Also that next fall will see another wholesaler to sell the output of these new concerns, or at least a portion of it.

John Orth, the business manager of the McKeesport Floral Co., is a very busy fellow at this time; he finished planting his carnations last Friday night in time to get under cover from the big rain storm. He is getting the material on the ground for the construction of their new plant and will push the work right along so as to be ready with his houses when the time comes to plant inside. This company has a beautiful farm of about 150 acres, almost level and about four miles from the McKeesport store, with a good macadamized road all the way. They have the advantage of having, in Mr. Orth, a manager who is a hustler and who knows what it is to climb from the bottom of the ladder.

Geo. L. Huscroft, of Steubenville, O., is pushing the work on his new place; building material is arriving every day and he is getting up the potting sheds and other buildings first but will start on the greenhouses as soon as he gets all his material on the grounds. At present he is busy getting things in shape for his spring planting, which includes the beds around all the important stations on this division of the Pan Handle railroad.

J. B. Murdoch & Co. are pushing the erection of two new houses at their Van Emman place.

T. P. Langhans, of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., who has been slightly indisposed for some time, is taking a couple of days of needed vacation in which he will combine business and pleasure. The writer saw a box of a new style fishing hook on his desk not long ago, but I do not know whether this is the time to catch fish or not.

The bedding plant men are very much in it just at this time and say they have only one complaint, too much to do, and should we get the usual frost which comes in this section along from May 20 to 25 there will be many more plants to replace than usual.

May 12 we had hail again but, while it was quite large, it did not break any glass. If this keeps up hail insurance should have a boom.

The death of several Pittsburgers in the recent Harrisburg railroad disaster gave some of the retailers considerable funeral work the past week.

Southern peonies have been coming into this market for over a week.

Hoo-Hoo.

QUINCY, ILL.—At a recent carnival John Heller was represented by a young woman whose costume was covered by products from his greenhouses.

KEWANEE, ILL.—The heaviest hail ever known here, fell May 10, and broke 6,000 panes of 16x18 glass, at one of the plants of Hamilton & Plummer. At the other place the loss did not exceed 150 lights. They are insured in the Hail Association.

DES MOINES, IA.—R. L. Blair wishes it stated that he is in no way connected with W. L. Morris or concerned in that gentleman's bankruptcy as he fears some might suppose by the association of names in the Morris-Blair Floral Co., which is a corporation controlled by W. E. Kemble and formed at the time Mr. Kemble bought the retail stores of Mr. Morris and Mr. Blair.

IMPATIENS WANTED.

I was much interested in the note from a European paper, reprinted in the REVIEW of May 4, pertaining to Impatiens Olivieri. I see that the writer says that although this flowered at the Kew Garden for the first time only two years ago, it is already pretty generally distributed. I should like to hear from some one who can sell me seeds or plants of it.

GLENCOVE, N. Y.—The Nassau County Horticultural Society held its regular meeting on May 3. The attendance was fairly large, it now having been decided to hold the meetings in the evening. A paper on hardy flowering shrubs was read by J. F. Johnston.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., C. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 23rd annual meeting will be held at Alexandria Bay, N. Y., from June 20 to 22, 1905.

PEAS are reported to be standing the wet weather well.

THE greenhouse men in the vicinity of Chicago are reaping a good profit from cucumbers.

THERE is a new strain of greenhouse cucumber which seems to be especially meritorious this season.

SWEET corn and cucumbers for seed crops will not be planted any earlier than usual if this weather continues.

OUTDOOR green crops of home production have never been so late in coming into market at Chicago as this year.

SEEDSMEN having found a poultry department a valuable adjunct, some of them are now adding bee-keepers' supplies.

W. ATLEE BURPEE and Howard M. Earl are visiting seed growers in Europe, as is Lem. W. Bowen, of D. M. Ferry & Co.

THE forthcoming Yearbook of the Department of Agriculture will contain a paper on sugar beet seed breeding by J. E. W. Tracy.

THE heavy rains of the past week have been hard on the onion set fields in the vicinity of Chicago. At the present writing no serious damage is thought to have been done, but a continuation of rainy weather will certainly have a bad effect.

ONION seed for replanting is being called for in the marsh districts of Indiana. It is now so late in the season that replanting will not make up for the loss caused by the flooding and the crop will be shortened considerably whether the bare spots are replanted or not.

Yellow Seeded Butter Lettuce at J. M. Kimberlin & Co.'s, Santa Clara, Cal.

VISITED ST. LOUIS.—F. J. Ries, of the Goodwin-Harries Co., Chicago.

On the last boat from Bermuda there were 30,241 cases of onions and three cases of onion seed.

It was expected that field corn seed would be in brisk demand by this time, but, like many other expectations of the seedsman, this one is also switched back from the team track.

MARKET gardeners are almost discouraged by the weather conditions that prevail so generally throughout the middle west. Seeds that ought to have been planted weeks ago are still in the package, and ground to receive the seed that has been made ready as many as three or four times is still lying vacant, too wet to do anything with.

THERE is hardly a week goes by that some importer does not protest on the assessment of duty on canary seed. In the past week the board of appraisers overruled the protests of the Albert Dickinson Co., of T. W. Emerson Co., and of D. R. James & Bro., the importations having been entered at Chicago, Boston and New York respectively. The precedent which governs in this matter is the case of Nordlinger vs. the United States, published under the title of Treasury Decisions No. 24,976.

"One of the difficulties in the way of developing and keeping pure a variety of sweet corn is the ease with which it mixes with other varieties and with field corn. Sweet corn and field or hard corn, if planted at the same time, will mix at least a quarter of a mile away, and thus the sweet corn be much injured in quality. Adams Early, which is not sweet corn, will ruin sweet corn blossoming near it at the same time. But the writer has found little difficulty in avoiding the mixing by always planting sweet corn intended for seed a little earlier than any field corn is planted on his or adjoining farms."

SAMPLES OF SEED AGAIN.

The Secretary of the Treasury, who is the chief officer of customs, on May 9 sent the following notice to all custom-houses:

At the instance of the Secretary of Agriculture, it is hereby directed that, commencing July 1, 1905, and continuing for one year, two-ounce samples of all importations of 100 pounds or more of grass, clover and forage-plant seeds be prepared at the earliest practicable date after entry, and forwarded to the Seed Laboratory, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., labeled with names and addresses of consignors and consignees, name of seed as given in the invoice, and quantity of the consignment.

This is extending an order which has been in force for two years and to which there has been much opposition on the part of seedsmen.

THE SEASON'S TRADE.

The following reports on the season's business have been received:

J. M. McCULLOUGH'S SONS Co., Cincinnati, O.—In reference to our season's business, we would say it was quite late in starting this year; that is owing, of course, to the weather, but when this moderated, trade came on us with a very heavy rush and our garden seed trade has been better than it was last year, and the present outlook is for a good counter trade all during this month. Our grass seed and other business for the months of March and April was very heavy and better than former seasons.

JOHNSON & STOKES, Philadelphia, Pa.—The mail order trade in February and early in March was a disappointment as compared with 1904, but since the beginning of April has been holding up very well. Counter trade during the past month has been active. Onion sets seemed very scarce early in the season, with growers holding for high prices. This was gradually reduced until at the end of the season there is a small surplus, which moves slowly. We know of one grower who had quite a quantity which we tried to buy early in the season at $2.50 to $2.75 per bushel, who declared that he would not sell until he could get $4, and he has most of them yet. Stowell's Evergreen sugar corn and Alaska peas could probably be found if wanted.

AMZI GODDEN Co., Birmingham, Ala.—The season's business, which is now practically over with us, has been larger in volume and more profitable than any preceding one. The April frost added considerably to the profits as well as volume. Both large and small demand for certain varieties of seed has been surprises of the season. The seed that were in unusual demand this season are as follows: Dwarf beans, both wax and green pods; egg plant, canteloupe, water melon, okra, onion sets, pepper, potatoes, both Irish and sweet; pumpkins, radish, tomato, cucumber, lettuce and all sorts of grass seed and forage plants. Those that showed weakness or poor demand may be enumerated as follows: Pole beans, limas, cabbage, carrots, celery, corn, all sorts; peas, spinach, squash and turnip. The acreage in peas was greatly reduced this season and nearly every grower has lost money on the crop; consequently the demand for peas another season is bound to be poor. The bean and radish business has been extravagantly overdone and great losses are expected, some already apparent.

WOOD, STUBBS & Co., Louisville, Ky.—The seed business at Louisville this year has been considerably larger than ever before and all dealers report increased volume of business. The markets have been so erratic in prices, however, that it will be very hard to tell until inventory whether or not the profits have been increased in proportion to the volume of business. Stocks in this market are fairly well exhausted on all lines of grasses, clovers, etc., and indications are for the present season that grass seed crops in this immediate vicinity will be fairly good, though it is hard to tell until three or four weeks later what the yield will be. The onion set acreage is about the same as last year and the crop at the present time is doing well. This market on this commodity is probably as large as any in the United States, and Louisville sets are shipped from Manitoba to the Gulf. There is always such a great difference in the price between those bought in the fall and those bought in the spring that the tendency is among dealers in other parts of the country to buy their sets from Louisville in the fall and keep them until spring, which practice has proven a very profitable one, and has increased, for it is a fact that sets grown here will keep very much better than sets grown in other sections. The garden crops are at present looking very well, and indications are that the yield of potatoes, cabbage, peas and other early crops will be quite large. Wheat and grasses are doing well, and reports from all over this state as well as the south indicate enormous crops will be produced if the weather continues favorable. We have had an unusually favorable spring for doing work and the season is considerably ahead of the same period of last year and a good many years previous. Garden seed stocks are fairly well cleaned up, with the exception of peas and sweet corns.

has been good and active and fully equal to last year, but not much, if any, ahead. While we have probably handled more pounds and bushels of seed this year than we did last, yet prices were lower on many varieties. Hence in dollars and cents our business is not ahead of last year. From best information which we receive through our customers we think the spring trade is proving to be a very good one and it is our opinion that the quantity of seed of the three staple articles, peas, beans and sweet corn, that will remain unsold at the end of the season will be very small. No need of prophesying what the present year's crop will give us. It is altogether too early to consider this.

FISCHER'S
GRAND FREESIA
PURITY.

A magnificent, snowy, glistening white, of very large size and great length and strength of stem: a dozen sprays making as fine a showing as a dozen large white carnations, and can be used wherever carnations can be used for decorative purposes. A truss bears from eight to eleven buds, of which six are frequently open at one time, making an immense flower. It is of great substance and bears shipping without bruising. Stems can be cut two feet long and are as rigid as sticks. It is very prolific in bloom, producing three to four side shoots of eight buds each besides the main flower. Bulbs no bigger than dried wax beans produce as large a flower as the largest bulbs, only the stems are shorter. It propagates very freely, producing from four to eight bulbs, all of which will flower the next year.

All growers of freesia should try this queen of freesia for when once grown you will want no other.

Price for large bulbs, $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate.

Discount on 5000 and over.

Various Comment.

Business has been rather quiet of late and, of course, flowers plentiful. Carnations are cut in great quantities and prices have been very popular. Sweet peas of fine quality have been coming in from Wm. Ehmann and David Scott, of Corfu. The flower beds on our fine resident streets are brilliant with single tulips but we have not yet heard of any thieving. Our police justices soaked (excuse the slang) one or two of these miscreants pretty heavily last spring and the news spread. It is the duty of the florists to do all they can to help to put the wretches where the dogs won't bite them for a month, because nothing discourages our patrons to plant so much as losing the flowers in their beauty. Open and free to the admiration of all, as the lawns and flower beds are, no complaint is ever heard except with these tempting, handsome tulips and they are something money can't replace. The park beds are gay with pansies planted last fall.

There have not been many strangers within our gates of late, except Arnold Ringier, of Chicago, stopping over Sunday. He kindly delivered an address at the Y. M. C. A., general good advice to young men.

It is reported that W. J. Palmer & Son had a most flattering offer to dispose of the lease of their handsome store at Main and Genesee streets. They have, we think, declined the offer. It is an ideal spot for a florist and under W. J. Palmer, Jr.'s management is an ornament to the city and would be an actual loss to that part of the town.

How little we easterners know of the many progressive and up-to-date methods of doing business that the westerners devise and invent. Where we would often be stuck, as they say, the western man or woman can climb out triumphant. A much traveled and versatile drummer, but a man of great veracity, was telling me of his experience in a growing Texas town that can boast of one florist store. The drummer enters store and presents his card to the young lady clerk. "Oh, you be in the business, be ye?" Jumps up on the undressed board counter and beats a tattoo with her dainty heels. The big drummer jumps up beside her and makes a sale of fifty tuberose. Enter two society ladies and addressing L. C.: "We want two dozen American beauties." "All right. When do ye want 'em?" "Tomorrow evening." "All right, I'll send 'em 'round." The drummer thinks, where on earth will she get two dozen American Beauties? There are none within a thousand miles, and asks the question. L. C. jumps on the counter and pulls down a long box which contains several dozen Beauties, petal and color true to life, only made of cloth. "What do you charge for them?" "Twenty-five cents a dozen if they brings 'em back in good order." There, now. Some of us have fretted terribly over such an order and this is so simple, where society is not too fastidious. W. S.

BENNINGTON, VT.—W. G. Richardson has sold out to Thomas H. Phelan, who has for some years been at Gaskill's, at Warren, O.

MARLBOROUGH, N. Y.—F. A. Velie is building a carnation house 35x175. It will be run in connection with the Valley View Greenhouses now controlled by C. G. Velie & Son. The name of the firm will be changed to Velie Bros. They will have a complete establishment, two large houses containing about 10,000 square feet of glass being devoted to violets and about 15,000 feet of glass given to fancy carnations.

DECORATION DAY

We Want Your Business.

DECORATION DAY calls for more Cut Flowers than any other day in the year; more even than Christmas or Easter. Prices are low and you can make better profits than at any other holiday. But the trade comes late. You have to stock up and take a chance on the weather—it's the only chance you do take. : : : :

PEONIES

are the popular flowers for Decoration Day. Thousands upon thousands of dozens go to the cemeteries. We were pioneers of the peony cut flower industry and are Headquarters when you want good stock in quantity. No limit to our resources in this line.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Market conditions are what might be termed decidedly quiet. A few society affairs, several weddings and a sprinkling of funeral work are all that keep the retailers from going to the ball game. Perhaps the heavy supply of flowers handled by the fakirs has cut in upon the transient retail trade. Roses and carnations are in large supply and the buyer names the price. One leading store sold good roses for 25 cents per dozen and in buying wholesale if the purchaser takes 1,000 roses he receives gratis several hundred more. This method of doing business cuts in heavily on the small grower. Southern peonies have made their appearance, but are not of good quality. Japanese iris has played a prominent part in table decorations of late. Also the Miniature gladiolus, which is a very beautiful acquisition.

Various Notes.

A visit to the parks found everything looking in good order. Very few if any shrubs or trees died from the winter effects. The roadways have been cleared and the flower beds, which were planted with tulips, are about over. The various beds around the square presented a beautiful appearance. Many of the early shrubs are in full bloom, being at least two weeks earlier than last year. May 14 saw many flower beds planted with geraniums, cannas and caladiums.

A new store is to be opened as Merckyl's Flower Shop, about May 15, at the corner of Colt and Euclid avenues.

Jas. Eadie is making extensive arrangements to move his old plant from St. Clair street to the new location at East Cleveland. When added to the ten new houses, it will make a very large plant.

The F. R. Williams Co. has already planted two houses of roses, one of Chatenay and one of Bride and Maid. Two more houses have been cleaned out and benches rebuilt. Gen. MacArthur and Richmond will vie with each other for superiority.

Bate Bros. have a seedling carnation which, for size of flower and stiffness of stem, cannot be equaled anywhere. It is of Lawson color, borne on stems from two to three feet. Unfortunately it is only a spring and summer bloomer.

William Stadie, gardener for L. E. Holden for the past eighteen years, has severed his connection there and is now employed by the park department.

Visitors: S. A. Andersen and wife, of Buffalo, were here for a few days.

FOREST CITY.

PETOSKEY, MICH.—S. J. Long reports Easter business a third larger than last year although prices were just a bit lower. Harrisii and carnations were in the lead but every flower was sold. Mrs. Long has returned from Long Beach, Cal., where she spent the winter.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., E. W. Kirkpatrick, McKinney, Tex.; Vice-Pres., C. L. Watrous, Des Moines; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 29th annual convention will be held at West Baden Springs, Ind., June 14-17, 1905.

It is stated that in the south the sales of ornamental stock showed a very pronounced increase this season.

ELLWANGER & BARRY say that nothing which has been introduced recently is likely to prove so popular as the new lilacs.

EUROPEAN nursery stock is reported as being sacrificed in the New York auction rooms. Earlier in the season good prices were realized.

THE Pacific Coast Nurserymen's Association will meet at Portland, Ore., in July. At the West Baden meeting of the American Association an invitation to attend will be extended.

D. G. WIEGAND BRUSS, who has been visiting the nurseries as far west as Chicago in the interests of Van der Weijden & Co., Boskoop, Holland, sailed from New York for home on May 16.

E. W. KIRKPATRICK says that the nursery industry is developing in the southwest at a very rapid pace and that he is pleased to see that the aim almost everywhere is to produce as good stock as is possible.

THIS has been an usually long planting season for the nurserymen, but the day will probably come when each big nursery will have its own artificial cold storage plant and can hold stock dormant late in the spring.

WHILE it is possibly true that nursery advertising in mediums which reach the small planter are strongest without price quotations, still an advertisement which did not quote a price never yet brought an order without correspondence. Advertising to trade buyers should by all means quote prices.

AT Fairmont, Minn., B. E. St. John, Sr., and D. G. McKisson have been doing business as the Fairmont Nursery Co., but disagreed. Mr. St. John took steps to incorporate under the name of the Fairmont Nursery Co., and Mr. McKisson secured a temporary injunction to protect his right to use that title.

TAKING effect today, the new nursery law of West Virginia requires that every nurseryman who employs an agent in that state to take out a license and file a list of his agents, each of whom must carry a certificate from the employer showing his authority to do business for him. Penalties for false labeling and substitution are also provided.

THE SEASON'S BUSINESS.

The following summaries of the season's nursery trade have been received from well known firms:

W. & T. SMITH Co., Geneva, N. Y.—In regard to this spring's business, we would say that we feel very well satisfied with the outcome, as we have cleaned up in nearly all lines. The weather has been particularly favorable for nurserymen, both during the shipping season and the planting. There seems to be no very large supply in sight for the coming season, and, if the present demand keeps up, we see no reason why there should not be another successful year.

ALBERTSON & HOBBS, Bridgeport, Ind.—The nursery business the past season, as we look at it, has been very satisfactory, we think more so than it has been for a number of years. The supply of stock was not as large as at some other times, and has been cleaned up more closely, the surplus consisting principally of odd grades and odd varieties. Many items were exceedingly scarce and hard to find late in the season, and we think the nurserymen generally are in pretty good shape and looking forward to good summer sales for fall delivery. Planting has been very successful, so far as our observations go, and stock is starting off nicely. Do not know of any unusual features. Demand seems to have been good for almost all kinds of stock and especially heavy for ornamental stock.

D. S. LAKE, Shenandoah, Ia.—The spring trade in this section was very good. The shipping season opened up early and continued late. I think salable stock was pretty well cleaned up here in the west. Cherries especially were in great demand. Nursery stock at this point came through the winter in prime condition, and spring plantings are starting off nicely. We are having favorable rains and as far as I can see the outlook for future business is very encouraging.

CUTTING THE APPLE.

A leading European firm recently came into possession of two specimens of the Spencer seedless apple, which is also now talked of as coreless. After showing these to a large number of interested people, some of whom expressed incredulity and thought that the apples were no different from others, it was resolved to cut the apples and the affair resolved itself into something of a "function," with the attendance of a large number of nurserymen, fruit growers and representatives of the press. The cutting took place in London on the afternoon of May 2. There was a moment of breathless silence as the two specimens were quartered, then an exclamation and a laugh, for the apples had both cores and seeds. There is no information as to the source from which these specimens came, but no one familiar with all the circumstances is ready to believe that the seedless apple, to say nothing of the coreless one, is anything more than a fake.

THE BROWN-TAIL MOTH.

Trees from which the winter nests of the brown-tail moth have been removed will need no further protection against this pest during the spring or early summer. The remedy of cutting and burning the winter nests, if thoroughly carried out, is sufficient.

Where this has not been done it is still not too late to combat the pest. Arsenical poisons, such as Paris green or arsenate of lead will kill the caterpillars feeding upon sprayed leaves. Arsenate of lead is much to be preferred because the most delicate foliage is not injured by its presence and also because it remains longer upon the leaves, lessening the need of frequent spraying. Wherever the winter remedy has been neglected, it is urged that a constant watch be kept this spring for the caterpillars in order that they may still be killed by spraying.

CARNATIONS

We offer first-class stock of the finest varieties.

Variegated Lawson This variety which we are introducing this season we are sure will prove to be the very best variegated sort. Pure ivory white with delicate carmine pencilings. Mr. W. N. Craig, an authority on everything pertaining to horticulture, says that he knows that this variety will out-bloom the favorite, Mrs. M. A. Patten three to one. It has the Lawson habit and stem, and is bound to give satisfaction. $12 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Red Lawson A bright red sport of Lawson that is bound to be popular, and will be grown where Lawson is popular. $10.00 per 100; $75 per 1000.

Cardinal Bright cardinal, or crimson-scarlet. Won first prize for best 100 scarlet, first prize for best 50 carnations any color, first prize for best 50 scarlet seedlings, Chicago. $12.00 per 100; $100 per 1000.

Fiancee The queen of pink carnations; in a class by itself. Magnificent flowers, strictly fancy in every respect. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

White Lawson We consider this variety, which we introduced last season, the most profitable white carnation ever sent out. We think it will outbloom any other white two to one. It has given great satisfaction. When the flowers are left on the plants until fully developed they are much larger than Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson. We believe this will occupy among white carnations the same place that Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson does among pink carnations. Remember that we are headquarters for it. Splendid stock ready for immediate delivery. $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

F. R. PIERSON CO., Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y.

Strong Rooted Cuttings

Fred Burki Recommended as an extra free-blooming white variety and a claimant for popular favor. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Lady Bountiful A magnificent white of last season's introduction. $6.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

Daheim Dark crimson. Grand stiff stem. Calyx never bursts. Free and abundant bloomer, developing very quickly. We consider this the best all-round crimson carnation. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Mrs. M. A. Patten This grand variegated carnation has given splendid satisfaction. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

Enchantress Freest blooming, bringing highest market prices. In great demand. $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

Prosperity A magnificent fancy carnation. $3.00 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

We are now prepared to book orders for 1906 for the Coming Scarlet Victory. This is a real bread and butter variety. An early, free and abundant bloomer, with good stem; a magnificent keeper and shipper; flowers of the largest size, commanding the very highest price. This is going to be a money-maker. Orders will be filled in rotation, as received. Delivery beginning December next. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

PACIFIC COAST.

LA GRANDE, ORE.—Wm. Gilpin's greenhouse was recently destroyed by fire. The loss was almost total, the insurance being light.

GREEN APHIS.

In some localities on the Coast, this season, we are having an extra amount of green aphids to contend with on our rose bushes, especially on the plants we are cutting blooms from for market. These pesky little insects become a pest and, although they usually do not stay with us for many weeks at a time, they make it very disagreeable to handle stems of flowers on which they are congregated. It is the usual custom among dealers to recommend whale-oil soap, but I have found that water applied by either a hose or force pump is the cleanest and easiest way to get rid of all kinds of aphides. If it is possible to reach the plants with a hose, it is a very easy proposition to spray them off in a few seconds, and it will be surprising to know that the next day only about one quarter as many will be seen and on the third day just an odd insect or two can be found, and no more bother will be experienced for a couple of weeks. This is not quite as lasting as whale oil soap, but it is much easier handled, costs less and leaves the flower and stem much cleaner than it would be otherwise.

I always spray the plants late in the afternoon, when there is no danger of burning the flowers. If the plants are situated too far from a faucet to be reached with a hose, I use a bucket and spray pump with the same results. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business continues quiet, with flowers of all kinds in abundance. The weather has turned warm again and outdoor stock is plentiful. Sweet peas are extra fine this season, owing to the continued growing weather, and they are the most popular flowers at present. They cost the retailers about 75 cents per dozen bunches, but will be cheaper in a few days. Carnations are good and are selling from 15 to 35 cents per dozen wholesale. There is a good demand for fancy stock, but the shorter and weaker stemmed flowers are hard to dispose of. Roses are in the same condition. There is an overproduction of the medium grade, and extra Beauties and Maids are in short supply. L. longiflorum is selling at $1.50 to $2 per dozen. Valley brings $3 per hundred. Peonies are plentiful and sell at from $3 to $4 per hundred. Maidenhair fern is much better than it has been for some time. Smilax is very scarce. The dealers are waiting for the school commencements and Decoration day and from appearances there will be plenty of trade in a few days.

Various Notes.

A visit to the grounds of D. O. Mills, at Millbrae, shows many improvements in the planting line in prospect.

There was little sale for the Easter paper bells shown in the local stores. The florists have put them away for Christmas decorations.

Sievers & Co. are in line with a splendid showing of new pelargoniums, of which this firm makes a specialty.

Park Fellows, of Oakland, is cutting some fine orchids.

A Japanese firm has opened a retail store on the grounds leased from R. Turnbull, at Fruitvale, Mr. Turnbull having retired from the florist business.

James Miller, of East Oakland, the veteran flower-pot maker, celebrated his golden wedding last week.

Clarke Bros., of Fruitvale, will plant heavily of Boston Market carnation the coming season. It has done remarkably well with them.

Thos. O'Neill, of Haywards, will take a month's vacation in Oregon. He starts in a few days.

Landscape gardeners are much in demand in Berkeley. There are at present over fifty residences in the course of construction in the neighborhood of the University. G.

3041 Baker St., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

want to sterilize it. What size pipe should I use, $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch or 1-inch? How far apart should the pipes be placed? How deep should they be buried? I can rent a steam boiler of almost any size. Will one of six or eight horse-power furnish steam enough or would a smaller one do? Can I sterilize one-half of one of these houses at a time? What should the thermometer indicate laid on the surface of the soil? How long should the heat be maintained? A. L. H.

The best size to use will be 1-inch pipe placed twelve inches apart and buried in the soil twelve inches. A steam boiler of six horse-power should be amply large enough. I think half a house at a time would be the best way to proceed. The soil should be brought to a heat of 212 degrees, but a thermometer laid on the surface of the soil would hardly give the correct indication; better get what is known as a bottom heat thermometer and insert it in the soil just deep enough so that the mercury can be seen when it rises to the required heat. This will give you the correct temperature to which your soil has been brought. When once your soil has been brought to 212 degrees, there is no necessity of maintaining the heat for any length of time, as any nematodes in the soil should be killed by the time that heat is attained.

Regarding the mealy bug, though the sterilizing would kill any in the soil, there is sure to be some of these harboring in the crevices of the woodwork of the house and some other means should be adopted for their destruction. The best method to destroy them is to give all the woodwork of the house, and also brickwork, if there is any, a good coat of paint. I have found this the best way of cleaning a house of this pest, but the work must be thoroughly done to make sure that all crevices are covered. If the house does not require painting, kerosene can be used with good effect, painting everything over closely with it. This will kill all the mature insects and also destroy the eggs.

Hydrocyanic acid gas might be employed for their destruction, but this would only kill the live insects and would not reach those in the egg stage unless successive applications were given to catch them as they hatched. The length of time required for hatching varies according to the temperature of the house. In a cold house they will lie dormant all winter and hatch out in spring, after the temperature of the house has been kept anywhere from 50 to 60 degrees for a week or two, so that it is hard to tell just at what intervals the gas should be applied to be most effective. The surest way is painting. W. S. CROYDON.

WASHINGTON.

Various Notes.

An occasional spurt in society and funeral work keeps things moving. We are having summer weather. Peonies and outdoor roses are in bloom. The railway appliance exhibition livened things for the past ten days, a good many palms and vases of cut flowers being used to decorate the booths. A. Gude & Bro. had 250 palms and bay trees rented. J. R. Freeman, Z. D. Blackistone and J. L. Loose also had a good many plants there. Stock is plentiful. Roses are showing the effect of the hot weather.

A. Gude & Bro. entered their single horse delivery wagon at the Chevy Chase horse show and captured the second prize. Fred Miller, of Gude & Bro.'s, has gone to the Lewis and Clark exposition at Portland, Ore., for five months. He will be at the old stand in the fall.

The boys here are getting in good shape for the immortelle flag contest. Otto Baure will be one of the competitors for the prize. Several out-of-town florists have been heard from. All communications for this prize should be addressed to Wm. F. Gude, president of the Florists' Club, for the present. RAMBLER.

Bowler's Notice.

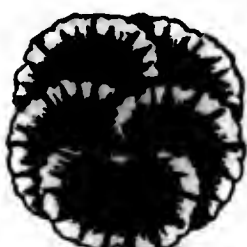

F. H. Kramer, chairman of the committee which has in charge the ladies' bowling contest at the approaching S. A. F. convention would like to hear from all teams which will be represented here in August. The information is needed as to teams and individuals so that arrangements can be made. The prizes will be numerous and the contest will be a record-breaker. Mr. Kramer states that there are already two prizes, one to the value of $50 and the other $40. His address is 916 F Street, Washington.

WORLD'S FAIR AWARDS.

The Louisiana Purchase Exposition Company has not yet adjusted its differences with the National Commission. In this connection L. E. Graham, secretary of the national body, said in New York, May 11:

If the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Company is issuing certificates of award they are neither legal nor official and are not worth the paper they are written on if they do not bear the name of the president of the National Commission. I am told they do not.

SADDLE RIVER, N. J.—John G. Esler reports that the Florists' Hail Association now insures upwards of 22,000,000 square feet of glass.

DENVER.

The Market.

The weather has been so uncertain the past two weeks that it might be said it was unfavorable for the flower buyer. Still no complaint has been heard from the retailers. There has been no scarcity of stock, and prices remain about normal. Carnations are in plentiful supply with the exception of red. They retail for from 50 cents to $1.50 per dozen, but these prices are likely to advance slightly for Decoration day, as the supply is then always short of the demand. American Beauties are coming in quantity and the quality good. Long stems bring $6 to $7 per dozen, while the shorter and medium lengths can be had at from $2 to $5. The receipts of Brides and Maids have been rather larger than the requirements, the white stock cleaning up perhaps better on account of the demand for funeral material. A very large stock of Liberty is being cut and quality is exceptionally fine. Sweet peas are plentiful and of good quality and color.

Owing to the exceptionally cold spring it is almost impossible to make any announcement on the part of the retailers, regarding the flower supply for Decoration day. Other than roses and carnations, the prospect is that there will be lilacs and snowballs. If the weather is warm red peonies will be obtainable, but the supply of pink and white is doubtful.

Banquet Decoration.

The principal event of the week was the banquet tendered to President Roosevelt on his way east after his hunting trip in this state. It was held in the Brown Palace Hotel and was an elaborate affair. About 500 covers were laid. The hotel was elaborately decorated with bunting and flags by the Daniels & Fisher Stores Co. The decorations on the tables were by the Park Floral Co. and consisted of long Beauties in tall vases and in the center of the lateral table were mounds of Lawson carnations. Apple blossoms were used on the chandeliers. The effect as a whole was most pleasing and evoked much favorable comment. The President complimented the guests by delivering a memorable address in which he outlined what would be the policy of the administration regarding railroad legislation. The floral craft was represented at the banquet by Mr. Valentine, who reports that the President's address was received with the greatest enthusiasm.

Various Notes.

Elitch's Gardens, a famous resort, is being greatly improved for its opening May 28. One of the best features will be the special floral decorations in honor of the various bodies which hold national conventions in Denver this year. There will be special designs for the Grand Army, the Epworth League, the electric light men, and all other organizations. More than 60,000 plants will be used in the construction of these emblematical beds. The floral and electrical display will be larger and better than ever, which is saying a good deal.

The Denver business men's excursion to Boise City, Idaho, was a success, covering over 2,100 miles, visiting some twenty cities and towns in the interest of Denver trade. The Park Floral Co. was represented by E. S. Kennedy, whose firm saw to it that each gentleman had a fresh carnation or rose for his button-hole every morning.

The bowling season closed last Monday night with a very hot finish, as team No. 2, captained by Phil. Scott, was tied for first place with team No. 3, captained by R. S. Mahan, Scott's team winning first place. The growers and retailers had contributed some $100 in prizes, the distribution of which has not yet been decided upon.

CAMBRIDGE CITY, IND.—George Peet, of Indianapolis, has taken a half interest in the greenhouse establishment of his son here. The plan is to considerably enlarge the glass and the business.

DECATUR, ILL.—M. Z. Kellogg, who recently succeeded to the business of the Decatur Horticultural Co., is planning to add two new greenhouses this summer, one for carnations and one for chrysanthemums to be followed by spring stock. Besides the greenhouse, Mr. Kellogg has about ten acres devoted to market gardening.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Rain without end has been our lot for the past week. The downpour in that time has amounted to over seven inches. The storms were accompanied by heavy wind and several of the growers reported slight damage on broken glass.

Business is somewhat better than at last report, but is nothing to brag of. The amount of stock coming in is still much larger than is necessary to take care of the demand. Consequently the fakirs and the ash can are getting a good batch of old stock. Roses show the effects of the bad weather and have a mid-summer look. Carnations are better and have good keeping qualities. Brides and Maids are in heaviest supply. Beauties and other red roses continue to sell best and bring the fairest prices. Callas and Harrisii are still in large supply, and sell none too well. Outdoor flowers are abundant. Some fine irises are offered but move slowly. Sweet peas are none too plentiful and sell pretty well. "Green goods" are scarce for a change and good ferns are especially in demand.

Various Notes.

During the severe storm of last Friday a propagating house on the range of Sunderbruch & Meier, was blown in and was almost a total loss. Several other firms suffered loss of glass but not to any great extent.

Many of the growers are very busy with bedding and the demand for this class of work is very heavy this year. Hanging baskets, too, are being filled by the hundreds and sell well.

Popp Bros. are in with their fine pot plants as usual and report trade as being fine.

R. D. Ruttle and Miss Cronin, retail florists of Covington, Ky., report a heavy demand for funeral work.

R. A. Betz is in Washington Court House to help out Mr. Buck, who has bought the greenhouses and store formerly owned by Ed. Helfrich. Mr. Buck also operates a plant at Greenfield, O.

The last meeting of the Florists' Society was called off at the last moment, owing to the inability of the officers to be present. The next meeting will be held June 10, when the nomination of officers for the ensuing year will be made.

There is a rumor going about that D. Rusconi and George & Allan are going to invite the florists to a special meeting at the latter's greenhouses. It is said that there will be all kinds of good things edible and desirable on hand, to say nothing of bowling, baseball, dancing, etc. We are all in hope that the rumor will prove true.

Edward Ellison, of Clifton, who has been growing the best La France roses seen in this vicinity for the last eighteen or more years, is about to turn his whole place over to carnations. He will also go into asters pretty heavily.

NOTES ON THE PEONY.

Character of Soil.

Herbaceous peonies are mostly of the easiest cultivation. Full sunshine, or at least a good exposure to the sun is necessary, as they do not thrive in shade. The roots of trees or large shrubs are objectionable, especially elms, maples and lilacs, as absorbing the nourishment and water needed for the full development of the peonies. A location protected from the force of the wind is desirable. Peonies will stand great variation as regards soil, but a heavy rather than a light sandy soil suits them best. Being strong feeders and vigorous growers, they should be given deep cultivation, eighteen inches to two feet, even more is recommended by some, but I have had good results with two feet. An abundance of barnyard manure should be worked well into the soil especially before planting. If this manuring can be done some months previously so much the better. Cow manure is best when available. Peterson says that where propagation is the feature desired peonies form more and better roots in light rather than heavy soil.

Where the soil is sandy an addition of clay would doubtless be an advantage. In a heavy clay, which is the condition in my garden, a free use of sifted coal ashes and leaf-mold dug into the soil works wonders in ameliorating and improving its tilth. Coal ashes contain little potash and add practically nothing of chemical fertilizing ingredients to the soil and nearly the same may be said of leaf-mold, but both improve its mechanical condition, which is of the very first importance for successful plant growth. Sand and road scrapings where available are of course excellent for lightening heavy soil; stress is laid on coal ashes simply because their value is not usually appreciated and in small gardens it is a convenient available material, usually a waste product to be got rid of. In the autumn cleaning of the streets in Cambridge the city carts collect great quantities of leaves which they are very glad to dump on the grounds of willing citizens. These in a single year, by turning once, make a fine, well decomposed leaf-mold ready to dig into the garden, and give room for a new lot of leaves.

When to Plant.

It is emphatically best to plant peonies in the fall. In the spring they may be transplanted if necessary; but it is undesirable to purchase stock at that time. Frequently plants purchased in the spring will not appear above ground the first year, as may happen with excellent stock coming from a distance, also in spring there is more chance of the death of some plants than with fall planting. If plants are received in autumn too late for fall planting, as is sometimes the case in importing, or if they are in questionable condition, if small enough, it is best to pot them and plunge the pots in a cold frame for the winter. In spring they can then be planted out without disturbing what roots they have made.

Peonies may be left in the ground without transplanting some eight or ten years, but longer is undesirable if best results are to be attained. It is sometimes stated that peonies may be left in the ground almost indefinitely but this is a mistake if good results are expected. The finest flowers are to be had on moderate sized, well grown plants. If plants are left too long in the ground they sometimes die out in the center.

Propagation.

For purposes of propagation plants may be advantageously taken up more frequently, every two or three years, divided with a large, sharp knife, so as to leave at least one bud with a portion of the root. Peony roots are stiff and unyielding as well as brittle, so that they are very apt to be broken seriously in dividing. Harrison says, "Let them lie in the shade a few hours and wilt. This toughens them and does not hurt them a particle. You can immediately restore them to their plumpness by putting them in wet moss, or keeping in or planting in moist earth. This is very important." I tried Harrison's method last autumn, only I left them out of ground for several days in cool weather. When the roots become somewhat flaccid and yielding instead of rigid and brittle, they can then be easily divided without injury, even to solid old clumps. They will regain their original plumpness in a few hours' exposure in a damp medium.

The small plants after division may be set out in nursery rows, two feet apart, the plants being about ten to fifteen inches apart in the row, according to size. In cutting up, some roots will be broken off and these may be planted with the rest as more or less will grow from adventitious buds starting under these conditions. Actual observations of what proportion will grow from adventitious buds would be desirable, but do not exist as far as I am aware.

In propagating if the plants are choice and are cut very fine it is desirable to set a frame over them the first winter. As Peterson says, herbaceous peonies of choice varieties may be propagated by grafting. This method is practiced to some extent; but I think is most undesirable for herbaceous plants. Grafting is not expected in such plants and if practiced endless confusion in varieties may occur from the growth of adventitious buds from the stock. If this is done they should be grafted on officinalis stock or some other distinct species, so that shoots from the stock, which are likely to develop, will be strikingly distinct from those developed by the scion.

F. L. Temple in 1889 suggested the method of propagating herbaceous peonies by heaping up fine rich soil over the crowns; under such conditions he found, by an accidental experiment, that roots and buds developed on the stems, which could then be cut off, leaving the crown intact. Timme recommends this method of deep burial as a means of propagation.

Mallett in England also recommends this method of propagation, as he says, "Cover the stools with eight inches of light soil made firm; growths will push through this in spring readily enough and will flower well, but in September the resting buds will be found on independent stems six inches long and with a mass of roots at their bases. These should be detached and planted forthwith, and the old soil cleared from the stools to admit warmth, when they will develop many buds hitherto latent, and which they always have in reserve. These will flower in the course of the season. The flowering strength of the stools is but little impaired, but a vigorous thinning of several weakly growths may be necessary in the second season. Strong double peonies will often form three or four resting buds on one rooting axis. These may be removed individually with a portion of the stem and its roots attached, potted, and grown on in a little warmth till planting time to encourage further root action."

If this method proves as satisfactory as has been expressed, it may well be a most important means of propagating peonies. As Temple suggested, it would probably be best to fill in the earth gradually rather than the whole depth at the start, but this is a matter for determination. Leaf-mold being fine, light and retentive of moisture, would it seems be good material for covering.

Peonies may be transplanted or dug up for division to best advantage late in August or in September, rather than in October or November, as the roots then have a chance to become established before cold weather. The crowns may be set about three inches below the surface; deeper planting is undesirable. For permanent planting peonies should be set three feet apart, or if there is plenty of room four feet is none too much. If set closer it would be difficult to get between the plants without injuring the blossoms.

Character of Plantation.

For a limited number of peonies scattered planting is desirable, as allowing for the full development of each individual plant without loss of space. When grown close together the blossoms during a heavy rain or wind are apt to be beaten down and entangled with the flowers and foliage of adjacent plants. Where considerable quantities are grown beds are doubtless best, thus having all together, a convenience in watering and other cultural treatment; also the effect of mass in a bed is very fine.

Plants should be set three feet apart each way in a bed, or better four feet between rows if there is room to spare. Never having had this luxury of space, I can affirm that three feet will do very well. Beds six or nine feet wide and of any convenient length cut in grass and carrying two or three rows of peonies respectively are very attractive and easily got at for handling or inspection. Such beds are good for roses, phloxes, irises or vegetables, which may be grown in rotation with peonies when they have to be taken up. Beds of this character are used extensively in the Botanic Garden of Harvard University.

Fertilizers.

A peony well grown, and the same variety grown poorly or with average culture, are very different. Unless really well grown one does not know what are the possibilities of this fine flower. Disbudding distinctly improves the quality of remaining flowers, especially on the larger varieties. In some varieties, however, where profusion of bloom is a feature, they may be left to advantage. As stated by A. H. Fewkes, in an excellent article on peony culture, the lateral buds should be removed as soon as they are large enough to handle, so as to throw all the strength into the leading bud. As he also says, proximity to a hose is an important feature when possible in planning the position of a peony bed, for the free use of water in the growing season is a great aid in producing fine flowers. Liquid cow manure, or other liquid manure used during the growing season promotes a vigorous growth and correspondingly superior flowers. Water from a cesspool is excellent. Sheep manure or other fine manure stirred into the soil about the peonies in spring works well, being washed down to the roots by rain or watering. In the late fall it is desirable to put four or five inches of barnyard manure above the crown of each plant. This may be done after the tops are cut off and the ground freezes hard; the manure being dug in in spring.

Delicate colored peonies lose their color more or less in strong sunshine, so that for very best results they may be shaded to advantage. By shading I have retained delicate shaded pinks in flowers, which were entirely lost in flowers of the same variety grown a few feet away, but not shaded. Of course opening flowers in the house has the same effect as shading, saving the delicate colors, and some of the finest blooms one sees are flowers thus opened off the plant.

Cutting.

Peonies have a great mass of petals, at least the double ones, so that when picked there is a large surface for loss of water. Such being the fact, it is important that they be put into water as quickly as possible after cutting. The best method is to carry a pail or can of water into the garden and put the flowers immediately into water, not even waiting to cut a second bloom. Experiment has demonstrated that flowers thus put into water will outlast flowers kept even a few minutes without water. This is especially important for flowers that are to be exhibited, or shipped to a distance. When a peony is on the plant there is a continuous flow of sap to the flower. On cutting, this flow being shut off, from the suction thereby inaugurated it is quite probable that air particles are sucked in. If this is true, such air particles would tend to obstruct the vessels, interfering with the succeeding flow of water.

If cut peonies are to be shipped they had best be kept ten or twelve hours in water in a cool place, when they become surcharged with water and travel vastly better than fresh cut blooms. The same principles as regards cutting doubtless would apply to most other flowers as well.

The Bee is Like The Prosperous Florist, NEVER IDLE.

The bee is the first that takes advantage of the great work Godfrey Aschmann, the never-resting florist, and his people have done since Easter. They are awarming and enjoying their life. "O, Aschmann's flowers taste so sweet," the bees say; "we cannot stop, we have a big field to work in. 100,000 of the choicest plants; every nook and corner full. Let us harvest."

Secure bargains now and for Decoration Day. Please note our lowest prices. Plants out of 4-inch pots at $7.00 per 100 in the following varieties:

Geraniums, S. A. Nutt, the best double crimson; La Favorite, the best double white; Mme. Thibaut, double pink; Le Pilote, double scarlet, and some other mixed colors.

Ageratum, dwarf blue. Heliotropes, Begonia Vernon, 5,000 of the dark red, and Erfordil, pink, 3-inch, $5.00 per 100. Scarlet Sage Clara Bedman, 3-inch, $5.00. Periwinkle, or Vinca variegata, $10.00 per 100; 2 1/2 to 3-inch, $5.00 per 100. Nasturtiums, all colors. Ivy Geraniums, Cobaea Scandens, $8.00 per 100. Fuchsias, 5-inch, $1.50 per dozen.

Dracena Indivisa, broad leaved, imported, 30-inches high; 50 per cent home grown, 5 to 6 1/2-inch pots, 25c each.

Hydrangea Otaksa for planting out; some have buds and some not, 6-inch pots, 25c to 35c each.

The following is a list of small plants out of 2 1/2-inch pots.

Coleus, Golden Queen, Verschaffeltii, Queen Victoria and fancies. Petunia Inimitable Dwarf, California Giant, all in 3-inch, at $5.00 per 100. Phlox Drummondii; Verbenas; have 10,000 Sweet Alyssum Little Gem; Lobelia, dwarf and trailing; Cuphea; Parlor Ivy.

I also have a new Variegated Carnation to which I have not yet given a name. Vigorous growth, heavy stems. The odor is like a real clove. Everybody who has seen it is crazy over it. 3-inch pots at 15c and 2 1/2-inch, 10c each.

Don't forget that I am the Moonvine grower of the land. Only A. W. Smith's Hybrid Moonvines, (Ipomaea Noctiflora) is exclusively the one I grow and is the only true Moonvine in America, as Mr. Smith has the world wide reputation of growing the best Moonvine seed. Please bear in mind that this is no morning glory like so many sell for Moonvines but the pure white waxy moon flowers as large as saucers. 2 1/2-inch pots, $5.00 per 100; 3-inch pots, $7.00 per 100; 4-inch pots, $10.00 per 100. Nicely staked up.

Araucaria Excelsa just arrived from Belgium per steamer Etonian, May 1. First consignment 3,000; 2,000 more coming by next steamer; grown for me under contract by an Araucaria Specialist in Belgium. I must say to the benefit of my customers, that I never before received for the money so nice and strong araucarias as I did this time. I herewith quote you special prices on them. Just look.

We can't do much with a "JUST WON'T GROWER"

Who KNOWS that ALL tobacco powder is the same cigar and tobacco store trash he gets at his cigar store or from his seedman and JUST WON'T ask for our booklet, that is full of the sayings of his fellows, that read:—

H. A. S. Co.—I have been using the Black Stuff Fine Tobacco Powder on my violets and it has given me great satisfaction.
FRED KIEFER, Northport, L. I.

H. A. S. Co.—I have no green fly. The Fumigating Kind Tobacco Powder is safe, clean and sure; a powerful fumigator.
CHAS. PETERSON, E. Liverpool, Ohio.

He JUST WON'T believe that 95 per cent of all the growers that send for our free five-pound trial sample bags of THE FUMIGATING KIND (for fumigating) and THE BLACK STUFF FINE (for sprinkling), have purchased not once, but again and again, after the trial. WHY BE A JUST WON'T, when you can have these free trial sample bags; yea, two of them if one won't do. All we ask is for you to pay the express charges on them. ASK NOW, don't be a JUST WON'T.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business the past week was very good, some large funeral orders being filled, which kept stock moving lively. Roses are beginning to feel the effect of those warm, bright days. Shipped stock is very poor, and unless quickly moved does not last long. Carnations also are showing the effects of bright weather and are losing color, and are weak necked. Lawsons are losing color, but are otherwise all right. Enchantress, Bradt, Prosperity and Mrs. Higinbotham are coming smaller and are not quite up to the mark. Sweet peas are in fine condition and are bringing good prices. The near approach to Memorial day is creating a demand for cemetery plants and good prices are being realized.

Various Notes.

Will Bridgeland, foreman for R. S. Brown & Son, gives a very flattering report of the wholesale and retail business. With a greatly increased force, this firm has all it can do.

W. J. Barnes reports business as very good. He is putting in extra efforts in producing something good for the flower show.

Mrs. Harvey, until recently manager for the Alpha Floral Co., will open a store on Walnut street in a few weeks.

The committee on the premium list for the flower show has nearly completed its work.

Miss Julia Dalley, sister of Miss M. Dalley, will sail next week for Europe for her summer vacation.

Mrs. Ralph Shiras has accepted the position of manager of the cut flower department for the Kansas City Floral Co.

Alex Kerr, foreman for E. A. Humfeld, reports business as all that could be desired, and his force is working overtime.

Al Broman is sending in some nice sweet peas and reports everything as all right in Independence.

A. Reinisch, superintendent of Topeka parks, was a visitor last week.

MADISON, N. J.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society held its regular meeting on May 10. On call of President Heeremans, several members came up with exhibits of both plants and flowers. President Heeremans staged a dozen magnificent specimens of calceolarias, grown in 6-inch and 8-inch pots. The committee on exhibits gave them a certificate of merit. By request of members present Mr. Heeremans promised to read a paper on their culture at our next meeting.

A vase of carnations in variety from R. Vince was remarkably good for this time of the year and received cultural commendation. Well done specimens of begonia and variegated hydrangea were shown by Mr. Mülmichell, gardener to C. A. Work, and received cultural commendation. A vase of mixed chrysanthemum blooms, something odd for this time of the year, was put up by C. H. Totty. Baby Ramblers in bloom from John Frazer, gardener for Gustave E. Kissell, were shown in fine form. The possibilities of this rose as a pot-plant were manifest. Clucas & Boddington Co. sent by special messenger sixteen varieties of hardy herbaceous perennials in bloom. They were interesting and instructive, just the things that the florists on private estates need at this season of the year.

Robt. M. Schultz and Andrew McKendry were elected members, and Harry Green, David Pierson and Wm. McCoy were proposed for membership.

Our tenth annual flower show will be held in the assembly rooms, Madison, October 26 and 27. The schedule can be secured later on, from E. Regan, secretary, Morristown, N. J. E. R.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

Mrs. Dunkley, who died on April 23, was the widow of the late Joseph Dunkley, and was born in Grand Rapids, July 4, 1847. She married Mr. Dunkley in 1878. They had seven children, five of whom are living. They are Myra, Clara, Laura, Charlie and Benjamin. There are also two stepsons, Robert, of Grand Rapids, and Samuel, president of the Dunkley Celery Co., Kalamazoo. Mrs. Dunkley was long a member of the First Presbyterian church. She had been ill since February. The cause of her death was heart failure. The business will be continued under the same name.

JOLIET, ILL.—James Hartshorne has removed the flower stand from the Wilcox Spot Cash Store to a down town store of its own.

is equipped with adjustable roller hangers, circular steel ratchet arms, automatic safety locks which combine durability, neatness and ease of operation. By using our combination of adjustable roller hangers and steel ratchet arm, the strain upon the pipe shafting is reduced to such a great extent that no expensive double strength or special fitted pipe is required. Houses 165 ft. long are now successfully operated from the end with single machines, which are furnished with or without pipe shafting. Send for catalogue and references. Round "Burnham" Boilers

Study the illustration on this page, and note these Good Points:

1.—Cast in one piece above the base, eliminating rust and leakage and making it the easiest to install.

2.—The largest heating surface possible in a boiler of this size.

3.—All surfaces exposed to flame have water on the opposite side, making warping or burning out impossible.

4.—A deep fire-pot, giving space above the coals for perfect combustion of gases and floating carbon and sufficient room for fuel to insure the minimum of attention.

6.—Cleaning doors, affording access to every part liable to become fouled.

7.—Adapted for hard or soft coal, coke or wood.

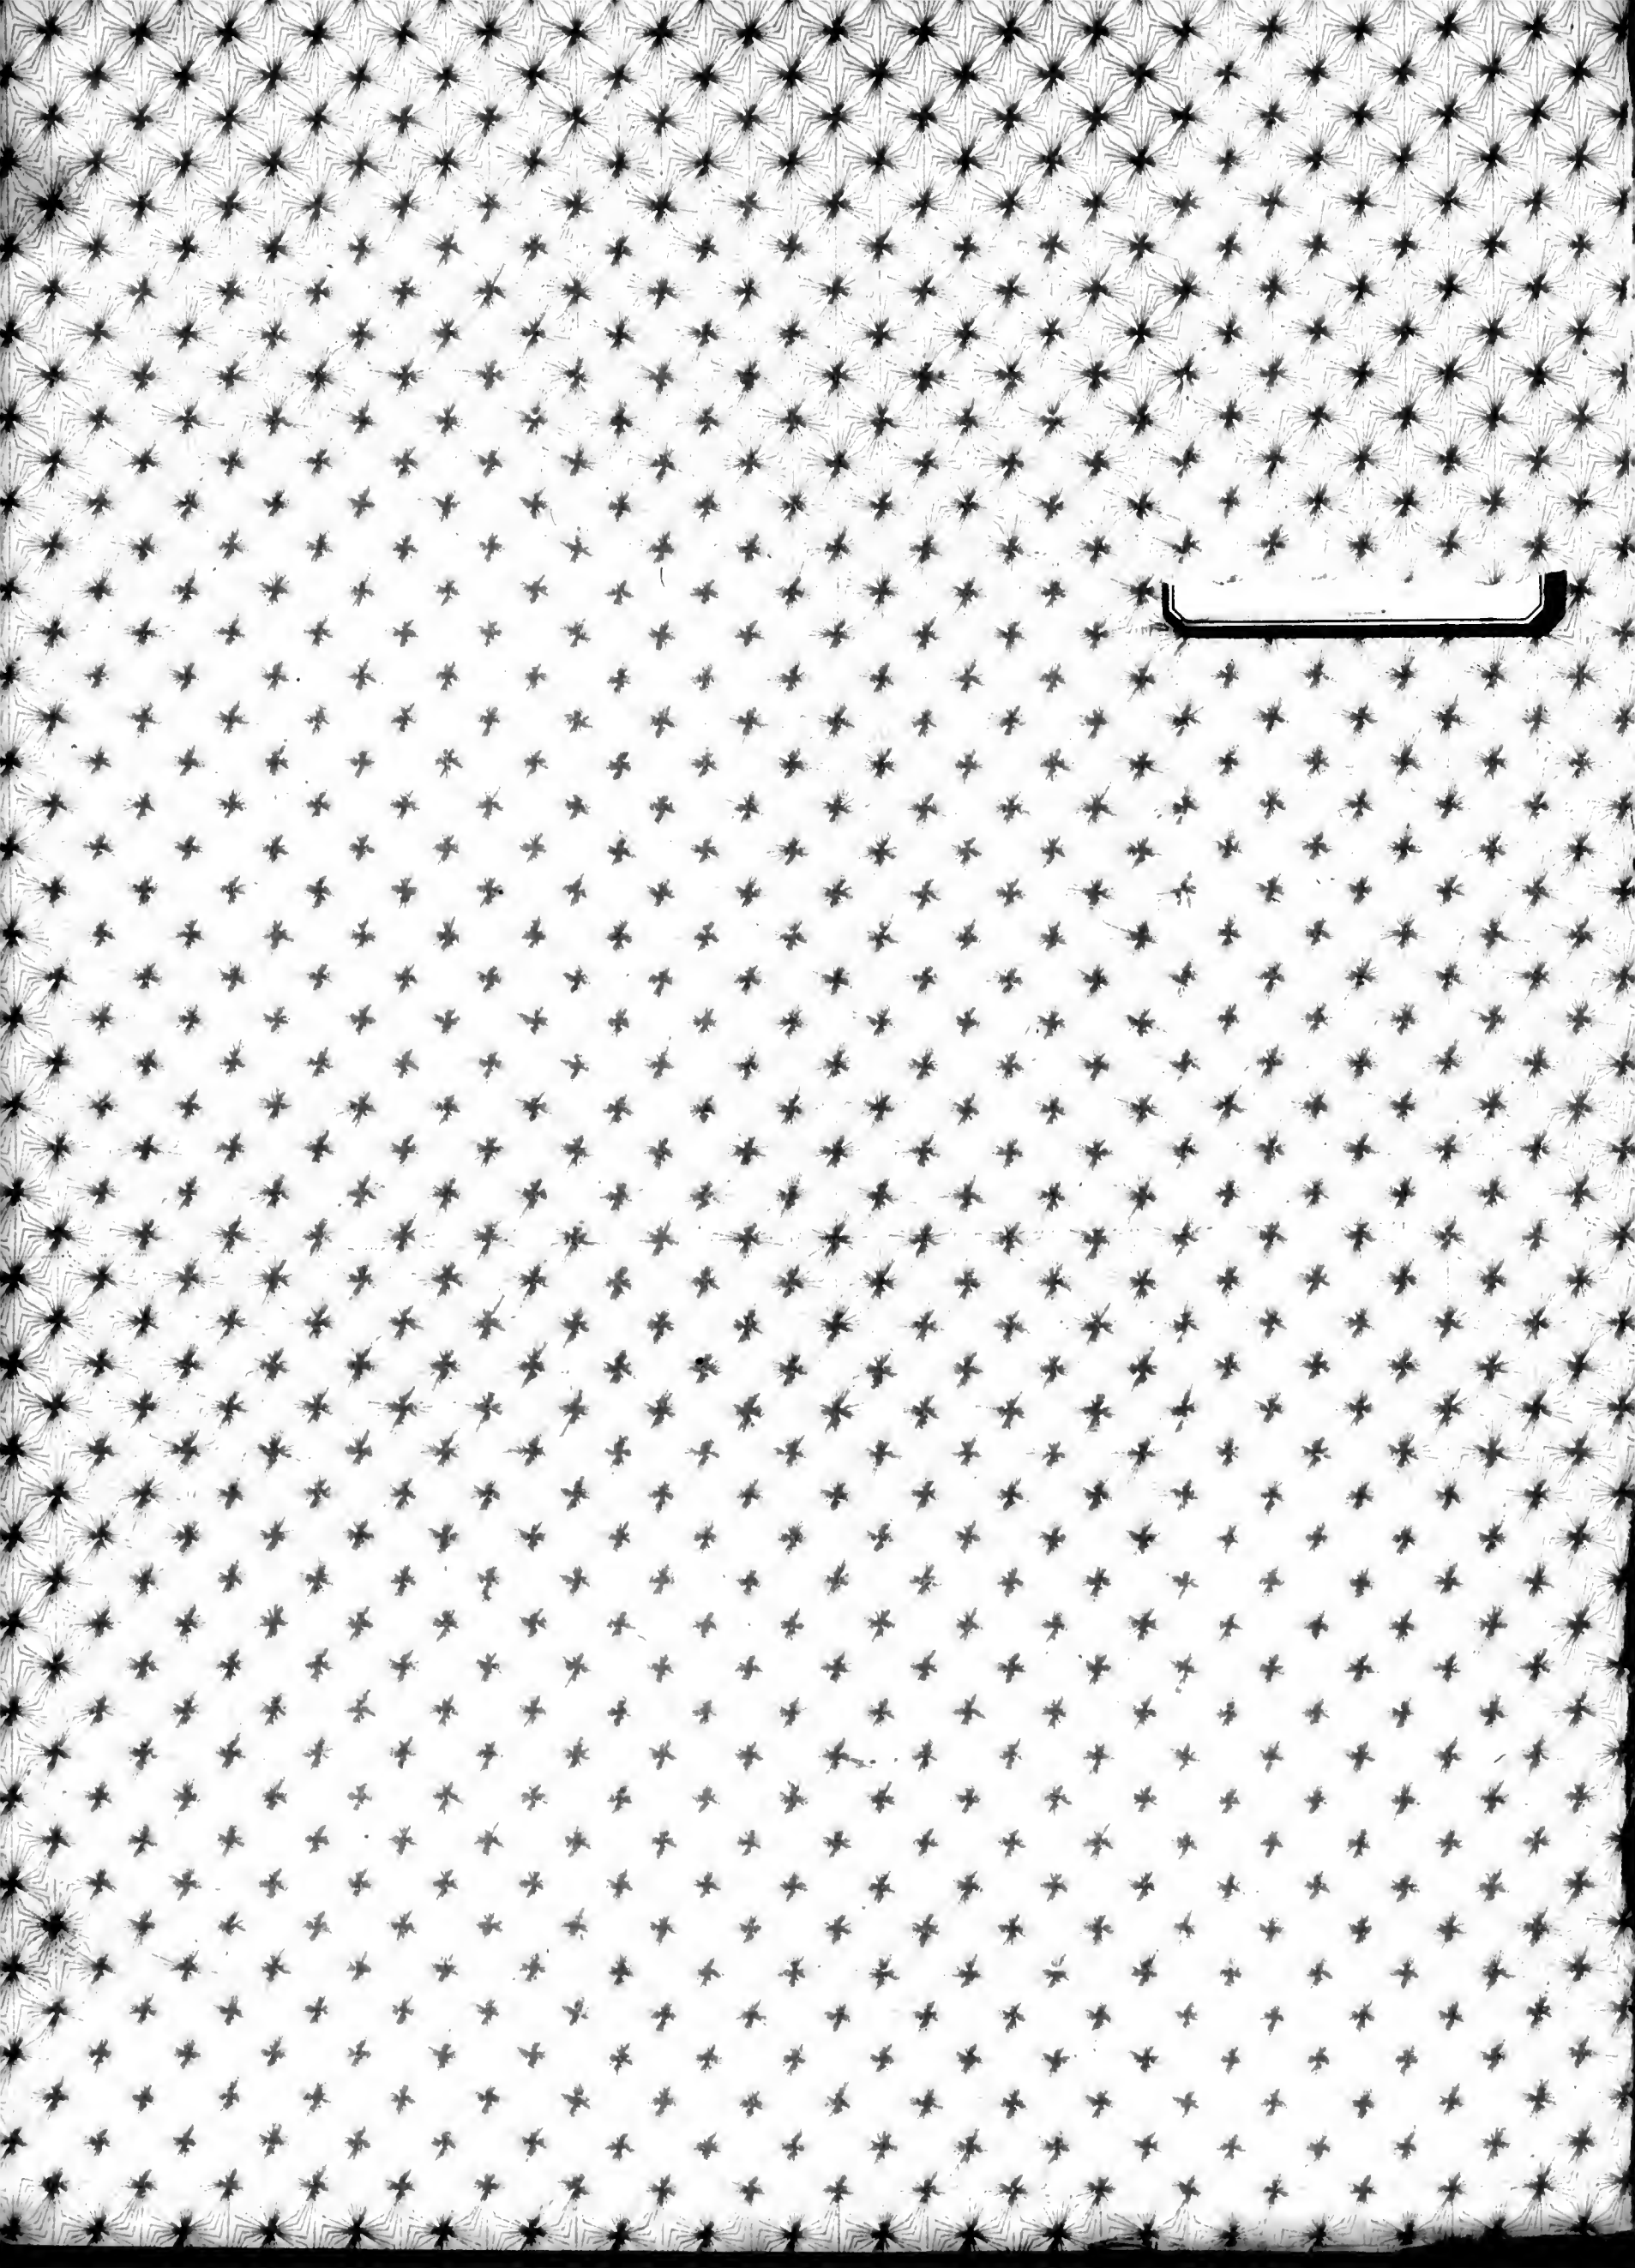

8.—May be used for hot water or steam. In the latter case an ample steam dome is provided.
